ROSAMOND.

In the fragrant bright June morning, Rosamond the queen of girls,
Down the marble door-steps litters, radiant with her silvery curls;
O'er the greenward, through the garden, passes to the river's brink,
Throws away an old bouquet, and wonders if 'twill float or sink.
Then returning through the garden, round and round the lawn she goes,
Singing as she cuts fresh roses—she herself her world's life rose;
In her dainty morning robe, and straw hat shading half her face,
Picturesque in form and feature, lovely in her youth and grace;
In her hand a little dagger, sharp and glittering as the sun,
Rifling hearts of thorny bushes, cutting roses one by one;
Pick and white and blood-red crimson, some in bud and some full-blown—
There through lawn and grove and garden sing she to herself alone;
Softly sings in broken snatches some old songs of Spain to France,
As she holds her roses of all hues and tints, with side-long glance,
Shifting groups of forms and colors, for a painter's eye hath she,
And all beauty pleaseeth her, as artistic-like and fancy-free,
Now she enters her boudoir, and sets her roses in a vase;
There for seven days and nights their bloom and fragrance fill the place—
When the petals droop and fade she'll bear them to the river's brink,
Singing, throw them on the waves and wonder if they'll float or sink;
Will she bear away to-night a bunch of lover's rose heart's—pray,
Send them in her vase a week—then throw them with her flowers away;
The vicissitudes of the life of a circuit-preacher, ward touchingly illustrated a few days since in the case of a modest young lady, who, on being asked where was her native place, replied: "I have none; I am the daughter of a Methodist minister."
Idleness in hard work for those who are not used to it, and dull work for those who are.

Hill that day; one of the best days of the early summer; the sky as blue as sapphires; the grim mountain in the carressing sunlight looking warm and golden. Barry sat on a mossy branch, looking thoughtfully down into the valley, and plucking hard at his mustache (not a good sign in Barry) while Thorn repaired the broken lace of Hetty's trim little boot. Every body else, hooplless and in huge hats, were frights, while Hetty, in peasant waist and blue flannel blouse and skirt, had never looked lovelier. It was a true stroke of her art, or rather her genius, that costume. The men thought it unstudied, and raved about beauty unadorned whereas she had never arranged a ball toilet with more care. The women knew it, but they could only gnash their teeth in silence, lest they should be called jealous, poor, things! and in the flush of this little triumph Hetty had been more audacious about her flirtations than ever before. And so Barry sat apart, eyeing her gloomily and plucking at his mustache as aforesaid.

Meantime Hetty wandered on with Thorn yet further. Barry's look was not lost on her, but she had decided that he was a clod, and clods are to trample on. They wandered on further and yet further, Hetty and Thorn, to see the coming view, or what was around the next rock, to the very crest of the hill. Here was a seat for Hetty, tired with climbing—a little nest hollowed out of the rock, at the foot of a pine-tree. From it the road looked a mere ribbon below; the woods, so many thickets; half a dozen adjoining counties; a great checker-board; and looking down, Hetty suddenly felt the mountain scarce, grew dizzy, and, with a quick, frightened gesture, put out her hands to Thorn, who had thrown himself at her feet, and was looking admiringly into her face.

"No need to tremble," he said gayly, taking both the hands in his, and placing himself between her and the ledge. "Here is your balustrade." And he pointed the speech with a glance that made. Hetty not only tremble but blush; and murmur something about Barry.

"Barry," echoed Thorn, with a slight sneer; "Barry is thinking about his lunch. He has a treasure for which some men would sell their souls, and he commits it to chance rather than the sandwiches."

"You are not to say anything about Barry," you know," ventured Hetty; uneasily.

"Say anything! You will not forbid me to wonder. I suppose though," he answered.

"Why, if his treasure were mine—? I don't understand you," murmured Hetty, uneasily, not at all prepared for anything so serious, "and I think we had better talk about the view."

"I am talking about the view—the view I care to see," declared Thorn, boldly—"a beautiful woman, whom I love."

This last word brought the "beautiful woman" to her feet.

"Mr. Thorn, you must know that Barry—"

"Yes, I know," he interrupted, quickly. "And I know, too, his is the way of the world. The man who does not know a diamond from glass picks up the Koh-i-noor. But I love you, and when I see him, in the insolence of his good fortune, careless of you; to whom he should devote his life, I say that his indifference leaves the lists open to me, and that I have a right to speak."

"We ought to go," I must go," fluttered Hetty; but he knew, and she knew, that she was not displeased. This was romance, and the soft air stirred the boughs above them laden with sweet wood-scent. It was the spot of all others for love-making, and Thorn grew more and more audacious.

"Think of what I have said," he urged. "If he valued you as he should, no word of mine should have betrayed my feelings, and I do not ask you to decide now—only reflect before you are hopelessly bound and it is too late."

Then he gave her his hand, to help toward it with a fearful joy, mounted the fence, eyed the tempting and luxuriant sward, and plunged boldly knee-deep in mud. The lovely field was a bog. And if you will pardon me the inglorious comparison, Hetty, I thought your case similar, and that nothing but the plunge would cure you. But there were times when I almost despaired. You tried me sorely."

Hetty crept closer to him and was silent a while, mentally reviewing the faith, the iron self-control, and the great love of this man. At last she said, looking up with a smile at once bright and tender:

"I think I shall be a better and wiser girl, Barry, for as some lover said of his mistress, 'to love you is a liberal education.'"

Teacher's Institute.

MONDAY, NOV. 10th, 1879.

The DeKalb county teachers' institute convened at Garret, at 10 o'clock a. m., and was called to order by Superintendent MacIntosh. Mr. T. J. Saxton of Auburn, was elected secretary, after which the regular exercises were commenced.

Prof. C. A. Fike of Butler, conducted a class in grammar, proving his ability to master that branch of study. Having finished the exercises in grammar, the teachers indulged in a little recreation by way of vocal music, led by Mr. J. B. Otis assisted by Miss Nettie Bows at the organ. Prof. Otis then took up the subject of mental arithmetic and entertained the members with remarks both interesting and instructive.—Superintendent MacIntosh was next, with a subject of no little importance—that of penmanship; his ideas and suggestions were worthy of consideration by every one present, as there is probably no branch so much neglected by teachers, and none of more importance in our common schools. Mr. T. H. Shoub was then called upon to offer some remarks concerning geography, and the importance of map drawing in public schools, subjects he is well qualified to discuss. Dr. Sherman, of Garrett, by request of Superintendent MacIntosh, offered some very appropriate suggestions concerning the building and ventilation of school rooms, the importance of which is so frequently overlooked by school officers. His remarks were extemporaneous, or nearly so, and proved conclusively that physiology and hygiene are subjects with which he is familiar. Mr. Clark, the trustee of Keyser township, was present and will no doubt take advantage of the suggestions made by the doctor when he has occasion to construct new school buildings. In this connection it occurs to the writer that the law compelling teachers to attend township institutes might be appropriately amended so as to compel school officers to attend county institutes.

TUESDAY.

Institute convened at 9 o'clock a. m. Rev. Madden read from the scriptures and opened the institute with prayer. The next on the programme was a recitation in grammar conducted by Prof. C. A. Fike. Harvey's was the recognized authority.

Prof. Otis, of Garrett, delivered an address on arithmetic, as applied to business calculations. Miss Daniels of the Auburn school, addressed the institute on vocal tones select reading and gymnastic exercises. Her remarks were both interesting and profitable. At the close of Miss Daniels' address, the superintendent offered some good suggestions upon the same subject. Institute then adjourned for dinner, after which, Supt. MacIntosh conducted a recitation in orthography, which was highly spoken of. Miss Ellis R. Shoub followed with remarks on geography. Her remarks concerning primary arithmetic by Miss Zeigler were followed by a general discussion concerning the general management of schools. The institute adjourned until Wednesday morning.

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

At no recurrence of the season, which the devout habits of a religious people has made this occasion for giving thanks, to Almighty God and humbly invoking His continued favor has the material prosperity, enjoyed by and whole country been more auspiciously, more plentiful, or more universal. During the past year, also, unbroken peace with all foreign nations, the general prevalence of domestic tranquility, the supplementary and economy of the great institutions of civil and religious freedom have adorned the bosom of our people and confirmed their attachment to the Government which the wisdom and courage of our countrymen have secured, and the wisdom and courage of their descendants have so firmly maintained, so be the habitation of liberty and justice to successive generations.

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do appoint Thursday, the 27th day of November, instant, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly recommend that, withdrawing themselves from secular cares and labor, the people of the United States do meet together on that day in their respective places of worship, to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His mercies, and to devoutly beseech their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed, at Washington, this 21st day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fourth.

Witness my hand and the seal of the United States at Washington, this 21st day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and fourth.

By the President of the United States, R. B. Hayes.

WILLIAM M. EVANS, Secretary of State.

At no recurrence of the season, which the devout habits of a religious people has made this occasion for giving thanks, to Almighty God and humbly invoking His continued favor has the material prosperity, enjoyed by and whole country been more auspiciously, more plentiful, or more universal. During the past year, also, unbroken peace with all foreign nations, the general prevalence of domestic tranquility, the supplementary and economy of the great institutions of civil and religious freedom have adorned the bosom of our people and confirmed their attachment to the Government which the wisdom and courage of our countrymen have secured, and the wisdom and courage of their descendants have so firmly maintained, so be the habitation of liberty and justice to successive generations.

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do appoint Thursday, the 27th day of November, instant, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly recommend that, withdrawing themselves from secular cares and labor, the people of the United States do meet together on that day in their respective places of worship, to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His mercies, and to devoutly beseech their continuance.

FROM THE N. Y. TRIBUNE.

N. Y. Tribune, New York, May 17, 1876.

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.,

Dear Sir:—Please send me two more bottles of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic. My wife has been taking it and thinks it has done her good.

Yours truly, C. A. TRACY.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "the continuing hero" of the times. It is the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Billiousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headaches, Fever and Ague, Spleen Sleeplessness, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility, Restless flesh, and all the evils of the system running down or going into decline, cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of liver, and removing its cause.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Tooth ache, Neuralgia, Colic or Cholera, in five to ten minutes. It cures all forms of Intoxication, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, etc.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Dr. Wm. M. Mercer, Corunna, and dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "the continuing hero" of the times. It is the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Billiousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headaches, Fever and Ague, Spleen Sleeplessness, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility, Restless flesh, and all the evils of the system running down or going into decline, cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. ## THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, NOVEMBER, 1879.

With the present issue we commence the second volume of the HEAD LIGHT. We are gratified to announce that the business of the office in advertising and job work has steadily increased from the commencement of the publication, inasmuch that the proprietor is enabled to make renewed efforts to improve the work in the course of the second volume. In view of the approaching Presidential campaign, which undoubtedly will be the most intensely exciting canvass in the history of the nation, we contemplate changing the monthly to a weekly publication, commencing early in the spring, and to insure the success of the enterprise we trust that our friends will give us sufficient encouragement in the way of a subscription list to start with.

That intense radical sheet, the Auburn Republican, in reply to a paragraph in the last issue of this paper, wants to know "what flag we train under," rather insinuating that we are not sound on the goose. In reply we have to say, that we train under the Democratic flag, the flag of the whole Union and the emblem of freedom; and unlike Bro. Weamer whose faith is pinned to a party that early advocated dissolution, claiming that a Union riveted by the chains of slavery was nothing but a rope of sand, a wooden nutmeg and a mean Yankee trick, and thus the civil war. A party that is the lineal descendants of the clan that burned "blue lights" as signals for the enemies of our country in the war of the Revolution. That is Weamer's flag, and let him deny his colors if he dare.

A large box shipped on a railroad at Cleveland was found to contain a live man, a flask of whisky, some sandwiches and a kit of burglar tools. It is supposed that he intended to rob the expresscar, and took along the sandwiches as a protection against bullets in case the express messenger showed fight.

We continue our account of the Teachers' Institute, at Garrett last week.

WEDNESDAY.

Called to order by the Supt., reading and prayer by Rev. Miller; song by choir; general remarks by Supt.

Recitation in general drawing by Mr. A. A. L. Strong, of Newville; how to teach in a common school; he was much praised for earnestness in the work.

History, by Supt., who conducted the class with a great deal of energy. The teachers seemed to manifest a double amount of interest in a recitation so well managed.

Geography by T. H. Shouse. C. A. Fyke, B. F. Walter, Miss L. Daniels, Miss Mary Brundage and Frank Fink were appointed as a committee on Resolutions to report on Friday evening, followed by choir, Recess, Elocution, by Miss L. Daniels, who made the recitation very entertaining and instructive, by a variety of exercises. Song by the choir, registering names, etc.

THURSDAY.

Institute called to order by Supt. Song by the choir. Next an essay, by Miss A. Baxter, an excellent production, so much so, that a request from the teachers to have it printed in the Garret Herald was unanimous.

Physiology by C. M. Merics, with a class of well trained pupils. Some valuable remarks were made upon the subject by A. O. Shortridge, of Indianapolis, Cyrus Smith, of Jackson, Mich., and others. Mr. Smith advised scholars to use their own language in reciting a lesson.

Recitation in Orthography by J. B. Oude. A recitation by Miss M. E. Zeigler, good. Question box. Song by class. Adjourned. Registering names, etc.

FRIDAY.

Speeches by A. O. Shortridge and Cyrus Smith. Recitations by Miss M. E. Zeigler. Song by the choir, led by Oth and Fyke.

SATURDAY.

Reading by Luella Daniels. Prayer by C. A. Fyke. Roll call. Song.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, NOVEMBER, 1893.

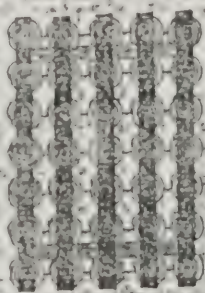

The Grant show at Chicago on the 12th attracted a large crowd of sight-seekers to witness the "man on horse-back," who is being duly groomed and trained preparatory for the republican nomination in the race of 1896.

It is said that privileges at certain windows in the Grand Pacific hotel for

The Schooner C. G. Breed, bound from Detroit to Buffalo with a cargo of grain, when about seventy miles east by north of Point St. Pelles, Friday afternoon, was struck by a heavy squall and capsized. All the crew, with the exception of one man, named Frank Davis, were drowned. The crew, consisted of the Captain and seven men. The sailor, Frank Davis, saved his life by clinging to the rigging, and was picked up by the propeller, Milwaukee Capt. W. H. Rounds, and brought to that port.

Express Trains leaving Chicago at 1.00 p. m. and Baltimore at 6.00 p. m., run daily; other trains daily except Sunday. BALTIMORE & OHIO TICKET AGENT, BALTIMORE. SAMUEL POWELL, Asst. P. & T. Agt., Chicago. C. M. HUDSON, Sup. Trans. Ohio Div., Chicago.

BORDER STYLE OF PERSUASION.

The style of persuasion that obtains in the outlying settlements of our beloved country may be inferred from the following scene that occurred recently, or a few years ago, at the Union Railway ticket-office at Denver. A rough-looking man purchased through mistake a ticket for New York via the Kansas Pacific line when he wanted to go over the Union Pacific. He did not discover the mistake until after the ticket had been paid for, and on asking the agent to change it the latter refused to do so.

"You won't change this ticket, then, won't you?"

"No," replied the agent; "you have your ticket, and I have the money for it, and if you want a ticket over the other route you will have to buy it."

Very quietly the stranger twisted his ticket into a small roll, very serenely drew from under his coat tail a six-shooter, coolly stuck the twisted ticket into the muzzle thereof, and sticking the pleasant-looking thing thro' the little square window of the ticket-office almost in the agent's face, and speaking in a tone that left no doubt of his determination, said, "Stranger, that's that ticket; take it yourself and change it, or by the great horn spoon I'll blow it clean through you." It was changed with cheerful alacrity, and the traveler per Union Pacific walked away, saying, "I just thought I could induce him to change his mind a little."

A good story is told of a fellow at a cattle show, who was making himself ridiculously conspicuous by an evident intention of finding fault with every thing. (A disagreeable habit, by-the-way, with some people.) At last he burst forth with, "Call these, are prize cattle. Why, they ain't nothing to what our folks raised. My father raised the biggest calf of any man round our part." "I don't doubt it," was the timely remark of a by-stander, "and the noisest." The forward youth, as well may be imagined, incontinentally subsided.

A clerk in Iowa City says: "A very pretty and noble young lady called in the store the other day and requested to see our lavender kid gloves, whereupon she was shown several different shades of that color." Being a little overcome with so great a variety, she asked, "Which of those pairs are the lavenderest?"

On some railroads it is customary to have a look on the stove to prevent passengers from meddling with the fire. A wag being asked why they locked the stove, coolly replied that "it was to prevent the fire from going out!"

DEMETER.

I dreamt of rambled summer, as alone
I walked in ways that bore no trace of her.
Low on my ear there fell a sudden strain,
And face to face I met Demeter.
He wailing newly-lost fair Persephone,
Drobed in her sombre mantle of dull brown,
She held the pale torch of a wintry ray.
And searched o'er sudden meads, and up and down.
The barren forests, where one golden day
She saw the maid departing, faded mien,
Her bonnets garlands wet with rain and dew,
Her heavy hearted, pained me, with slow feet,
Still seeking for her child, who far away,
In ether Kingdom reigned a royal Queen.

MR. PULLET'S MISTAKE.

MR. PULLET was not only one of the solid men of our little city in regard to financial matters, but also in respect to those intellectual properties, which are classed under the title of common sense. Nevertheless he was led by human nature or some other unfortunate element in his composition into one error which, for a time, made life a nauseous draught to him, no matter how he might try to flavor it with the most honeyed Santa Cruz rum and the oldest old Bourbon whisky that his grocery afforded.

As was natural and proper, Mrs. Pullet had something to do with starting her husband toward his blunder. There would be no reality in marriage if women were not to have an influence over the characters and careers of their companions in life. They do; they save them something, and they cost them something; they get them out of this trouble, and get them into that, being in the average and on the whole, beneficial. We must consider that it is not their fault if there is a Law of Compensation. We may reasonably ask, also, what is the use of Mr. Emerson's discovering a law if it is not put in practice?

knowing her select boarders. "Well?" blandly inquired Mr. Pullet, helping his wife along in her communication.

"She just dropped in to ask a favor of us," continued the encouraged lady. "She is expecting a Captain and Mrs. Steinway of the regular army, who are coming here to muster in the volunteers; that is the Captain is to muster them in you know; and he brings his wife. Well, she hasn't a room vacant, and she's perfectly miserable about it, for she's afraid they'll go to the hotel, and she says they are elegant people and she hates to lose 'em. But in two weeks she'll have a room vacant, and so, if she can only get somewhere for them to stay till then, she'll be so much obliged."

"Well, couldn't Widow Brown take them?" asked Pullet, who saw what his wife was driving at, and did not fancy the idea of lodgers.

"Oh! they wouldn't stay there," Mrs. Brown hasn't a spring-bed in the house, and her window curtains are old, faded things, and her bedroom carpets are sights. And they are such elegant people! I thought, Joseph, that just to accommodate, now, we might try to put ourselves out a little, you know."

Here her expression became very beseeching, and her hand stole coaxingly into her husband's.

Mr. Pullet felt a strong repugnance to the proposition. He had none of that vanity which spurred his wife to struggle occasionally for an entrance into fashionable society; and he had a pride in the fact that he was a "solid man," with a good bank account and a business which made him independent of makeshift means of living. To be sure, taking lodgers for a fortnight, just to accommodate, would not hurt his credit; but then he did not like the look of the thing as it appeared from his long-established, solid, stand-point of self-respect.

"Mrs. Ottomann said she was sure you would like them," urged the ered her a mere woman. And of the mere woman, that curious moral being who considers dress the reality of life and the individual an unimportant shadow. Mrs. Steinway had a very contemptible opinion.

But Mr. Pullet was a creature of possibilities. Could he have gone to college, he would have honored his alma mater; could he have lived among highly educated people, he would have absorbed their culture. The fact that he could turn from the weighing of brown sugar and the bottling of superior double-canned Santa Cruz rum to an eager inquiry into the nature of the Darwinian hypothesis, made him as respectable in her eyes as if he had been bred a professor of all the sciences. The spectacle of a soul struggling daily out of the realms of bread-and-butter toward the heights of scientific mystery strongly attracted her broad, intellectual sympathy.

"Mr. Pullet is a man really worth noticing," she said to her husband. "Do show him your 'Simplification of Field Fortifications.' He is capable of catching and appreciating your ideas; and I think you might add his criticism valuable. It might be all the more valuable for being fresh, and not biased by preconceived theories." said

As I am anxious to show something of Mrs. Steinway's character, I will explain that this rude speech was made under the influence of more than the idea. In the first place she was clever enough to have discovered that almost any body's criticism is worth something. Then she liked to please; she had a disposition to put even chance companions on good terms with themselves; and so she wanted to pay Mrs. Pullet a compliment on his general good sense. Finally, she desired to secure an admirer for her husband. Notwithstanding the Captain's vein of humor he was a reserved man, not disposed to seek for companionship, but nevertheless sensitive to neglect and lack of sympathy. She was forever breaking the ice which he made around himself, and so allowing people to come within friendly hail of him; and she did this not only because it increased his happiness, but because she was proud of him, and wanted him to be known and appreciated.

Accordingly the grocer was consulted as to lines of approach and lines of fire, somewhat to his perplexity, but vastly to his wife's gratification.

We must not, however, dwell entirely on the grave side of this intercourse. Mrs. Steinway was jolly, fond of joking, and much given to gales of laughter. Delighting in whist, she sat down to it solely for amusement, chattering like a magpie about the chances of the game, bragging hilariously of her honors, giggling when she trumped a hostile suit, and picking up an unexpected trick with a little scream of triumph. Always playing with Mr. Pullet, she showed a proper esprit du corps, and cheered her partner to do his best. Very lively and pleasant were those whist parties, although the luck was provokingly partial to Mrs. Steinway. The Captain took his defeat with the patience of a soldier, and Mrs. Pullet was only too delighted to be beaten by a Swammerdam.

As for Mr. Pullet, he was more happy than he had any right to be; even taking into account the fact that he was generally on the winning side. He felt an enjoyment which tended toward infatuation in watching his partner's varying color, her gayly-eager expression, her laughing blue eyes, and her quick, white fingers. The poor man began to misunderstand the lively lady who glanced at him so often and so intelligently. She had certain free, dashing ways of expressing her excitement which increased his disposition to judge her wrongfully. For instance, when she laid an unlooked-for trump on a long suit of hearts with which her husband was sweeping the game; she did it with this quotation from one of Montgomery's funeral hymns: "There is no union here of hearts,

Which hath not here an end."

Mrs. Pullet looked a little frightened at such an application of psalmody; but Pullet, erroneous man! roared with laughter, and chuckled to himself: "She's a fast one."

After a pleasant fortnight of Macaulay, Hugh Miller, field fortifications, and whist, the Steinways moved over to Mrs. Ottoman's, much to the regret of the Pullets. The Steinways, I must explicitly state, felt little or no regret, notwithstanding they had been so companionable while in the house of the grocer. Much knocking about the world had made them (particularly the lady) very ready in picking up acquaintance, and equally ready in dropping them. Mrs. Steinway had been in twenty families like the Pullets; had been charming to them all, because it was her nature to be charming; and on leaving had forgotten them because she could not remember so many people.

But Mrs. Pullet had no expectation, much less any intention, that she should be forgotten. She was not only infatuated with the Steinways, but she believed that the Steinways were permanently delighted with the Pullets. Moreover, she felt that now was her chance to sail into the harbor of aristocracy; that here was the pilot who was both able and willing to guide her bark; and that the voyage must be made at once. So, getting out her grappling irons of perseverance and management, she clung fast to Mrs. Steinway, not Swammerdam. Fearful, however, that her single ability was not adequate to the proposed task, and having due confidence of late in the cleverness of her husband, she engaged him with constant urgency not to lose sight of their quondam lodgers.

"Now, Joseph, do be attentive," was her evening song. "You have'n't been to see Mrs. Steinway to-day. And you know she liked you so much! You really ought to follow it up. They are decidedly the most genteel people we ever knew, and so friendly! and you ought to be ashamed of yourself

PAT. MEDICINES A SPECIALTY.

Yours Very Respectfully,

for neglecting them so."

This to a man who thought that day six times of Mrs. Steinway to once of his wife, and from whose bosom honest peace had already taken its departure! Did Mrs. P. guess the danger into which she was spiriting her Joseph? Probably not; but at the same time it is to be feared that she would not have relented if she had guessed it; the flower on that possible nettle was altogether too tempting.

Joseph saw Mrs. Steinway oftener than his now guilty conscience allowed him to reveal to Mrs. Pullett. Hardly a day passed that he did not contrive to obtain for himself the luxury of a few words with her. Having learned by some surprising effort of intellect (how many men never learn it!) that ladies like flowers, he sent her a bouquet when he did not dare to call or to join her in the street. He got himself a new morning suit for shop use, so that he might always be in decent condition to bow to her if she passed his door. He became particular about the arrangement of his hair; surveyed himself often and anxiously in mirrors; rejuvenated his appearance with turn-down collars. It afforded him an irrational comfort to reflect that he was no older than Byron; Burns, and Gustavus Adolphus when they died. He cogitated much on what Mrs. Steinway had said on this, that, and the other occasion, and laboriously discovered double-entendres where the lady had been as innocent of any second meaning as the summer breeze. He became afraid of Captain Steinway; he was ashamed to look him in the eye; he wished he would leave town. He got nervous also with regard to his wife, and seldom faced her when he spoke of Mrs. Steinway.

Michelet asserts that the best of women occasionally have moral vertigos. I hope and try to believe that this is not so; but I will not entirely deny the charge as to my own sex. It is, I fear, a mortifying and deplorable fact that the purest of us men have periods, of longer or shorter duration, measurable by days, by months, or perhaps by years, during which we are morally not quite sane. Either the devil besieges us, as clergymen would have us believe; or the health of the soul is intrinsically as variable as that of the body. I will not try to explain the fact; but I do positively and loudly though humbly affirm it; I hold it up as a warning to both men and women.

Our lately respectable but now pitiable friend Joseph Pullet was so far lunatic at this period of his life as to feel happy when he learned that the mustering officer had been ordered to the front as Colonel of a volunteer regiment, and that he would leave his wife at Mrs. Otoman's. Mrs. Pullet, with a simplicity for which we can pardon her as being a gift of Heaven, was equally delighted. "Now, Joseph," she whispered, at the hour when night-angles sing, "you must be attentive. Mrs. Steinway will be so dependent on us for company, and you know she thinks so much of you! She is going to have her little boy with her, and he is going to school here. But that won't matter. He is no company. You must be polite to her, and you will, won't you, Joseph?"

"Certainly, pussy, if you wish it," responded Joseph, with a very mournful and contemptible affectation of indifference in his tone. Fortunately, or rather, I should say, unfortunately for him, his expression could not be seen on account of the darkness of the hour.

This respected grocer, this honest man of business, this habitually model husband had become a devious and complicated hypocrite. He affected honest gratification at Steinway's promotion; he shook his hand warmly at parting, and wished him a safe return.

"We will do all we can," Colonel, for Mrs. Steinway's comfort," he said; and in uttering these words he looked neither at the husband nor the wife; he looked spiritually at himself and felt that he ought to be kicked.

FROM THE FATHER OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

A. N. Cole is the veteran editor of the Genesee Valley Free Press. He is the man who first called a convention in the State of New York to form a Republican Party; in 1864 he writes:

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Jan. 17, 1877.

MR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.,

Dear Sir:—Several members of my family have made use of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic, and satisfied we are of its efficacy, I desire to purchase directly of you. I am intelligently convinced of the value of your Peoples' Remedies. Send me by express one-half dozen bottles of the Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic. Respectfully, etc.

A. N. COLE.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliaryness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headaches, Fever and Ague, Spleen, Sleeplessness, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism; and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Tooth-ache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 5 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhoea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

of Peter's last companions began to ask him about Mrs. Steinway. The last companions of a hospitable retailer who deals in liquors are apt to be men of coarse sentiments and disreputable plain utterance.

"How is the grass widow, Joe?" asked fat old Fred Buffum, the broker, sitting in the back room of Pullet's "ware" and leering over a glass of "vino" Santa Cruz. "Put on the top, Joe. Make your trotting while you have the inside track."

Pullet was inclined to hit the elder too rough, for he could not endure to have any one speak disrespectfully of Mrs. Steinway, however wickedly he himself might muse concerning her.

"These soldier's wives!" continued that horrid Buffum. "Here's to 'em! I wish the war had happened when I was young."

Although speeches like this made Pullet blush and shocked painfully what remained to him of gentlemanly feeling, they aided to demoralize him. Like a specked lemon he now rotted off the faster for rotten companionship, however alien it might be to his original freshness of moral nature.

Meantime Mrs. Steinway had not a suspicion that she was or could be thus talked about. It is painfully wonderful to observe how a woman can become the subject of scandal, or of remarks approaching to the nature of scandal, when her conduct and her very thoughts are as spotless of evil as possible to humanity. She was almost entirely absorbed in writing letters to her worshiped husband and educating her darling boy. Mrs. Pullet had been mistaken when she told Pullet that the child would be no exciting companion for his mother.

Mrs. Steinway made her Jamie a companion; she talked with him by the hour together; she read story-books and poetry to him; she helped in his lessons; she joined in his plays. She was frightened if he did not come home from school at the usual moment; and he would not go to the dinner-table until she returned from her afternoon-walk.

[CONCLUDED NEXT MONTH.]

Teachers' Institute.

RICHLAND & FAIRFIELD TOWNSHIPS.

The Richland and Fairfield township teachers' Institute convened at Corunna, on Saturday, Dec. 6th, 1879, at 9 o'clock A. M. and was called to order by Superintendent McIntosh.

After an able address by the Superintendent the regular exercises were commenced. The subject of monthly examinations in common schools was ably discussed by the teachers, of which some good suggestions were offered, viz: creating a desire of promotion by the pupil, teaches composition and writing, restores lost knowledge gone over. Suggested further that fair questions, ample time and actual grade be given.

The exercises being finished, Miss Rush conducted a class in primary reading. 1st, the word method was illustrated. 2nd, reading from the Third Reader, in which she proved her ability to master that branch to perfection.

Mr. McIntyre then took the subject of primary geography, in which he showed his ability of teaching home geography, requesting his pupils to bound Townships, Counties and States, to give the name and location of the various post-offices, and various other things, showing the necessity of posting pupils with our own township, county and state map, before elsewhere.

Mr. Squire was then called, Subject: English grammar, in which he showed his ability of teaching that branch, by illustrating the beginning of the study by objects, etc. Adjournment for dinner.

At one o'clock P. M. the house was called to order. Bupt. McIntosh offered some very appropriate suggestions, cautioning teachers to keep good registers; so the Trustees can make a complete report to the County Superintendent, urging neatness and proper ventilation, and that the temperature be kept from 65 to 75° in school rooms, and that the Trustees ought to provide the schools with Thermometers, Clocks, etc. Good hints on behavior and manners were also given.

Mr. Ash was next called. Subject: Programme and how to keep it. 1st, he suggested that the programme be properly arranged and timed, and the teacher then not deviate from it; a time for every thing and one thing at a time. Mr. Hersh suggested that time lost can be gained by doubling some of the smaller reader classes. At this moment the Superintendent left to take the train home, followed by Mr. Hersh to the chair.

Mr. Hoffman was next called. Subject: History, which he illustrated his method of teaching in an able manner.

The question how to prevent whispering in school was discussed. Mr. Miller then gave his manner of keeping order, said that he found by kindness to his pupils the best way of maintaining order.

Next Helps and Hindrances in school, was a question of general discussion; helps, the general co-operation and good will of the patrons of school; hindrances, all the contrary.

On motion of Mr. Jordan the Institute adjourned.

It must be remembered that the day being gloomy with rain, and the roads very muddy, many of the teachers could not be present, and part of the programme had to be laid aside; yet a very good time was realized. Thanks to the generous people of Corunna for their hospitality.

S. REINGEL, Secretary.

The border counties of this State are being flooded with emigrant negroes from Kansas and Nebraska. This is a move to swell the Republican vote next year, and the blacks are being imported into the State for that purpose.

In a few days the annual holidays will have again rolled around. Anticipating the event we improve this opportunity of extending the customary greetings, and wish our readers a Merry Christmas, and a Happy New Year.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, DECEMBER, 1879.

GEO. HAZZARD, the notorious bank swindler, was arrested in Chicago on the 9th by the U. S. Marshal of Indianapolis, having forfeited his bail to appear before Judge Gresham of the U. S. Court, on an indictment by the Grand Jury for filing false schedules in bankruptcy.

THE returning board of Maine, created to settle the disputed election returns in that State, have awarded a majority of the offices to the Democrats and Greenbackers, and now the Republicans come forward and charge their opponents with having played the the Louisiana game on them and thus stolen the State.

IN his third annual message to the country, among other items Hayes recommends the retirement from circulation of the legal-tender notes and a suspension of the coinage of the silver dollars. Be it known that our beloved accidental President is a large holder of national bank stock, and that the bulk of his private fortune is invested therein, and it is natural that he should look to the interests of the bankers.

THE Kendallville Standard, a very wispish radical newspaper concern of questionable authority on general principles, contradicts a statement in our last issue in regard to the result of the New York election. Now, perhaps our version of the result was not altogether correct, but that is no reason why C. O. should utter in the same connection two falsehoods respecting our business and ourself. However, for a radical editor to tell a lie in these degenerate days of republican nastiness, is not strange, and in this particular respect friend Myers is entitled to the championship.

Local Hash.

Considerable live stock is being shipped from this place to the Eastern market.

After a long spell of soft weather we are now having a general freeze-up, with indications of settled winter.

The Corunna school closed yesterday (Friday), for a week's vacation during the Holidays.

The New York ladies who are expecting to receive calls on New Year's Day are laboring to exclude all sorts of liquor from use on that day,—an effort worthy of all commendation.

The Kendallville News, edited by our friend Dr. Parker, has recently been enlarged and otherwise improved. The News is as bright and spicy as a New England 'schoolmarm.'

We invite attention to the prospectus for 1880 of the Cincinnati Enquirer in another column. This old staunch and reliable democratic journal should be found in the household of every democrat in the land. As a live newspaper of general information it has no equal in the country.

Mr. H. E. Gettel, of Altona, has issued cards of invitation for a social hop at that place on Christmas Eve, 24th inst. The dancing parties given by Mr. Gettel are select and enjoyable, and no doubt the one to take place on Wednesday evening will be no exception to the general rule.

In reply to our charge of disunionism upon the Auburn Republican, Weaver copies a silly personal item from the Kendallville Standard. This dodge is characteristic with men of small caliber and little souls, and is about as thin as the hide on Weaver's rear parts, which is probably thinner than the hide of a river wharf-boat June-bug.

A brace of heavy swells were in town last week canvassing for the sale of 25 cent stationery packages, and as an inducement to buy they presented each purchaser with a ticket calling for a dollar's worth of goods on presentation at the wagon, which they said would call during the day. But the 'wagon' never put in an appearance, and the swells took the first train for other pastures green. And now about fifty holders of unredeemed tickets are waiting for the wagon.

At the stockholders' meeting at Waterloo on the 15th, of the North-Eastern Indiana Agricultural Association, the old officers were re-elected for the coming year. The report of the officers shows that a fair business was done the past year. The total debts of the Association now amounts to $2,153.94. This is an increase during the year, of $402.21; but while this is the case, there has in the same time, been added to the property of the Association, over $1,400 worth of land, buildings and other improvements.

Two of the Spencerville burglars, named, respectively, George Stover and Alexander McDonald have been captured and lodged in Auburn jail. They were captured near the village of Swanton, Ohio, by Sheriff Leas and his deputies after a search of nearly two weeks, and when at last overtaken they made a desperate resistance. Lewis Garfield, the third member of the gang, is still at large, and the Sheriff of Williams county offers a reward of $100 for his apprehension.

Our enterprising young townsman J. T. Adams, is making preparations to give a social hop at the town hall in this place on the evening of Christmas, 25th. An oyster supper will be served at his restaurant for those who desire refreshments. Tickets of invitation have already been issued, the services of the Corunna quadrille band engaged, and all those who enjoy dancing can rely upon having a good time.

Read the advertisement of the Twenty-Five Cent store just opened in the room formerly occupied as a millinery store. Now is the time to make investments and get the worth of your money. Don't fail to call soon as the chance will be open for one week only.

The almost impassable condition of the roads for some time past has nearly stopped the delivery of wheat at this station.

The place to purchase Christmas and New Year's presents is at Joe Abright's Jewelry store, Auburn. Remember that all goods are offered at old prices.

—It is reported that two English travelers have been captured by Greek brigands in Epirus, who demand £4,000 for their ransom.

—A St. Louis Times special from Farmington, Mo., says: "George Beard, a laborer on the farm of Luther Matthews, living near Farmington, killed a fellow-laborer named Eli Cunningham, by striking him on the head with a sledge-hammer on the morning of the 15th. Beard confessed the crime, but assigned no motive for the act. He is supposed to be insane.

—News has just been received at Taylorsville, Tenn., across the North Carolina line, of a brutal wife-murder in Person County. Grace Cousa, married a young lad eighteen months ago, and soon after deserted her. He returned two or three days since, and, without provocation so far as heard from, murdered her in cold blood, and then made good his escape.

—A geography recitation in Nevada must be interesting. Just imagine a schoolboy standing up and gravely rattling off the following before a committee of the Board of Education: "Buttermilk Canyon is in the Paradise Mountains, northwest from Eden, about ten miles from Gouge-Eye, on the road leading from Timburger to Whoop-Em-Up, via Bull Town, Lay-Em-Out, and Hungry, and just over the mountains from Bung-Eye and Knock-Em-Stiff."

—Calcraft, forty-six years hangman in England; is dead. He was the most noted man who has filled that office, both from his duration of service and the number of unfortunates who have suffered at his hands the extreme penalty of the law. He retired from service several years ago, and was succeeded by William Marwood. Calcraft's office followed that of headman, the last of whom died in 1867. The English hangman used to be called Gregory, from Gregory Brandon, who, in the reign of James I., procured a coat-of-arms from the College of Herolds, and so became an Esquire. Jack Ketch was also one of Calcraft's predecessors. When the line of Scottish hangmen died out, Calcraft was hired to perform the work.

Beatty's Improved Knee Well, and Beatty's new Low-Note Grand Organ Knee Well. The mechanism, design, and music in this Organ renders it the most desirable ever before manufactured for the parlor or drawing-room. Retail price asked for such an instrument by Agents, three years ago about $170.00. My offer, (daily 8:07, say for the instrument only after you have fully tested it in your own home. It is so easily represented, return at my expense. I have brought both ways, however, this offer to the very lowest figure, and that I positively will not deviate from this price. Fully warranted for 4 years. If after these 4 years, while others, all the most successful houses in America. None unsolicited testimonials than any manufacturer. I have extended my sales now over the entire world. The same shines so where but it lights my instruments, hence my recent return from an extended tour through the Continent of Europe. I am more determined than ever and no city or town throughout the entire civilized world shall be unrepresented by my celebrated instruments.

The Waterloo Press of the 18th chronicles a fatal accident to a young man about 17 years of age, living near Butler, who met his death in a singular manner. He was out hunting rabbits, and had driven one under a pile of poles. To catch it or drive it out, he crawled under the poles, when they settled down upon him crushing him to death. A young boy with him gave the alarm, but when help arrived and he was taken out, life was extinct, or so nearly so that he could not be revived. The young man's name was Blaker, a son of the widow of the hotel proprietor at Butler several years ago.

Weaver wants a power press to run off his immense (?) edition. He claims to have a circulation equal to all of the papers published in the county outside of Auburn combined. Now every body may not know that he lies, but he does lie all the same. Weaver couldn't buy even a spoke in a balance-wheel to a power-press. Don't give us any more wind on that subject.

A bold and daring attempt to rob and perhaps murder Mr. Sol. Barney and family, at Spencer'sville, Indiana, was made on the night of the 2d. The burglars broke open the kitchen door of their residence and thus effected an entrance. Mrs. Barney was the first to discover their presence, and she at once awakened her husband, who was sleeping with a son in an adjoining room, and he had barely time to get out of bed and secure his revolver when one of the burglars opened fire. Several shots were exchanged when they escaped. Mrs. Barney displayed remarkable courage and presence of mind, having joined her husband with a loaded revolver, which she skillfully used in putting the thieves to flight.

NO TIME LIKE THE OLD TIME.

BY O. W. HOLMES.

There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young.
When the buds of April blossomed and birds of spring-time sung!
The garden's brightest glories by summer sun are nursed;
But, oh! the sweet, sweet violets, the flowers that opened first!

There is no place like the old place, where you and I were born,
Where we lifted up our eyelids on the splendors of the morn!
From the milk-white breast that warmed us;
from the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o'er us that will look on us no more.

There is no friend like the old friend, who has shared our morning days!
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise!
Fame is the scentless flower, with gaudy crown of gold;
But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

There is no love like the old, that we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling, and we're fading side by side!
There are blossoms all around us with the colors of the dawn,
And we live in borrowed sunshine when the light of day is gone.

There are no times like the old times—they shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place—keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like the old friends—may Heaven prolong their lives!
There are no loves like the old loves—God bless our loving wives!

—The only joke that Lieutenant-General Grant was ever known to perpetrate was one day during his campaign in Mississippi, when the rebel general Winter was coming up to attack one of the wings of his army, where the Commander-in-Chief happened to be himself present. "Gentlemen," said Grant, quietly knocking the ashes from his cigar, and looking round at the officers near him,
"you see a severe Winter approaching, and I advise you to have the boys keep up a good fire!"

MEANTIME what sort of converse did she hold with that miniature, pitiable, gawdy, but as yet seemingly worthy, Joseph Pullet? He had come to her at last that she was married in haste; yes, and to believe that she was trying to interest him in herself. He was completely humbled by that curious anomaly of society which infected her whole manner, and made her fascinating to people whom she did not wish to charm, and whom she regarded merely as unimportant atoms in the not unpleasant mass of humanity.

"I am so glad to see you, Mr. Pullet," she would say, meeting him in the street. "Those were lovely flowers you sent me yesterday. I am delighted about flowers. Give my regards to Mrs. Pullet. Good-by!"

And all the time she was thinking, in an under current, of her pretty boy, of her gallant husband. And Pullet, poor bedeviled creature! said to himself, "What can a man do when a woman will throw herself at his head?" and went off to his grocery, believing that he could run away with this lady from some foreign country. And when she came home his wife chattered, "Have you seen Mrs. Steinway? Now, Joseph, be attentive."

Every excitement has its crisis; every wave finds its culmination. It came to pass in the routine of things, and in accordance with the universal laws of nature, that this agitated grocer, this tempest-tossed head of a family, reached the apex of his insane exergo. Calling on Mrs. Steinway one evening, he found her in her little parlor engaged in packing her books and engravings.

"I am sorry to tell you!" she said in her easy, chatty, ingratiating way.

"I am about to go to Washington.
And I had got so fond of this place!
It is too bad."

Mr. Pullet turned pale; not because the news really agonized him; not because he felt any remorse in his naughty heart; but because he heard a sort of demoniacal conscience saying, "Now or never." He had a moon-struck idea that he was bound as a gentleman to do something horrid, and the task of doing it was so dreadful to his imagination that he trembled in every limb.

"My husband's mother has written me to spend the summer with her," continued Mrs. Steinway, "and I suppose I ought to go for economy's sake.
But I hate Washington, it is so hot and malarious. A woman doesn't want to turn yellow. If I were rich I wouldn't stir a step."

Pullet rapidly calculated how much money he could spare from his own income.

"But go I must," she went on. "I shall miss our talks about geology, Mr.
Pullet."

"Geology!" He knew she didn't mean geology. He transmuted the word into an amatory hint, as Mrs.
Bardell's lawyers transmuted Pickwick's "chops and tomato sauce."
He was quite certain that this woman was throwing herself at his head; and, remembering old Buffum's naughty encouragements, he attempted to catch the charming missile.

"Mrs. Steinway, you don't know how this agonizes me," he commenced in a shaking voice.

The lady looked up from her packing labors in wonder, and felt herself color from her forehead to her shoulders. It was a favorable sign, Pullet thought, and he was about to declare himself vigorously, when in came Mrs.
Ottoman with an offer to assist in the packing.

"Oh, thank you," said Mrs. Steinway, hastily. "You can help me very much. Do please try your hand at getting all these big engravings into this little trunk. It is a dreadful job. It makes one think of the old lady's wish for a small house with a great many large rooms in it."

Mr. Pullet felt, with a mixed sense of relief and disappointment, that his chance was over. Mrs. Steinway would not even look at him now, doubtless because Mrs. Ottoman was present; and the latter lady would not probably depart until far into the evening, for she also was fond of Swam-mer-dams.

"I will go home and write her a letter," he said to himself. "I may go on with it now. I am bound as a gentleman."

It is painful to think of this generally worthy and intelligent man making a wicked ninny of himself. What did he mean to do? Elope with Mrs. Steinway to the Happy Isles, leaving his grocery to go to the Old Harry, and Mrs. Pullet to get a divorce? No, not exactly; in fact, he had no definite purpose; he was, in his own language, "going it blind." A sad, though uncertain, glimmer is thrown upon his intentions by the following letter, which Mrs. Steinway received next morning:

"My DEAR LORNA,—May I venture to call you so? If not, then all that I may add will be in vain, and all that I have felt has been in vain.

"I will be entirely and perhaps brutally frank. I have loved you ever since I first saw you—I have loved you more and more, moment by moment—I love you now with all my heart.

"It is horrible to me to think that I may see you no more after to-morrow—how horrible you can imagine from the fact that it has driven me to this reckless avowal.

"Can not your departure be delayed, or be given up altogether? I will add to that end with all that I have and all that I am.

"I will call during the morning to beg your pardon for this confession. Let me hope that you will not refuse to see me.

"Your sincere friend,

"JOSEPH PULLET."

Poor misguided, wicked, insane, ridiculous Joseph Pullet! He was half aware of his folly; he had to swear at himself repeatedly before he could muster courage to send his horrid little letter; and after it had gone he was perhaps the unhappiest man then in the retail grocery line. What if she should reject his love? That would be exasperating, humiliating, harrowing. What if she should accept it? That would be the beginning of an unknown sea of dangers and troubles. In his anxiety to succeed in his suit he wished he was an Alcibiades or a Lord Byron; and two minutes afterward, in a fit of terror at possible punishment, he became remorseful, and wished he was a Christian.

Mrs. Steinway read the note at a glance—for Mr. Pullet had been a book-keeper in his youth, and his handwriting was like print. Her first emotion may be described as solid astonishment; and her next as a molten sea of indignation. Her only spoken words were, "The impertinent, wicked little wretch!"

Then came the question "what should she do?" This problem was rendered somewhat complicated by a letter received that morning from the Colonel, in which he urged her not to go to Washington, on account of the malaria, and advised her to remain with Mrs. Ottoman. After some hesitation, after reflecting how nicely Jamie was getting on at his school, after considering that she was in the cheapest respectable boarding-house which she could hope to find, she decided to follow her husband's counsel. But how should she manage with this insolent, outrageous, abominable Mr. Pullet?

This was an all-important question. This question is, in fact, the hub, the motif, the germ of this whole story. Ought ladies to communicate affairs like that which now annoyed Mrs. Steinway to their husbands? They never do—at least they seldom do—but ought they?

After much painful pondering she decided that they ought; that a wife had no right to hide a matter involving her character from her companion in life; that to have such a secret is the beginning of demoralization, danger, and sorrow.

Colonel Steinway was an exceedingly wrathful man when he received Mr. Pullet's note and his wife's explanation. He curled his black mustache, strode about his tent, uttered (let us pardon him) a few oaths, looked at his sabre, looked at his pistols, and, in short, looked dangerous. Go back and slaughter the grocer he could not, for he was under orders to embark for Yorktown next morning. After walking off a portion of his excitement, he added the following postscript to a letter which he had just finished and was about mailing:

"MY DEAR,—I have received yours of the 10th ult., inclosing Mr. Pullet's insult. I thank you with all my heart and soul for this renewed proof of your good sense, confidence and affection. I promise you in return that I will never have a secret from you. Leave the matter in my hands; simply see the man no more. I guarantee that I will sufficiently punish him, without doing him any physical harm, and without causing a scandal. Once more thank you for being together one with me. God bless you, my darling!—P. S."

Then with a smile of grim humor he took the Pullet effusion, scratched a few lines on the back of the sheet, and mailed it to a friend who had relieved him as mustering officer, with the request that he would deliver the missive in person to Mrs. Pullet.

"Won't you sit down, Sir," said this little lady, smiling upon the handsome lieutenant—West Pointer, she had heard with awe—who brought her the letter.

"No, thank you, Madame," replied the officer.

"We should be glad to have you stay to dinner," she ventured.

"I am really obliged, but I have an engagement to dine."

"Wasn't you wanting to wait for an answer?" she inquired, making one more effort to secure a stylish acquaintance.

"No, Madame," and he was gone. Then she opened the long official envelope, and took out a pink satin note, folded as pink satin notes seldom are. Her first idea was that it was a love-letter from some "army man," and she became a little tremulous, feeling that temptation might be dangerously mighty.

J. C. LOVELAND

There was writing in two ruled columns on the outside of the narrowly folded paper, and she could see thro' it that there was also writing on the inside. She read one column and gave a gasp; she read the other and gave a hysterical scream; she read the inside and burst into tears.

Meantime our unworthy Joseph was walking home to dinner, ignorant whether he had or had not prospered in his illegal wooing. Mrs. Steinway had not answered his letter; she had been regularly "not at home," although he had called thrice, and his wife as often; but then she had not gone to Washington, and that looked favorable. Repeatedly during the past week he had tried to meet her in the street, but without the luck which so often favors even the stupidly wicked.

And so, ignorant of the present, unable to divine the future, perplexed, anxious, and fearful, he was walking home to eat his dinner, if so be he should have any appetite for it. Oh, how poorly prepared he was for the coming trial! He was no hardened sinner, he had never before had a secret from his wife; he had a character to lose and some self-respect to trample on; he was soft-hearted, too, and possessed the remains of a conscience. Merely to imagine the possibility of getting into such a miserable scrape as this of Pullet's is enough to make the perspiration stand on the forehead of a hopeless old bachelor.

Unsuspectingly Mr. Pullet entered his parlor. There stood Mrs. Pullet, open eyed, white-faced, sublime, terrible. She advanced four steps toward him with a jerking movement, like that of a puppet figure or an actress in French tragedy, and placed a paper in his hand, immediately twitch-own hand away with the spiteful of a pin-machine. Mr. Pulnot even the presence of mind that he was dead, as, not know-what else to do with himself, he the following brief and indorsein the masculine hand of Colonel any:

(BRIEF.)

NEW BOSTON, May 1, 1862.
Mr. Joseph.—States (to Louisia) that he brutally frank: that he has loved her since he first saw her, and that he loves her with all his heart. Asks if her departure can not be delayed or given up.
Asks to aid with all that he has and is willing to call next day, and hopes she will not refuse to see him.—F. S.

(IMPRISONMENT.)

CAMP CAMERON, D. C., May 4, 1862.
Respectfully referred to Mrs. Joseph Pullet who will please attend immediately to moral and intellectual of her husband.
AMOS STEINWAY, Col. 12th B. Vols.

It is totally impossible to describe Pullet's feelings as he read these revelations of his shame and glanced slyly at an edge of his own handwriting on the inside of the note.
Others have seen him as he then sat in his own eyes, he would never been considered the smallest man ever was; and Barnum would have paid thousands to get him for his cunning and guile. The fact is, a human nature can only bear a certain amount of strain. After the two faced each other for perhaps a minute Mr. Pullet sank on his knees in humiliation and Mrs. Pullet dropped back in hysterics. We will have a veil of pity over the remainder of the interview.

Of course there came in time a result. Mrs. Pullet, being naturally affectionate, could not keep her husband forever; and Mr. Pullet, being really honorable, expressed his repentance without flinching. If he is a better husband than he was before his misadventure, he at least behaves like a better one, both in his presence and absence.

Now if Mrs. Steinway had scolded him for forgiven him? He would

WHAT PAYS BEST

AFTER HARVEST.

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by comparing your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming.

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER is the medium through which producers of every class make known their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself!
A fact fully demonstrated in the department (two pages a week) devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, advocating its democracy upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

"A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR."

Office of Nichols & Steiner, 48 Pine St.,
New York City, Nov. 18, 1878.

Dr. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.,
Dear Sir:—I have been a great sufferer from Biliousness and Dyspepsia for years. My friend Hon. H. V. Lake of the New York Custom House, induced me to try your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic. By the use of two bottles I have obtained the most refreshing relief. I look upon it as one of the greatest Remedies of the day, and you as the compounder of the same, as a public benefactor.

Yours truly, WM. H. STEINER,
Ex-Commissioner of Excise for N. Y. City.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever, and Ague, Spleen
Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous
Debility. Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties.
It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain,
as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 10 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhoea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Dr. Wm. M. Mercer, Corunna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garfield, N. Y.

Teachers' Institute.

The teachers' of Richland and Fairfield-townships met at Corunna, Jan. 10th, for the purpose of holding a township Institute. In the absence of the County Superintendent, J. W. Squires acted as President of the meeting. The meeting was called to order by the President after a few miscellaneous remarks.

A recitation in geography was conducted by Prof. Hersh by means of the globe and map; the lesson proved to be very interesting and instructive.

Next on the programme was a class in reading, conducted by Mr. McCullough; following this a few remarks on the subject of reading by different members of the Institute. Adjournment for dinner.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Institute called to order by President. Penmanship taught by M. L. Hoffman, which was very good, and showed the teacher to be well acquainted with his subject.

After which a question-box was passed and several good questions propounded, to be answered by the various teachers.

Next Prof. Hersh gave a brief description of the Wyandotte Cave. Mr. Squires gave us his method of conducting spelling classes, which was good, and if all the teachers would use the method he gave, would find themselves benefitted by it.

Next Mr. Shull discussed the manner of teaching physiology. His remarks were good and to the point.

Following this a class in arithmetic taught by Arthur McIntyre, class consisting of the different teachers present.

Mr. J. W. Squires then discussed school government at length, touching points that will be of interest to teachers.

The Institute was a success, and after following the programme for the day adjourned to meet at some time in the future. J. W. SQUIRES, Pres.

JOSIE RUSH, Sec'y.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

GARRETT, INDIANA, JANUARY, 1880.

THE Maine business still agitates the country, and the Supreme court is now wrestling with the question.

THE Grant party are junketing over southern territory with the view of testing the pulse of that people on the presidential boom.

THE Democratic National Committee will meet in caucus on the 23d of February, to designate time and place of holding the national convention.

GEO. HAZZARD was sentenced to serve a term of two years in the Northern prison by Judge Gresham of the U. S. Court at Indianapolis recently, as a penalty for violating the national bankrupt law.

THE Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Mr. Don Cameron, having pledged himself to both Grant and Sherman, has got himself in a tight place. But Don will discover a cat-hole somewhere.

It seems that the republicans are trying to make political capital out of that Maine business, but with a poor showing of success. When the matter is thoroughly sifted and brought before the people the democrats will be sustained.

MR. M. C. Clarkson, foreman in the B. & O. Blacksmith shop, was presented with a beautiful ebony gold-headed cane on the 24th ult. The present came from the boys in the shop, and was given as a testimonial of their regard for Mr. C. as a genial and kind-hearted foreman.

MR. Gettel desires to close out his present stock of Overcoats and winter clothing for the purpose of filling up with a stock of spring goods. He therefore offers to dispose of the remainder of his stock in that line at actual cost. Now is the time to secure bargains, and it will pay to give him a call while this splendid chance is open.

Local Hash.

If the present weather continue much longer the swamp angels will but out in full force ahead of time.

Thomas and Bicknell will soon be in proper condition to attend the next annual Fat Men's Convention at Put-in-Bay Island.

The two Garrett milkmen tuned their bells to the music of wedding-bells the daughter of John Yard, Jr., having recently been united in marriage to a son of Mr. Imler.

Mace Long the converted gambler and saloonist is at work on another book. He lectured on the subject of temperance at the M. E. church on the evening of 7th.

The Chicago Freight office of the B. & O. road has been transferred to Baltimore, and a Division office established at Tiffin, with control of the Chicago Division, T. H. Noonan agent in charge.

With the advent of the New Year those who "swore off" now pass a saloon or cigar stand with an expression upon their countenances denoting that there never before seemed such an irresistible attraction in that quarter.

The Herald carrier-boy was around with his annual address on New Year's day collecting the dimes and quarters from his patrons, the happiest day in all the grand rounds of the faithful and patient carrier.

As an evidence of prosperous times in this place, with indications of an increasing business next spring, we notice that the B. & O. Shops are running the works at their full capacity, and business is booming over the entire line.

That class of vermin known as thugs and three-card monte chaps, who have been making themselves obnoxious to the traveling public on the Baltimore road, will now come to grief, as the company, under a special legislative act, has commissioned all its conductors as special constables, with power to make arrests.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

GARRETT, INDIANA, JANUARY, 1880.

Local Hash.

Dr. Parker of the Kendallville News spent New Year's with friends in this place, and from his issue of the 8th we transfer the following account of his visit:

All the friends we met reported a merry Christmas and plenty of turkey.

Rev. Weatherbe, of LaGrange, preached every two weeks in the Episcopal Church.

Miss Kitty Koons, of Waterloo, spent Christmas at Garrett.

Mrs. W. J. Frederick has been very ill, but is now better.

Will Baker, formerly of the Garrett school, is farming in Kansas.

The Railroad Company paid out a large amount of gold on the two last pay days.

A. J. Stewart lends the singing at the Emanuel church.

Mrs. Ad. Stewart's Christmas present was an elegant piano.

H. M. Bicknell sold a large amount of holiday goods.

The doctors report the town and country quite healthy.

Miss Nettie Rowe spent her vacation at Waterloo.

We are sorry to hear that Mrs. F. M. Bacon's health is quite poor.

The new school superintendent is liked very much, and the assistant teachers also.

Dr. Thompson has recently purchased property, but will not occupy it before spring.

Geo. Behler will open business again in his old stand in the spring.

B. D. Thomas' and H. M. Bicknell's united weight is 476 pounds. Oh, my! but they can eat turkey!

For turkey dinners and oyster suppers, Garrett beats all the towns we have heard from.

Chris. Reyher sold one thousand, four hundred and ninety-five dollars' worth of goods in five days, the week before Christmas.

A great many of our old friends we were unable to see, but we enquired after them and were pleased to hear that they were all prospering.

H. S. Morse has been appointed superintendent of the Indianapolis, Decatur and Springfield Railroad, with headquarters at Indianapolis.

The Brotherhood of Engineers gave a select ball on New Year's night, at their hall, which was largely attended by the brotherhood and citizens. All pronounced it a decidedly happy event.

The Union and Methodist Sabbath schools both had Christmas trees; one on Christmas eve and the other on Christmas night. Both trees were loaded with presents for the little ones and the old ones.

We, with a large number of friends, spent our "Happy New Year" at B. D. Thomas', where a sumptuous dinner was served by Mrs. Thomas and daughter Josie. A very happy holiday was enjoyed by all.

We return thanks to the Garrett band for the compliment shown us, and will reciprocate by saying that their new silver instruments with gold mountings are superb, that the music was exceedingly fine, and that the players are—handsome.

We called on Mr. and Mrs. L. Covell and were shown over their really large and elegant new home, and pronounce it nice from Garrett to cellar. Mrs. C. has the handsomest bay-window full of house plants we ever saw. While many of the plants were in blossom, a magnificent oleander, loaded with beautiful and perfect blossoms, was the center of attraction.

Travis displays the finest line of cigars and smoker's articles in town.

Mr. Nichols the jeweler, who located here some time since, has packed his kit and gone west. There is now an opening for some gentleman who wishes to establish himself in that line of business.

Bro. Powell hinted rather plainly that he would accept a turkey as a Christmas present. Extensive advertising brought down the bird, and thus made another editor glad on Christmas day.

The predictions that this would be an open winter have been fulfilled thus far. With the exception of about one week's solid weather we have had a series of rain storms and muddy roads since the season opened. Up to the present writing, Jan. 15th, for several days, the weather has been as fair as spring-time.

General News.

—The Ute delegation arrived at Washington on the 11th.

—A London dispatch says Sylvestre Centofanti, the Italian professor, is dead.

—The strike of the workmen at the Chicago packing-houses came to an end on the 12th, and the workmen commenced work under the new rules.

—Frank Leslie, publisher of Leslie's Illustrated Weekly, and other publications, died on the 10th at his residence, Fifth avenue, New York, from a fibrous tumor of the throat. He had been suffering for some time past.

—A Boston dispatch states that Helen Josephine Ward, whose shooting of her mother was severely punished, has been released from imprisonment by the entire of a note to the indictment against her.

—Captain C. L. Pierce, a young lawyer of Erie, Pa., formerly clerk of the courts, choked to death at dinner on the 11th, while trying to swallow a large mouthful of meat. A bottle of ketchup was found in his pocket and it is supposed he had been drinking.

—There was a terrific snow-storm in the Sierra Nevada for forty-eight hours, ending on the 10th. Along the line of the Central Pacific, leading snow fell to the depth of eight or ten feet and the wind drifted the cars off.

—A portion of the railroad bridge spanning the Frick of Lay in Scotland, was blown down on the night of the 10th inst., while a train from Edinburgh to Dundee was crossing, and all the passengers, estimated at from 1,000 to 2,000 in number, were drowned. The wind blew so furiously that the wreck could not be removed by steamers.

—The report of the National Board of Health recommends the establishment of quarantine stations at Boston, New York, Charleston, Philadelphia, near the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, Savannah, near Brunswick, or Fernandina, at some point on the Texas coast and near Ship Island. The estimated cost of these is a hundred thousand dollars. An expenditure of some thirty-five thousand dollars for the establishment of steamboat inspection stations at New Orleans, Vicksburg, Memphis, and Cairo, is also recommended.

—It was rumored in New York on the 11th that W. H. Vanderbilt, the railroad king, is about to become Vanderbilt, the coal king of the country. To secure this position he has been purchasing in a very quiet way large blocks of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's stock, and is now so far advanced in his scheme that he really holds the balance of power, and can control the anthracite coal supply of the North and West, and, in a measure, of the East.

THE GRAVEYARD ON THE HILL.

IN MEMORIAM.

I am sad at heart to-night,
And my spirit has no rest;
For I miss the one who is gone
To the regions of the blest.
And when I am all alone,
And the evening air is still—
Then I think of him who lies
In the graveyard on the hill.

When amid the festive throng
I perform my chosen part,
Though I could not sing the merry song
For I was sad indeed at heart;
My truant thoughts would go
Where is peace and all is still,
To where my lovely son is laid,
In the graveyard on the hill.

But I know there is an end
To these years of pain;
And I know the summer sun
Never will shine for me again;
But contented I must rest,
Where is peace and all is still,
By the mound where sleeps my noble son,
In the graveyard on the hill.

Dickens' Advice to His Son.

From Dickens' Letters.

ADELPHI HOTEL,
LIVERPOOL, Thursday, Oct. 15, 1868.

MY DEAR HARRY:—I have your letter here this morning. I enclose you another check for £25, and I write to London by this post ordering three dozen sherry, two dozen port, and three dozen light claret, to be sent down to you.

Now, observe attentively. We must have no shadow of debt. Square up every thing whatsoever that it has been necessary to buy. Let not a farthing be outstanding on any account when we begin together with your allowance. Be particular in the minutest detail.

I wish to have no secrets from you in the relations we are about to establish together, and I therefore send you Joe Chitty's letter bodily. Reading it, you will know exactly what I know, and will understand that I treat you with perfect confidence. It appears to me that an allowance of £250 a year will be handsome for all your

WHY HE WOULDN'T TRUST HIM.

Schenectady Star.

A printer recently walked into a certain business house on his rounds to learn who desired any thing in the way of advertisements, and noticed that a drummer stood by the counter with his sample valises ready to open. "Any thing you want to say in the paper this week?" queried the printer of the man behind the counter. "No," said the business (?) man, "I don't believe in advertising; I wouldn't give a cent for all the advertising!" The drummer waited until the printer was half way to the door, and then slowly taking up his sample valises, remarked: "Well, that let's me out. I do not care to sell on time to any man who in this age does not believe in advertising. I prefer to deal with live men. When I want to strike up a trade with a dead man, I will go to the graveyard and swap tombstones. Good day, sir."

—When a friend wishes to borrow your money, consider which of the two you would rather lose.

—The young man who walked up to a California lion under the idea that the animal was a lost dog has been in bed ever since, and that was six weeks ago.—Detroit Free Press.

—The bar-keeper had made ready for him, and when the man came in who never paid for his drinks and called for a cocktail, the b. k. gently placed a rooster's feather in a glass of water and smiled a piratical smile that made his face look like a dried prune.

—The "railway bridge" over Red river at Winnipeg is an ice bridge, the track being laid on the frozen surface of the stream. At the first crossing, December 26th, the engine was preceded by a flat car, heavily laden with rails, and as the train passed onward toward the western bank of the river the depression caused the ice to rise and fall like wavelets, notwithstanding its thickness of two feet three inches.

Brilliant Diamond Robber.

One of the cleverest diamond robberies of modern times, says the London Telegraph, is reported in a tone of odd complacency by the leading journals of St. Petersburg. About a fortnight ago a handsome equipage drew up at the door of the first jeweler in the Russian capital. Alighting from the carriage an elegantly dressed and remarkably pretty young lady entered the shop and requested that some parures of brilliants might be shown to her. Several costly sets were forthwith submitted for inspection, and, after some hesitation, she selected a rivière and pendants valued at 10,000 roubles, and, stating that she was the wife of an eminent mad-doctor, whose name is a household word in St. Petersburg, requested the proprietor of the establishment to accompany her home with the jewels, in order to settle finally with her husband about the price. The jeweler packed up his diamonds and got into the carriage with his fair customer. Presently they arrived at a large house and were received at the porte cochère by a Suisse in splendid livery, who conducted them up a brilliantly lighted staircase into a richly furnished drawing room, in which the lady begged her companion to take a seat, and, jewel-case in hand, proceeded to summon "her husband." Entering the doctor's consultation room in an apparent state of uncontrollable agitation, she informed the latter that she had brought her unfortunate spouse to visit him in the hope that he would undertake to cure him of the strange monomania under which he had labored for some time past. "My afflicted husband," she said, "is a wealthy and landed proprietor from A—, in the government of Minsk. He is quiet and harmless, but he has diamonds on the brain. He will talk nothing else, poor fellow! Will you see him? I have left him in your drawing-room, and am too nervous to be present while you diagnose his case. Might I, therefore ask you to accompany me to my carriage before you go to him? It will be such a relief to me to leave him in your care." Her ingenious device was crowned with success. She drove off with the diamonds; an interview with the doctor and the jeweler fully confirmed her statement with respect to the latter's alleged monomania, and resulted in his being placed under bodily restraint, from which he was only rescued three days later by one of his partners who succeeded, with the assistance of the police, in tracking him to Dr. V—f's renowned private lunatic asylum. No trace has yet been discovered of the gifted lady who accomplished this, in every sense of the word, "brilliant" coup.

Down Among the Dead Men.

ARE THE TAY DIVERS AFRAID OF THE BODIES THEY HAVE TO HANDLE?

When to the silence and loneliness of ocean or river depths are added the blackness of darkness and the dread presence of death, the diver must needs have courage who boldly descends. In the operation not yet concluded at the Tay bridge, the less experienced divers were by some suspected of succumbing to the terrors of the situation. If there were any human bodies there, they were imprisoned in a double prison of carriages and cage-like girder. It was impossible for any diver quickly to clutch at the body, and, ere he had time to think of his ghastly work, to procure by signal the instant withdrawal of himself and solemn burden to the surface. The work involved patient and deliberate handling of the dead in the dark and silent deep, and few who suspected the divers from shrinking from this task felt brave enough themselves to blame them seriously for it. The suspicion, after all, had probably but small foundation; at least two of the divers strongly declared that no "eerie feeling" would prevent them doing their duty, and said that it necessary they would be glad to bring up the dead even in their arms. Still, the very way in which these men talk of this subject seems to show that below water they cannot face the dead with the callousness of men who are brought in contact with the bodies on shore; that in fact, they have to reason with themselves against a natural timidity. "My duty," said one diver at the Tay, "is to the living. When I go down to find the dead, I feel that I am going down to do what I can for the people they belong to, and that it is not the dead I have to be frightened of. I think of the friends to whom the bodies are to be restored, and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to give them their only satisfaction." If death and darkness do inspire timidity even in these hardy men, it is sometimes even more difficult for the diver to go among the dead even in the light of day. "The horrible conceit of death and night" is matched by the reality, as seen, for example, by the divers at the Princess Alice, when they met the cold stare of the group of cabin passengers who had clung together in agony as the ship went down; or, as experienced by certain divers who refused to recover wrecked treasure at the Faroe Islands because they saw dead sailors in the rigging and could not bear the sight. —[London News.

CONKLING will never allow Blaine or Sherman, both of whom he devoutly hates, to be nominated by the Republicans, and the action of the Republicans in Pennsylvania foreshadows that of New York state. Grant will be the nominee of the Republican party. The "machine men" have so decreed, and they will force his nomination for a third term, despite the protests of the majority of their own party. The "machine men" know that they can lead the masses of their party by the nose for any "regularly nominated" candidate. —[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

—The toe of an enemy's boot will offend more to raise a man into prominence than the hands of a dozen friends.

The fact is unamiable that the law of the case is all with the Fusionists. Even their opponents have never dared to deny this—PLAIN DEALER.

The above is decidedly cool and decidedly ridiculous in the face of the facts known to all the world that the Republicans have claimed from the beginning that the law of the case is against the Fusionists, and the Supreme Court Justices of Maine, being appealed to, have twice decided that the law is against the Fusionists. But every paltry editor of a one-horse Democratic paper assumes to know more about the law of Maine than the Supreme Court of that state, of course!

—[Detroit Post and Tribune.]
No Democratic paper has assumed to "know" anything about the "law of Maine" beyond the text of the same, or that portion of it bearing upon the Fusion case, which has been published from time to time. That law bore out Governor Garcelon in every step he took. The statement that the Supreme Court of Maine "decided that the law is against the Fusionists" is untrue. Even the court, as degraded partisan as it is, could not go quite that far. The Justices might as well have decided that night is day, or black white. What they "decided" was—as we have pointed out several times—that the Constitution, though laying down certain things to be done in certain contingencies (there it is in black and white, as Governor Garcelon shows) was mandatory instead of directory, agreeably to which the saintly Republicans of Maine were given to understand that they might respect or disregard it just as they saw fit!

—An Alabama paper says that in the town in which it is published there is a popular tree about eighteen inches in diameter which was standing erect ten years ago. A short time afterward the tree fell, and lay prone upon the ground for a considerable period during which time a part of the top was cut up and used for fuel. No human agency has since interfered with nor in any way attempted to move it and yet it now stands erect, and is growing beautifully. It is the only instance ever known of the violation of the statement made in the Scripture that "as the tree falls so it shall lie."

"COULD NOT DO WITHOUT IT."

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y., May 14, 1878P.

Dear Sir:—I had liver complaint and a numbness of my limbs and general debility. One bottle of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic greatly benefited me. At the time I wrote you there was none in the place and I thought I could not do without it. I have recommended it to a number of my friends and they have taken it with satisfactory results.

Very truly yours,
MRS. W. A. MEAD.

Dr. Fenner's Blood-and-Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargements, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Gout, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Pain-Expeller Specific. One bottle cures all pains.

For sale by Dr. Wm. M. Mercer, Corunna, and by Dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

THE HEAD LIGHT

INDIANA, FEBRUARY, 1860.

The District of Columbia Republican Convention, which closed on Saturday night last, had a stormy session. Fights, brawls and bloody noses, were a common occurrence, and thirty policemen couldn't keep order. It was a disgraceful affair.

February, like some of the rest of us, is always short. This particular February will contain five Sundays. It began on Sunday and will end on Sunday. The next February with five Sundays in it will be in 1920.

CHARLES McClure of the Philadelphia Times, says there is not a single county or district in Pennsylvania that would declare for Grant's nomination if a free expression of the Republicans could be had. Free will subscription of the Republican politicians at that state to Don Cameron is almost past belief; but it is telling that Grant should be boosted in such a way; from the time he entered politics he became the creature of the hack politicians.

A petition was circulated last week for obtaining the signatures of the voters of this village and immediate vicinity, addressed to the Board of County Commissioners, requesting that body to change the place of voting from Sec. 16 to Cornuba. We noticed that the expression in favor of the move was almost unanimous and the Commissioners will undoubtedly answer favorably. The old plan of compelling a large majority of the voters, of the township to travel two or three miles to cast their votes is a public nuisance.

of the game, is still at large.

Mr. Geo. W. Grell is inclined to the belief that the town of Charlotte, Mich., contains one huge fraud at least. Concluding to try his luck in a patent gasoline burner sent out to agents by a firm in that place—the samples proving that it was a good thing—several weeks ago, and as there has been no response to the remittance George is of the decided opinion that the money has "gone where the woodbine twineh." Will he?

On Tuesday of the present week Dr. Mercer sold his stock of Drugs and Groceries to Messrs. Dr. Ruth & Cloyd of South Whitley, Ind. The new firm have already taken possession of the business. Dr. Ruth is a physician of many years standing, having formerly practiced medicine at Hudson in this state. BY J. C. LOVELAND.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, FEBRUARY, 1880.

NOTICE OF MEETING

Of the Democratic County Central Committee.

The members of the democratic county central committee of Elkhart county, Indiana, are requested to meet at Auburn, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 20TH, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the transaction of important business. A number of new propositions will be submitted for the consideration of the committee and it is important that every township be represented.

The following named persons constitute the committee:

B. C. WATERMAN, Smithfield township.
 E. QUINCE Butler "
 C. J. WALTER Jackson "
 S. S. SHUTT Command "
 G. H. MUNN Newville "

 W. L. BLAIR, Chairman.

The Republicans of New York hold their state convention on the 25th of this month, and will instruct for Grant.

BENNETT of the New York Herald, has contributed $100,000 to the Irish relief fund.

PENNSYLVANIA, at the Harrisburg Republican convention on the 4th, declared for Grant. The delegates were "instructed to support for the presidential nomination Gen. U. S. Grant" and to vote as a unit on all questions "that may come before the convention."

The fund for the relief of the famine stricken people in Ireland has already reached the magnificent sum of $600,000. Contributions are general and very liberal throughout the country. The returns by counties in Ireland, show that 312,370 persons are already starving, and the outlook for the coming months is gloomier than prediction has yet painted.

Carpenter were involved in a matter of settlement for money claimed by the former as wages due for labor in the latter's wagon shop.

The advertising agent of Col. R. G. Ingersoll was in Detroit the other day making arrangements for his appearance in that city. The business men refused to allow the agent to hang up the lecturer's portrait in their store windows, and at one or two places the agent was "bounced." This is rather hard on Bob.

Charles Imus is being favorably mentioned as a suitable candidate for Justice of the Peace at the approaching spring election. Mr. Imus would make a good officer, and the voters of Corunna and vicinity, irrespective of party distinction, could do no better than to put him. Esquire Finch, the present incumbent, although he has filled the office for several terms with satisfaction, is located so far out of town that persons needing the services of a Justice are placed at great inconvenience, and the change would be a public benefit for that reason only.

Local Hash.

The roads are mending.

There are two bridges across the Mississippi River above St. Louis, and seven of them are as long as the Tay bridge.

The local boys furnished street music for the League of Honor festival at Kendallville on Saturday evening last. They received no other services.

Was the Noble county wife poisoner was convicted of the crime, and received a life term at the conclusion of his trial last week. A motion for a new trial is pending, as a wife probably not be granted.

•Fader Henry Becher gave a birthday party on Saturday evening, 6th, at which there was large attendance of invited guests, and a liberal supply of eatables and drink, and all enjoyed the entertainment.

The Corunna Cornet band went up to Kendallville one night last week to play for the "Iron Chalk," a traveling theatrical troupe. They played well as usual, but the concern found itself financially stranded at the close of the performance, and the band came off empty.

Wells & Co., booksellers and stationers, who now occupy the spacious and comfortable room in south part of the national bank block, having removed their stock to the place a few weeks since. Messrs. Willis & Co. keep a large line of goods and their present location is much better adapted for their extensive business.

The key to social position is in going well dressed. A shabbily dressed man or woman is incontinentally "barred out" from good society, be he or she ever so exemplary in other respects. W. H. Yenebra, the fashionable merchant tailor, Auburn, Ind., can tell you out, young man. Call and examine the styles in piece goods and then leave your order for a nobby suit.

At Auburn last week we noticed that the Messrs. W. H. Kiblinger & Co. had taken the preliminary steps toward the erection of a new store building, which will be put up on the vacant lot corner of Main and Seventh streets next spring. The brick is already on the ground ready for the workmen to commence operations as soon as the season will permit. By energy and business tact this new store acquired a large and lucrative trade in the county. They have won the confidence of the public by strict integrity in business transactions, giving their army of patrons the benefits of low prices and square goods, unlike certain one-horse "snide" concerns, that adopt the skinning process as a means of traffic. Kiblinger & Co. are deserving of success, which they have attained simply on their merits.

The Auburn Courier says, last summer William Meeks, living in Newville township, was adjudged insane and taken to the asylum for attempting to kill his wife and children. After a short time he was discharged from the institution and returned home where he has remained since. On Monday, 1st inst., the malady reappeared and he attacked his wife and attempted to choke her to death, and threatened the entire family and to burn the house. His wife succeeded in making her escape to a neighbors. A short time afterward the house was discovered to be on fire, and the flames were not subdued until considerable damage was done. Sheriff Leas was notified and at once started in pursuit of the lunatic, but at last accounts had not succeeded in capturing him.

Bicknell's Cough and Lung Balsam is gaining quite a local reputation as a superior remedy for coughs and colds. Every person afflicted should obtain a bottle of this valuable medicine and keep it constantly in the house. It will do all that is claimed for it. Call on H. N. Bicknell, druggist, Garrett, Indiana, and get a sample bottle.

The trial of the two Spencerville burglars, viz: George Stover and Alexander McDonold, terminated on Thursday, Jan. 29th. The crime charged against them was fully proven and they were each sentenced to serve a term at hard labor in the penitentiary, the former for ten and the latter for twelve years. Sheriff Leas lodged them in Michigan City prison on Saturday, Jan. 21st.

Mr. Gettel desires to close out his present stock of Overcoats and winter clothing for the purpose of filling up with a stock of spring goods. He therefore offers to dispose of the remainder of his stock in that line at actual cost. Now is the time to secure bargains, and it will pay to give him a call while this splendid chance is open.

An unknown vessel and all hands was lost in Long Island Sound Tuesday night.

F. A. Gatschenberger of Toledo, Ohio, recently drew a prize of $20,000 in the Royal Saxon Lottery of Leipzig, Saxony.

Adolph E. Borie ex-Secretary of the Navy, died on the morning of the 5th at Philadelphia.

Dillingham, the Londonderry, New Hampshire fiend, confessed that he first shot his aunt and then outraged her. The unfortunate woman is still alive.

A Constantinople dispatch reports that during a fete a barrack three stories high, near that city, suddenly collapsed. Some 200 soldiers were killed, and 800 wounded.

At Reading, Pa., on the 4th, one Jacob Noge, being jealous of Mrs. Shackell, with whom he boarded, probably fatally attacked her with a hatchet and then killed himself.

There was a heavy snow-storm in New York state on the 24. The wind blew a hurricane and the snow-drifts were ten feet deep. All trains on the roads east and west were blocked in.

Last month Geo. Beck buried his wife in the Lutheran Cemetery at Queen county, Long Island, and Monday went and laid down on her grave and committed suicide by shooting.

The "Rev." Hayden on trial at New Haven, Conn for the murder of Mary Stannard, has been acquitted the jury failing to agree. Hayden is now at liberty on $75,000 bonds, which virtually ends the case.

There was a fire in a Chinese wash-house on Pine Street, San Francisco, on Thursday morning. It is not known how many occupants there were, but ten bodies of Chinese have been recovered from the ruins.

Howard Hackett and James Feeney were driving to Colville, Pa., with 100 pounds of nitro-glycerine when the sleigh was upset. An explosion followed and the two men and horses were killed, the sleigh demolished, and two houses and a barn, with many rods of telegraph wire, were destroyed.

A letter from Havana says: "The recent earthquake left all public buildings and most of the private houses except those of wood, in the Cristobal, in a heap of ruins. In the Vuilla Abajo sulphurous vapours took place."

General News.

—The Herald subscriptions in aid of Ireland on the 1st, amounted to $258,981.95.

—The Indiana Republican delegation to the Chicago convention will be strongly anti-Grant.

—The Greenback convention at St. Louis has adjourned to meet at Chicago June 29th.

—Queen Victoria's income is $6,300 a day. The Czar has more than any other European sovereign—$24,000 a day.

—While "pitching for the drinks" a Texan crowd got into a fight, in which two persons were mortally wounded and another's throat cut. The latter will live.

—A Winnebago, Wis., special says the entire winter wheat crop of that section will be a failure, caused by frequent freezing and thawing. Most of the farmers will plow it up.

—Two carloads of Chinamen from San Francisco passed through St. Louis Sunday en route to Philadelphia and New York. About 500 more will follow Monday.

—The man who fired upon General Mellick on the 31st is a converted Jew named Mellick. He was tried and sentenced on the 4th and hanged on the 6th.

—Connecticut furnishes the latest wonder. Mrs. George, of South Killingly, who has been dead forty-three years, dreamed that her hearing was restored. She retired the next night dead as ever, and awoke the next morning with hearing restored.

—A young man named Parker Culbertson, while cutting wood near Muncie, Ind., on Monday, 1st, felled a tree, a limb of which struck him on the head, crushing the skull and causing death in two hours.

—Her. Edward Crowley, ex-manager of the late Shepherd's Fold, convicted of cruelty to children, was taken on the 2d from the Tombs to the Penitentiary. The reverend convict was at one time chaplain of that institution.

—At dinner she had a doctor on either hand, one of whom remarked that they were well agreed, since they had a duck between them. "Yes," she broke in—her wit is the sort that comes in fashions—"and I sat between two quacks." Then silence fell.

—A through rate of fourteen cents on grain from Chicago to New York by propeller was offered at Chicago on Friday. As Marine insurance is likely to begin March 15th instead of April 1st, it is probable that heavy shipments of grain by lake will begin shortly.

—Two executions of murderers took place in Missouri on the 6th. Walter Kluwe, 25 years of age, was hanged at Mexico for shooting L. D. Williams on January 29th, 1879; and Joseph Carr at Lebanon, for killing W. H. King last September. Both were public executions and attended by great crowds of people.

—A special from the City of Mexico dated March 2d, says President Diaz gave a banquet in honor of General Grant Monday night in the National Palace. All the members of the Cabinet Diplomatic Corps, and many other persons were present. After the banquet the festival already announced took place. The Plaza was tastefully adorned, brilliantly lighted and crowded with people.

—At one o'clock Thursday morning Marsh Dyer, W. E. Ames and Dr. W. W. Wai, white men, with one Metcalf and another colored man, in attempting to row across the head of the Idle Wild, lying at Caseyville, Ind., were carried by the current against the bow of the boat and precipitated into the river. Their cries for help attracted the attention of the officers of the Idle Wild. Captain Ben Howard and Oscar Humphrey took a yawl and went to the rescue. They succeeded in saving one of the colored men. The others were drowned.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Vermont Republicans present the name of George F. Edmunds for the presidency. The Indiana Republicans favor Blaine as first choice and Washburne as second.

Mrs. George Martin is the person. Her residence is Chaplin, Conn. She killed a mosquito on the 31st of January. Mrs. Martin doesn't go around the country asking to vote. She just stays at home where she ought, and the opportunity of her life comes along.—[Danbury News.]

Mr. T. A. Hendricks has been lecturing on "Revolutions," at Evansville, Ind., and the Journal of that place in its report says: "Rising to the true height of eloquence, Governor Hendricks said: 'As for myself, I know on which side is the right, and with it I will stand, where equal and exact justice shall be ministered to all, and favoritism and partiality shall be shown to none.'"

The Herald says the Democrats are anxious for the nomination of Grant at Chicago. Of course they are. The Democrats know that they can beat Grant easier than any man the Republicans can run. If they could not beat the man who presided over the two worst administrations in the history of the country, and the dangerous animus of whose candidacy is apparent to the dullest school boy, the party should disband.—[Plaindealer.]

The Maryland Legislature has passed a bill imposing a fine of one dollar upon each person who shall "curse, swear or use obscene language on or near any street or highway within the hearing of any person passing." A proper enforcement of such a law ought to build up a fund big enough to save Maryland from the imposition of any taxes upon her inhabitants for a hundred years. It would be a good way of paying off the national debt.

Mr. Bradford, of Clinton, Illinois, sues his father-in-law to recover $5,000 from that gent as a slight compensation for the injury which the plaintiff has sustained in marrying "an incomplete and unsatisfactory wife." Mr. Bradford says that "when a man's wife has got to take herself apart when she 'retires,' a man can't help suspecting there's something wrong." In the silence of the night, as the New York Times' funny man states it, "when that part of Mrs. Bradford which had gone to bed was safely sleeping, the wretched husband arose and by the light of the moon examined the rest of her, which she had left lying on the table. That it was cork there could not be the slightest doubt, and Mr. B. sadly perceived that he had been made the victim of misplaced confidence."

DELICIA.

SHE was so exquisitely beautiful, it was actually provoking that there shouldn't be the least romance about her. Waves of pale golden hair rippled away from her pearly forehead, and were gathered into a superb knot at the back of her head. Such a blue gleamed in her sweet eyes, such a lovely pink mantled her soft cheek, such a smile parted her ripe mouth, that, well bred as you might be, you could not have refrained from staring at her; and then, thinking of strawberries and cream, have longed for a silver spoon with which to eat her.

But for all this there wasn't the least romance connected with her. Though three-and-twenty Delicia had never had a lover. She lived in a quiet farm house among the White mountains with her father and mother all the year round. She loved them dearly—was happy with them and her horse, Joan of Arc.

Joan was beautiful, high-spirited; and Delicia, who cared nothing for dancing or flirting, and could neither sing nor play, was passionately fond of horse-back riding. There was a spirit of pride and daring in her which made her a superb rider, and caused the young men of the very bare neighborhood to call her haughty. The delights of her life were the pine-scented woods, the winter landscapes of emine snow and glittering ice, the dreamy sweetness of the autumn orchards. At twenty-three Delicia had been content with an existence lived in separate solitude.

Then came a terrible calamity. Her father was killed by a runaway horse and her mother, frail and unable to endure the shock, sank slowly but surely until, one mockingly bright, beautiful day, Delicia found herself entirely alone.

Outsiders then called her cold, for no one saw her weep. She only trembled so excessively beside the open graves that old Aunt Thankful, who had nursed her dead mother, was obliged to support her from falling. Otherwise she was composed, only her sweet eyes had a look in them pitiful to see.

A change had come over Delicia's serene life; the dear home-love was gone, and the girl's content had gone. With a native courage and reserve peculiar to her she made no complaint; she asked Aunt Thankful rather wistfully to stay and keep house for her, and then turned to her books and horse and maiden meditations. But Delicia's dreams were troubled now. Life's grief had touched her; she knew that sorrow was in the world; she feared the future.

The strange, sad summer passed. One fine November day, Bob, the hired man, led Joan of Arc prancing to the door, the side-saddle on her back.

"I have to go to the village, miss, to buy the new milch cow. I'll not be back till noon. You'll not mind letting Joan stand with the saddle on a little till I come?"

"No," said Delicia, absently.

Her beautiful oval cheek was white under her velvet cap. There was a sadness quite unmistakable in her eyes as she turned Joan's head toward the hill-road.

Yet who, to have seen her beautiful, spirited figure loping along the uplands, would have divined the rare heart of the heiress of Wheatlands? She did not, perhaps, understand herself, and did not know she had asked her own soul: "Am I to be all my life alone? Will no one great and good ever ask me to be his dearly-beloved wife? If not, I shall perish off the face of the earth."

You must have guessed rarely to have guessed how deeply ran the still waters of that idyllic life. You would not have guessed it from any thing in her perfect proud face as she turned it toward a passing carriage. The occupants were a base-looking man of thirty, perhaps, and a very young and pretty girl.

A single glance told the story—that the young girl was loving and unhappy; that the man, for some reason, found her desirable of possession.

He had hard black eyes, that repelled Delicia, yet the sight of the two seated so closely gave her a vague, painful feeling of solitude and desolation which not long ago was utterly unknown to her.

The carriage glittered by, and Joan loped softly along the woody road, soundless with a thick carpet of pine needles.

She made a circuit, and came back to the main road.

Suddenly unusual sounds attracted her attention. A crash and violent screams reached her ear, and as she rode forward, a strange sight burst upon her view.

The carriage had gone over an embankment and was a perfect wreck; the horses lay prostrate—one of them killed, the other struggling desperately, but unable to arise; and prone beneath the broken vehicle was stretched the senseless body of the dark handsome man.

Over him bent the girl, screaming no longer, but sobbing violently.

Delicia slipped from her horse, and was at her side some moments before she realized her presence.

"Wallace! Wallace! For heaven's sake, speak to me! You cannot—you cannot be dead! Oh, dear Wallace—see, it is little Alta!" Only speak to me!

Then, with a despairing cry, the young girl fell upon the pulseless breast.

Then, starting to her feet to look about for help apparently, she saw Delicia.

"Oh," she gasped, snatching at her arm. "Look at him! see, is he dead? The carriage fell upon him, while I—I am not hurt at all. Oh, heaven, what shall I do?"

The white, still face told Delicia that the man at her feet would never breathe again,

WM. PARK.

Hearing wheels; she sprang back into the road, and encountered old David Green and his son, the keepers of the village hotel.

Summoned to view the scene, they disentangled the senseless body, placed it in the carriage, and turned to Delicia for further directions.

"Get a doctor immediately that you reach the village, Mr. Green. I will take this young lady home with me, and bring her back to the hotel as soon as I can put Joan to the phæton. Come with me, my poor child—I will take care of you," to the petite, white-faced girl; and throwing her riding skirt more closely over her arm, she led Joan by a short cut through the fields, back to Wheatlands.

By the way she tried to question her companion; but the girl, almost transported with grief, made such incoherent replies that she could only learn that she had been riding since the middle of the previous night, that they were on their way to Conway, that they intended to be married there.

"Were you—were you—," said Delicia, gently, in involuntarily amazement, "running away from your friends?"

Alta nodded.

"From my brother, Guy Vannevar. He did not like Mr. Monroe. Yes, we were to be married against his will, and now—oh, Wallace, Wallace!"

Throwing Joan's bridle over the gate post, Delicia led the trembling girl to the door. It was locked.

The key hung in the secret place known only to the family, for Aunt Thankful had at last executed a promise to visit a sick neighbor some quarter of a mile distant. Bob had not returned, for it wanted still an hour till noon.

To Delicia's consternation, the unhappy girl no sooner entered the warm parlor than she fainted.

With the strength of excitement, she lifted her in her arms and bore her into an inner room, where, placing her upon a bed, she unfastened her dress, bathed her temples and chafed her hands.

At length Alta Vennevar again drew her breath.

Passing through the hall to procure a restorative, Delicia saw a man just in the act of vaulting upon Joan. It was not Bob, though the saddle had been removed and lay upon the ground; it was a man in a ragged coat, evidently a tramp.

With a flash in her blue eyes, Delicia stepped back, and snatching a silver-mounted revolver from a shelf drew wide the hall door and fired.

The body fell from the man's right hand, and Joan—three steps beyond the gate—stopped.

To Delicia's surprise, the man instantly dismounted, and, turning quickly toward her, lifted his hat.

"I am effectually stopped, young lady; but, believe me, I did not intend to steal your horse, and certainly left an equivalent, though now in a sorry condition."

Bewildered still more by the courteous words and cultured tone, Delicia turned in the direction the stranger pointed with his left hand, and saw within the yard a dusty buggy and jolting horse.

"I am trying to overtake my young sister, who has eloped with a scoundrel," said the man, who was both young and handsome, "and my horse broke down hopelessly before I reached your door. Otherwise, in less than an hour I would have probably overtaken my sister before she was married and her life ruined. So near the object of my long and desperate drive, I could not be balked of its object for want of a horse. I knocked three times at your door, intending to beg to hire yours, which I saw, fresh, waiting at your gate, but for some reason I could summon no living being. Knowing that my horse was more than equal yours in value, though almost killed by hard driving, I resolved to take him, and, after overtaking the man who is running away

WHAT PAYS BEST

AFTER HARVEST,

Is a serious consideration of its cost and profits, and how to economize by combining your own experience with that of others in farm labor.

Only $1.15 a Year,

Will place you in possession of the only newspaper that gives the actual experience and experiments of practical farming."

"The Cincinnati WEEKLY ENQUIRER is the medium through which producers of every class may know their own experience, and seek that of others."

"The best teacher of farming, is the farmer himself. A fact fully demonstrated in the department its pages a week, devoted to the farmer and his household in the WEEKLY ENQUIRER."

"Every department is complete."

"It is worth $100.00 a year to farmers, but costs only $1.15."

"The best is the cheapest."

"There is none better."

"It is the best political friend the people have, and is a constant reminder upon the principles of justice and equity to all."

"It is the original greenbacker."

Such are a few of the many compliments paid to the Cincinnati ENQUIRER by the press throughout the country.

The merits of its editorials, agricultural, political, correspondence, literary, telegraphic news and commercial departments combine to make it all that is required in an A No. 1, first-class family journal.

from me, to instantly restore your property to you; but"—with a little bitter laugh—"you have effectually prevented that. I think I am bleeding to death."

His voice closed faintly; the blood was spitting from his wrist. He sank upon the step at her feet.

Delicia's cheek grew white; for she knew the danger of that terrible bleeding. Unless it were stopped, the man in a few moments would be dead.

Springing to the side of the now unresponsive stranger, who seemed unable to utter another word, snatched her handkerchief from her pocket, and tying it about the wounded arm, inserted a stick picked from the ground, thus making an effectual ligature, and to the abatement of her terror, saw the frightful jets of blood subside.

The stranger's white face, the deluge of red blood, the sudden relief from spurring terror, turned Delicia taint. Then she struggled hard against a reeling sensation, and held her own.

She thought wistfully of the glass of cordial upon the hall table, but her feet refused to stir.

Suddenly steps sounded at the gate. To her inexpressible joy and thankfulness, Aunt Thankful and Bob appeared.

Delicia explained to the former, briefly, though her voice sounded far away to herself.

"Wounded—hurt—bleeding awfully! Bob, ride for a doctor as fast as you can go!" cried the old nurse, instantly in her element.

The wounded man was making visible efforts to keep from swooning, but when Aunt Thankful had administered a cordial and bathed his temples in cold water, he arose and walked weakly into the house, where, at her solicitations, he stretched himself upon a sofa, and then unexpectedly fainted.

"I don't in the least understand who this man is," remarked Aunt Thankful, steadily applying restoratives, "but such a ragged coat and fine shirt I never saw together before.

Wanted to hire a horse did he? What did you shoot him for? Of all strange actions—"

The driving of the doctor's buggy into the yard stopped her remarks. When Delicia returned to Alta Vennevar, she found her in a wandering delirium.

Three strange days were devoted to nursing the invalids. A burning fever made the young girl unconscious.

Aunt Thankful's charge was conscious but very weak and silent. Indeed, he seemed to himself to be in a dream half full of delights, but pervaded by a great trouble which he could scarcely name.

The radiantly lovely face of Delicia, the rustle of her dress, the sound of her footsteps precluded his consciousness like a blessing, while his desperate quest and misfortune were only half realized by him in the bodily weakness and inaction of brain caused by excessive loss of blood.

"How long have I been here?"

Delicia sat by him, having taken Aunt Thankful's place for a few moments, and started from a momentary absence of thought to find Guy Vannevar's eyes fixed piercingly upon her.

"This is the fourth day." Are you better?"

"I am not sick, only in a sort of dream which I cannot awaken myself from."

"You are very weak."

"It was you I saw when I first came here, weren't it?"

"It was I who shot you," replied Delicia, blushing.

"I—I remember. Oh, my sister Alta!"—trying to rise upon his elbow.

"Lie down, please. You must not exert yourself. I have something to tell you," said Delicia.

"I have been here four days, you say. Good God; what will become of her?"

"Drink this coffee and try to be quiet. Alta is safe."

"How can you know?"

"I have her in my care. Wallace Munroe is dead—accidentally killed."

"And they were not married?"

"No."

"Thank God."

And then he asked:

"Are you sure of this?"

"Entirely sure."

He could talk no longer, but was visibly better in a few hours.

The next day pale, wasted, but strong, in a simple earnestness, he said, quietly, to Delicia:

"How wonderfully beautiful you are!"

Something in his eye kindled hers, and for the first time in her life Delicia felt within her pure breast the warmth and sweetness of love.

Half alarmed by her emotions and the growing power of the beautiful eyes bent upon her, she rose from her place beside him.

"You can see Alta to-day you know, if she is better. I will go and see."

Alta Vannevar was better in body but suffering in mind.

She looked like a living wraith in one of Delicia's long wrappers, and turned from her brother's kiss and sat down in Delicia's lap like a tired child. "Oh, if I could die! I know you love me, Guy; but you do not love Wallace. And he is dead. Oh, Delicia, you understand—you are a woman. I loved him!"

Guy Vannevar looked down on the two figures, buried in the great easy chair, the serene woman folding the suffering child to her bosom, and a look inexpressibly filled his soft, dark eyes. And Delicia, glancing up, saw it and knew it was for her.

I cannot tell you how in a few days these two grew together; but when Guy Vannevar had told her of his position as a gentleman and the son of a gentleman, and discarded his disguise, which had facilitated his pursuit of Wallace Munroe, the atmosphere of mystery and suspicion was entirely dispelled, and as weeks and months brought their developments and occurrences, Delicia realized that the CONSTITUTION—14TH CLAUSE OF SECTION 22, ARTICLE 4.

Reads as follows:

In relation to fees and salaries.

AMENDMENT NO. 5.

Provides for adding to the clause above given, so that it would read as follows:

In relation to fees or salaries, except the law may be made as to grade the compensation of officers in proportion to the population and the necessary services required.

CONSTITUTION—SEC. 1, ARTICLE 1.

The judicial power of the state shall be vested in a supreme court, in circuit courts and in such inferior courts as the general assembly may establish.

Provides for striking the words, "such inferior courts" and substituting the words "such other courts." The section amended will read as follows:

"The judicial power of the state shall be vested in a supreme court, circuit courts, and such other courts as the general assembly may establish."

CONSTITUTION—ARTICLE 13.

Reads as follows:

Sec. 1. No negro or mulatto shall come into, or settle in the state after the adoption of this constitution.

Sec. 2. All contracts made with any negro or mulatto coming into the state contrary to the provisions of the foregoing section shall be void, and any person who shall employ such negro or mulatto, or otherwise encourage him to remain in the state, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars.

Sec. 3. All fines which may be collected for a violation of the provisions of this article, or of any law which may hereafter be passed for the purpose of carrying the same into execution, shall be paid to the negro and mulatto, and their descendants, as may be in the state at the adoption of this constitution, and may be willing to emigrate.

Sec. 4. The general assembly shall have the power to carry out the provisions of this article.

AMENDMENT NO. 6.

Strikes out the entire thirteenth article, and in lieu thereof inserts the following:

"No political or municipal incorporation in this state shall ever become indebted, in any manner, or for any purpose, to an amount in the aggregate exceeding 1 per centum on the value of taxable property within said corporation, to be ascertained by the last assessment for state and county taxes, by virtue of the imposing of such indebtedness, and all bonds or obligations in excess of such amount given by such corporations shall be void; provided that in relation to any foreign taxation, of other great public concern, on petition of a majority of the property owners, in number and value, within the limits of such corporation, the public authorities, in their discretion, may incur obligations necessary for police protection and defense, to such amount as may be requested in such petition."

"CALLED" FOUR POUNDS

ALBANY N. Y., Sept. 14, 1871.

Dr. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—I had been suffering with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Nervousness, General Debility. A dozen different remedies did no good. My whole body was spotted as an adder. Mr. David S. Crane, Rochester, N. Y., who is carried away by your remedies advised me to take your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic. I have taken 12 bottles and with it I could see the effect. I have gained 10 pounds. I owe you and Mr. Crane both debt of gratitude. Yours truly, J. H. S.

EUGENE S. SATLER

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it for it regularizes and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Splenic Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility. Restores flesh and strength where the system is running down for going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Olden Rheum cures any pain, as Toothache, Neuralgia, Calf or Headache, in 15 to 20 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's All-Pain-Disposer Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Rath & Cloyd, druggists, Corunna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrettsville, Ind.

The officers of the bar of the DeKalb Circuit Court and the officers of DeKalb county met pursuant to adjournment at the Court Room Thursday, March 7, 1880, present His Honor C. A. O. McClellan, Circuit Judge, presiding, and thereupon the committee on resolutions made the following report, viz:

The committee appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the high esteem in which the late G. H. K. Moss was held by this body and the great loss each feels in his death, beg leave to report the following:

Resolved, That while we lament that death came out and hid him down at the early age of thirty-two, yet we are grateful that his conceded talents, his great energy and industry and his unimpaired integrity, early recognized and always appreciated, had already enabled him not only to acquire a competency for his relatives and friends, a name more enduring than marble.

Resolved, That the death of the Bar has lost one of its most esteemed members; the officials of this county one of their most efficient officers, and the community one of its brightest ornaments, and the community at large one of its best citizens.

Resolved, That his widow be assured that her deceased husband was held in the highest esteem by each member of this body and that each sympathizes with her in this hour of bereavement.

Which upon motion of W. H. Pills was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

On motion it was ordered that the secretary of this meeting send a copy of the above resolutions to the editors of each paper published in this county with the request for their publication and also that he deliver a copy of the same to the widow of Mr. Moss.

And thereupon the meeting adjourned sine die.

Democratic Congressional Convention.

Delegates from the several counties constituting the Twelfth (12th) congressional district of Indiana, will meet in convention at Auburn, Ind.,

THURSDAY, APRIL 27th, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate to be supported for representation in Congress.

Allen	20
De Kalb	13
Lawrence	6
Madison	12
Madison	12
Whitley	10

By order of the democratic congressional committee,
J. C. O. McLELLAN, Chairman.

J. W. BAXTER of Butler has been appointed by the County Commissioners Clerk of the Court, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Moss.

FRANKLIN Thos. Jordan will be a candidate before the democratic caucus the 26th for a re-nomination. Mr. Jordan has served the public faithfully and he will and should be chosen the second term.

The Grant boomers propose to make a demonstration in the South. The New York Tribune says:

On the return of General Grant from Mexico it is intended that he shall land in New Orleans and make a triumphant progress through the Southern states. The white people of that section are expected to treat him with marked consideration and respect. They are being depended upon to give him, in the most available way, assurance of political support, and thus to revive the Democratic party, about which there was so much talk a month or two ago. In all likelihood it is believed that the colored men of the South will make an enthusiastic demonstration in favor of the General, and that the whole proceedings will have such an effect on the canvass for the nomination as to make the success of any other candidate entirely out of the question.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

Esquire Finch will rent his farm and settle in town this spring.

Milo Calkin has decided not to abandon the place of his nativity and settle at the town of LaPorte.

Daniel Chilcote and Albert Harding are making the fur fly through the county newspapers.

In our last issue we quoted wheat at $1.50, which should have read $1.25. The recent heavy rains have effectually put a temporary stop to the traffic and for the past week there have been but few loads offered, the price ranging at from $1.24 to $1.26.

The egg and butter market has been somewhat dull this season in consequence of the unfavorable condition of the roads; still our produce merchants, Messrs. Lupton & Co., have kept their wagons constantly on the road. As we go to press this firm quote butter at 15c and eggs at 8c.

The Cornet band gave an enjoyable entertainment at Garrett, Ind., on the 28th ult., at which there was a large turn out of the townspeople. Calkin, our shaggy cousin from Cornum, and leader of the band at this place, was the chief attraction of the entertainment; by his excellent solo performance on the cornet. Milo is a brick.

The Cornum school will close to-day for the winter term. There will be an exhibition by the school at the M. E. Church this evening, which should be attended by all of our citizens. The programme arranged for the evening is an attractive one and will afford a rare treat. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

The spring elections will take place on the first Monday in April, which will be the fifth day of the month. The following officers are to be chosen in Richland township: One Justice, 1 Assessor and 1 Land Appraiser, 2 Trustees of the Peace and 2 Constables. The democratic nominating caucus will be held on Saturday, 20th inst.

Our townsman Mr. Jacob Becher has matured his plans for establishing a stove factory at this place, for the manufacture of a barrel material, such as staves, headings, etc., and has already commenced the work of getting out the timber for the erection of buildings for that purpose. Such an enterprise cannot fail of meeting with success if properly managed. There is an abundance of stove timber in this section and ample railroad facilities for transportation. Mr. Becher is a young man of enterprise and energy and will no doubt succeed in the undertaking. We expect to have every thing in readiness for operation by next fall.

UNION SOLDIERS ASSOCIATION, POST NO. 1.

We, the members of the Union Soldiers Association, Post No. 1, Auburn, Indiana, in regular meeting assembled, do unanimously adopt the following preambles and resolutions as a tribute of respect to the memory of our comrade Geo. H. K. Moss, and as a testimony of our sense of the merits of that high character which distinguished him in public and private life.

WHEREAS, God in his providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our esteemed friend and fellow citizen, Geo. H. K. Moss.

WHEREAS, Our association, while it bows in christian resignation to the Divine summons which has called him to his eternal home, yet we cannot suppress the feelings of regret for the loss of one whose support contributed to the advancement of our order and the material interest of our commonwealth, and

WHEREAS, We feel the deepest sorrow for his widow in this her affliction, now therefore be it—

Resolved, That in the death of Geo. H. K. Moss our association has lost an honored member and friend. In the dark days of our country he proved his zeal in the cause of the Union by honorable service under the starry flag of freedom.

Resolved, That virtue is a reward unto itself. He made virtue his own, won the love and esteem of his comrades and fellow citizens, and by the integrity of his official life gave proof that courage is not barren of good examples.

Resolved, That we hereby express our condolence with the widow of the deceased and our sincere sympathy for her in the bereavement of husband and friend.

Resolved, That the secretary in hereby instructed to enter these preambles and resolutions in the record of the association and request the publication of the same in the press of the county.

CROWN, INDIANA, MARCH, 1890.

Township Democratic Conventions.

In accordance with a resolution adopted by the county democratic central committee, at a meeting held in Auburn, February 20, 1890, the democratic voters of DeKalb county are requested to meet at the usual places of holding elections in their respective townships (except in Union township) on at 2 o'clock p.m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following township offices, said candidates to be voted for at the township election, to be held on the first Monday (5th day) in April, 1890.

The officers to be elected in the several townships are as follows:

TOWNSHIPS	Justice of the Peace	Assessor and Land Officer	Trustee	Commissioner
Butler	1	1	1	1
Jackson	1	1	1	1
Concord	1	1	1	1
New Village	1	1	1	1
Stafford	1	1	1	1
Wilmington	1	1	1	1
Union	1	1	1	1
Newark	1	1	1	1
Richland	1	1	1	1
Fairfield	1	1	1	1
Smithfield	1	1	1	1
Franklin	1	1	1	1
Greene	1	1	1	1

The convention (or caucus) for Union township will be held at Waterloo, at 1 o'clock p.m., on the day above named, as agreed by the precinct committees for said township.

In addition to the nomination of candidates, it will be the duty of the democratic assembly, to choose a township (or precinct) committeeman, who shall be, by virtue of his office, a member of the county central committee. At the same time a secretary and such other officers as may be desired necessary for the vigorous prosecution of the campaign in the township shall be selected. A copy of the proceedings of such convention, together with the full office address of each officer elected and candidate nominated, shall be forwarded to the chairman of the county central committee, not later than Monday, March 22, 1890.

THE democratic committeemen of the various townships in the county had an interesting meeting at Auburn on the 20th ult. Although only intended as a business meeting quite a large number of democrats were in attendance, showing that the democrats are wide awake and realize the great importance of the present campaign.

In conversation recently with a leading Republican of this place respecting the probabilities of Grant being nominated at Chicago, he took emphatic grounds against the third term proposition and declared if they (the Republican "machine" men) forced Grant upon the party they may elect him, meaning of course that he would vote for him. But he will do it at the same time.

We publish in another place the full text of the proposed amendments to the constitution of Indiana as passed by the last general assembly, and which will be submitted to the voters of Indiana for adoption or rejection, at the April elections (to be held on Monday 5th day). We ask of this reader a careful perusal of the proposed amendments so that all may vote intelligently upon the subject.

A convention of Greenbackers from DeKalb county was held at Waterloo on the 21st ult. Among other things the convention advised the old political parties to disband and invited to join their organization. In point of numbers the convention had a fair representation, and evidently the bon are getting ready for battle. Mr. J. S. Holly was chosen a delegate to the St. Louis national Greenback convention.

The executive state committee have issued a call for a state democratic convention to be held at Indianapolis, Wednesday, June 9th, 1890. The voters of Indiana, regardless of past political affiliations, who are desirous of co-operating with the democracy in the support of its principles and nominees, are invited to participate in the meetings called throughout the state for the purpose of self-representation to attend the convention.

AN OLD BOAT.

I passed a boat to-day on the shore,
That will be launched on the sea no more.

Worn and battered, the stoutest keel bent,
The side like a funnel rampant rent;

For who could steal such a useless thing?

It was stately once, when the shipwright stood,
Had laid each plank as the master planned.

And it danced for joy on the curling wave
When first the sea's broad breast it cleave

And it felt the power of the well-timed stroke,
That rang on the thair-pole of the tumbled oak.

Oh! it has earned none the spoils
Of others, worn with righting sail and toil;

And often in summer days it knew
The laugh of a pleasure-seeking crew;

On launched by night on the thumping waves,
It has rescued a life from the sea's dark graves.

It is useless now, as it lies on the beach,
Drawn high beyond the billow's reach.

And indeed it will be served in a new Kismet, for it now, in its loneliness

A record of Some Which Have Made a Mile a Minute.

Knights' "Mechanical Dictionary" records that Stephenson's Rocket traveled at the rate of sixty miles an hour over sixty years ago, when the art of building locomotives was in early infancy. The same authority gives 81 miles to 61 minutes, made by a special official train on the New York Central Railroad, as the fastest time ever made in the United States. Scarcely inferior is the record of 72 miles in 73 minutes, made by a train between Lima and Dayton, including two stops. The best English record is 13 miles in ten minutes, or at the rate of 78 miles an hour and one mile in 46 seconds. The special train which carried Queen Victoria, the decision of the government in the Trent difficulty in 1862, ran 131 miles in 144 minutes, or at the rate of 54½ miles per hour. These are exceptional cases, however, and if there is any train in the world which proposes a regular schedule time of 90 miles in ninety minutes, with no deductions for any cause—which is a very different thing from the occasional rate of a mile a minute—its existence is not generally known. Probably the fastest train in England is that between London and Swindon, on the Great Western Railroad, which travels at the rate of 53½ miles per hour. The Northwestern road runs a train from London to Rugby, at the rate of 48½ miles per hour, and the Great Northern Company one from London to Peterborough at the rate of 50 miles in 60 minutes. The London Holyhead, or "Wild Irishman," train runs only at the rate of 43 miles. Probably the fastest French train is the one which runs from Paris to Marseilles at the rate of 40 miles an hour on the Berlin and Hamburg road, a train covers the 67½ miles between Spandau and Stendal at the rate of 42 miles an hour. Americans need not be ashamed to add to the record the Pennsylvania Railroad train between Jersey City and Germantown Junction at the rate of 40 miles per hour, and the proposed train taking the average of the whole distance, at the fastest regular train running.

THE COCOANUT.

How the Fruit is Secured and Handled.

Vessels loaded with cocoanuts leave the coast of Africa and touch nowhere until resting in Berling Slip, but the taller and neater ones run between New York and Cuba and the West Indies. Cargoes are secured there, not a cargo of natives would be there here. The Captain can deal with those who will order to fill his ship so much, or he can employ agents deal directly with the natives who keep a business of buying fruit. The alle's fruiter will carry one hundred used cocoanuts in bulk. They are jumbled into the hold the same as apples and, though they do not pack so, make a heavy cargo. Some a few thousand out of a cargo is husked, but the main lot is loaded of husked nuts, ready to be on the head with a hatchet.

During the last of November the coconut market was "short" on coconuts. Soon after December first vessels loaded down with this fruit came in a bunch, glutted the market, and prices went clear down. I write in the cabin of a fruiter which took 14,000 cocoanuts in the West Indies, with the hope of being the first to get the short market. Head winds held her four days. Had she been days sooner in Burling Slip she would have cleared several thousand dollars. It is the will not come out of the ten vessels I brought over 14,000 cocoanuts in addition to other cargo. The fruiter having been warped first, and made fast, planks from the wharf over her rail, and the help stand ready, and the tub into the hold after the cargo. As it comes up the hold emptied into bushel baskets, and the mate and carried by hand to the wharf and received by stout men. If you imagine the light ones, just pick up a nut and see if your back

The Hood Orphan Memorial Fund,

GENERAL G. T. BEAUREGARD,

New Orleans, 1880.

The entire proceeds arising from the sale of this work are devoted to The Hood Orphan Memorial Fund, which is located in United States Registered Bonds, for the nurture, care, support and education of the ten infants deprived of their parents last summer at New Orleans, (the melancholy incidents of which sad bereavement are still fresh in the public mind) in the following manner:

The book is an elegant octavo, containing 360 pages with a fine photographic likeness and a fine steel engraving, made expressly for this work, four large maps of battle fields, bound in handsome Gray English Cloth, at THREE DOLLARS, or in a Fine Sheep Binding, with Marbled Edges, THREE DOLLARS & FIFTY CENTS. In Half Bound Morocco, Library style, FOUR DOLLARS, or in best Levant Turkey Morocco, full gilt sides and edges, FIVE DOLLARS.

On the receipt from any person remitting by mail or express, of the amount in a registered letter or by a postal order, bank draft, or check, a copy will be immediately sent free of postage, registered as second-class matter.

This volume is published in the best style of typography, on elegant paper, with illustrations, executed as highest specimens of art.

The author, the subject, the purpose, all alike render it worthy a place in every library—on every desk—or upon the book shelf of every house in the country.

Agents wanted in every town and county in the United States, and a preference will be given to honorably discharged veterans from the army.

To the ladies, who feel a desire to express their sympathy with the Hood Orphan Memorial Fund, the sale of this book among their circle of friends, will afford an excellent way of contributing substantially to so deserving a cause.

hair doesn't come up as you straighten your spinal column. It is slow, hard work. The nuts were brought by count and the consigned will not receive them in any other manner. Those intended for city trade and factory use are hauled away in wagons, and those to be shipped to other markets are sacked on the spot. There is but little waste in such a cargo. Perhaps one nut in two hundred is broken in the loading, and these halves or pieces are cast to one side when brot out. Those who receive and empty the baskets at the rail are the counters, and if a dozen nuts have been extracted from the cargo while en route the fact is brought out. Ten vessels, sixty sailors and one hundred and fifty laborers have been employed in the handling of this heap of 1,000,000 cocoanuts here at Burling Slip. Factories will use a part, giving employment to hundreds of boys and girls, freight and express hands will handle a share, and before the whole are consumed 1,000 people will have earned daily bread through handling them.

"How much are these goods a yard?" said a gentleman in a dry goods store the other day, as he picked up and examined a piece of ruffled silk. "Good gracious!" cried the horrified clerk, "that isn't for sale! That's the end of a lady's train. She's just gone up to the third story!"

"Do you know who I am, sir, that you dare to talk so to me?" said an irate father to an impotent young hopeful. "Yes, I know who you are," was the reply; "but Mr. Brown who lives next door don't, for I heard him say only the other day that you were an old ass."

The following remarks, respecting the jewelry store of Mr. J. Abright, Auburn, Ind., we clip from a late number of the Courier, with an unqualified endorsement:

The above bearing allusion to the jewelry store of Joe Abright, which has just been habilitated a delicate tint and beautifully polished and grained, presenting the appearance of a little palace. The work was done by John Canine, to whom it does great credit, as a person need not draw on his imagination to say that the workmanship is artistic in every particular, and as for the goods in stock, we advise everybody to visit Mr. Abright's store and be assured of the variety, beauty and excellence of his watches and clocks, jewelry, musical instruments, etc. Mr. Abright is an enterprising business man, and he will always be on top in his line of business.

Last summer when the question was in every one's mind whether the Great South City was again to be afflicted with yellow fever, the whole country was startled by the announcement that among its half dozen or more victims were first the lovely young wife of the brave Confederate General J. B. Hood, followed by the death of the General himself, leaving two little babies to the cold charities of the world. The women of the South and North alike arose to the appeal to their charity and a subscription list was opened, but with no great result comparatively. The late warrior was on the point of publishing his Narrative of Personal Experiences in the United States and the Confederate States Armies. The book has just been published by his comrade General O. T. Benuregard, the entire proceeds going to the sole use and benefit of The Hood Orphan Memorial Fund, as set forth in another column.

Green's Lady's Book for MAY opens with several pages of Christian Reid's new novel, "Rosie's Fortune," which is anxiously expected by all subscribers, and well repays the interest it excites. There are also various sketches in prose and poetry, a feast of literary treasures, and the new serial, "Glengharth," is continued. This serial, as is informed by Mr. R. B. Benjamin, the gifted author of "Hilda and Lily," a novel exciting much attention in the literary world. "Glengharth" is one of her best efforts. The steel plate, colored fashion plate, are beautiful, and there is page after page of attractive fashion matter. It will send the Irish Lady and Lady's Book one year for $2.00.

TWO YEARS AN INVALID—CURED.

New BETHLEHEM, Pa., July 12, 1865.

Dr. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—About two years ago had an eruption of the skin and swelling of my upper lip and both legs. I could not wear a boot for nine months. I also had a bad cough for fifteen years. I began the use of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic with your Salt Rheum Ointment and Cough Honey in February last. I improved so fast that I commenced work the first of March. The cure is complete, no trace either of the cough, eruption or swelling remaining.

Yours truly,

J. M. SEYLER.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The Conqueror here" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Splen, Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Catarrhism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain in Coughs, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, and so on. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

A large meeting of anti-Grant Republicans was held at Louisville, Ky., on Tuesday night last, which appointed delegates to the St. Louis Convention. Many prominent Republicans were present.

WHENVER the Republicans in Congress show a disposition to interpose obstacles in the way of an early adjournment, the Democrats only need to threaten to offer an anti-third term resolution. The alacrity with which the Republicans will agree to get away at the very earliest possible moment, and the energy with which they will push business along will soon bring the session to an end.

THE Ohio Convention, which meets Thursday, is regarded with great interest by Democratic partisans, as it is recognized that the value of Ohio will be potent in determining the result next fall. Being the only state voting in October the fact is recognized that a Democratic victory at that election would make the election of a Democratic President in November certain. The vital importance of nominating a candidate acceptable to the Ohio Democrats is recognized and the expressed wish of the convention Thursday will be awarded great weight. As Bismarck grows older he says he likes to work better and better, and experiences a constantly decreasing disinclination to retire to the comforts of home. This is out of the ordinary. The American office-holder is not of that bent of mind to any alarming extent. There is Balfour, Consul-General at London for instance. A scandalously lenient government permits him to leave his official duties for six months to lounge around home in order to leisurely complete his "History of General Grant" under the General's coaching. Can the reader imagine such a state of things in the civil service of England, Germany or France?

The Congressional Convention.

Harmony and Good Feeling Prevailed.

(Auburn Courier.)

In accordance with the published call, the Democrats of the 12th congressional district met in convention at Auburn, on Thursday, April 20th. The convention was called to order at 10:30 a. m. by Judge C. A. O. McClellan, chairman of the district committee. On motion of Judge Lowry, Mr. J. B. Stoll, the Legionier Banner, was made chairman of the convention, who, upon taking the oath, returned thanks for the honor conferred on him, and spoke in unmistakable language of the fraud of 1877. He referred to the poor prospects in this district and in the State, and urged harmony and good feeling and a burial of personal considerations in all party matters.

Messrs. E. L. Chittenden, of the Ft. Wayne Sentinel and Phil. Colerick, of the Ft. Wayne Journal, were made Secretaries.

The following resolution, offered by E. L. Brown, of Whitley, was adopted:

Resolved, That the plan of organization recommended by the state central committee be adopted for the management of the campaign in this district.

Dr. D. M. Marshall, chairman of the Whitley county delegation, then offered the following resolution on behalf of the entire delegation from that county, and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, The county of Whitley having cast the casting vote in the congressional election at the city of Fort Wayne on the 4th day of June, 1878, for Hon. W. G. Colerick of Allen county, whereby he was nominated for Congress in the 12th district, now through her delegates to this convention to give out instructions to the Whitley county democratic convention, offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That Hon. Walpole G. Colerick, Allen county, present representative in Congress, by the purity of his private and public life, by his devotion to democratic principles, his fidelity to the interest of the poor people of his district, and by the ability manifested in the discharge of his official duties, has proven his fitness for the place he occupies; he is therefore hereby selected and nominated by this convention, as the first and unanimous choice of the democratic party of the 12th congressional district for congress. (Signed) D. M. MARSHALL, E. W. BROWN, I. B. McDONALD, H. C. PRESSLER, A. J. STOUTS, BENJAMIN RAUPFER.

Dr. G. W. McConnell, of Steuben county, moved to amend the motion of Dr. Marshall, so as to make the sentiment expressed in the resolution, that of each and every county in the district. The amendment was accepted and the whole was adopted by a rising vote amidst loud and prolonged applause.

The chair declared Walpole G. Colerick to be the unanimous choice of the democracy of the 12th district as a candidate for congress.

"Little Henry," a brother of the nominee, was loudly called for, and came forward and returned thanks to the convention for the honor conferred upon his brother, who was unavoidably absent on this occasion, owing to the small democratic majority in the lower house of congress, caused by the absence of a number of members. Henry is a very pleasant and interesting talker, and withal an honorable gentleman.

Judges Holman, of Indianapolis, and Long, of Warsaw, being present, were called out declined to speak on political issues, owing to their official position, but as they are both candidates for the supreme bench they were glad to have an opportunity to meet the democrats in the 12th congressional district; and by the way, allow us to suggest that the DeKalb county delegation to the state convention, can do no better than support both of these gentlemen for the positions they ask. Mr. Holman is in the 3d district, and Mr. Long is in this (12th) district. Judge Lowry being present his numerous friends called him out and insisted on a speech, inasmuch as the people know his ability to deal in politics and law without mixing. The Judge devoted a few moments to the positions occupied by the two great political parties, and the danger that would result from a violation of the established principles of George Washington concerning a third term of the presidency. After short speeches by Col. I. B. McDonald and Dr. Marshall of Whitley, Mr. Ballou of LaGrange and Mr. Free, Kelley of DeKalb, the convention adjourned with three hearty cheers for Hon. Walpole G. Colerick.

THE OHIO DEMOCRATS IN COUNCIL.

The Democrats of Ohio met in convention at Columbus on last Friday to appoint four delegates at large to the national Democratic convention to be held at Cincinnati June 22d. The best of feeling prevailed among the delegates and other Democrats. Hon. Frank H. Hurd, present member of congress from the Toledo district, and who is regarded as the leader in the House of Representatives, presided as temporary chairman. Upon taking the chair he made a ringing speech, which was received with rapturous applause. As Ohio is the only state voting in October next, attention will be called in that direction by the two great political parties, making Ohio the battle-ground, and whatever the result may be it will have a powerful influence on the final contest in November. Hon. Allen G. Thurman was made the choice of the convention for presidential candidate with but little opposition. The following resolutions were adopted amidst great enthusiasm:

Resolved, That the Democratic party of Ohio recognize the long service and great ability and the steadfast advocacy of constitutional liberty which has marked the career of Allen G. Thurman and confiding in his resolution and fitness for the chief executive of the republic, we cordially instruct the delegates at large this day appointed and request the district delegates chosen by the several districts of the state to present to the national Democratic convention the name of this tried statesman as our candidate for President of the United States and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

C. Resolved, That in order that Ohio may have the full influence and power in the national Democratic convention to which her position in the Union entitles her we hereby instruct the Ohio delegation to that convention to cast the vote of the state as a unit.

Resolved that we recommend the national Democratic convention to adopt the two-thirds rule in the nomination of candidates.

The Congressional convention at Auburn on the 29th was composed of some of the finest talent in the district. The meeting was free from anything like the pow-wow element so characteristic of Republican assemblies in different parts of the country since the radical camp has been torn asunder by personal animosities and political jealousy. The large body of democrats assembled together in council that day menot business and their deliberations were conducted in perfect harmony and with enthusiastic ardor in view of the bright promise of victory they swallow them in the near future.

The name of D. D. Moody, Esq., of Auburn Prosecuting Attorney for this Judicial circuit has been favorably mentioned in connection with the position of Representative in the Legislature. We do not know whether Mr. Moody would accept the nomination if tendered him, but if he would consent we know that his election is a certainty. Mr. Moody is a young lawyer of marked ability, and an indefatigable worker in the party ranks.

The Waterloo organ of the DeKalb Republicans last week contained a silly editorial on the Auburn Democratic congressional convention. The editorial is a silly attempt at wit and sarcasm, and it is only necessary to put it down to the credit of a radical newspaper jackass of the dump-hood order.

Uncle Sam's Tilden, the quiet gentleman of Gramercy Park, has the satisfaction of knowing that he compels the whole Republican party to stand guard every night all day for fear of him.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial writes on second hand Ohio delegates to the Cincinnati convention about thirty for B. F. Payne.

The question with Republicans is to find a candidate for President who will not have to be defended for some rascality from the start.

For Congress—W. G. Colerick.

The unanimous re-nomination of Hon. Wapole G. Colerick, of Fort Wayne, for congress by the congressional convention at Auburn on the 29th ult., was the crowning feature of a grand day's work, and the action of the convention will be ratified by the democracy of this district at the ballot-box. Mr. Colerick is the present member, and by his honesty and faithful devotion to duty and untiring efforts in behalf of democratic principles, has proven himself a tried and true patriot. In this connection we re-publish from the Fort Wayne Sentinel the following commendatory article in reference to our gallant standard bearer in the present congressional race:

"The nomination was one eminently fit to be made. Mr. Colerick is a noble and brilliant young man, a talented lawyer, a close student and an effective orator. He is now serving his first term in Congress, and has an excellent record for a new member. He has not attempted to make capital by indiscriminate speech making, but has worked faithfully to advance the interests of his constituents on all occasions. He has been faithful and regular in attending the sessions of the House, always casting his vote in accordance with the principles of the Democratic party, and the desires of his constituents. His committee service has been incessant and indefatigable, and being a member of one of the most important committees of the House—that on elections—his work has been arduous and exacting."

Mr. Colerick has certainly well earned the endorsement of a re-nomination and a re-election. He will make a brilliant canvass of the district and will undoubtedly be re-elected by a handsome majority.

At the corporation election in Auburn on Monday, 3d inst., the democrats were successful in bearing off the banner of victory, every man being elected by hand vote may it be. The Republican ticket was made up from the very best material in the party, and to each of the victory has a greater significance. Both parties contending for supremacy on strictly party issues.

Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in DeKalb county will meet at the court-house, in Auburn,

SATURDAY, JUNE 5th, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices to-wit:

Representative; County Clerk; County Auditor; County Treasurer; County Sheriff; County Recorder; County Surveyor; County Crooner; County Commissioner, north district; County Commissioner, south district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1880, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler twp. 10 delegates	Jackson twp. 10 delegates
Conners twp. 21	Newville twp. 8
Stanford " "	Wadsworth " 19
Avonport prec. 30	Watson prec. 10
Wasson twp. 17	Franklin twp. 21
Franklin " 12	Franklin " 9
Tracy " 6	Keyser " 26
Total 214

The democrats of each township and precinct will, at the same time (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August, 1880.

W. L. BLAIR, Chairman.

THOS. REED, Secretary.

In a late number of the Auburn Courier we notice the announcement of the name of Hon. Freeman Kelly, of this county, as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor, subject to the decision of the Democratic State Convention. We can heartily endorse all that the Courier has to say in presenting the claims of this gentleman for the position. It will be remembered that Mr. Kelly made the race for congress a few years ago against John R. Baker, and lacked only 40 votes of defeating his opponent in a strong republican district.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

Charley Wiseman, the cabinet maker, is sending out his stock of Furniture with the view of returning to his former home in Ohio. Charley says that Corunna is a good town for a mechanic to starve in.

If you enjoy the flavor of a fine cigar, (and who don't!) just drop in at Joe Lansing's, Auburn. There you will find a carefully selected stock of groceries, besides having the pleasure of making the acquaintance of the urbane and gentlemanly proprietor of the establishment.

Attention of the 1000 readers of this paper is respectfully directed to the latest importation at Austin & Co.'s Boot Upside Down. It may seem like a wild statement, nevertheless it is a fact, that Austin has the largest stock of Boots and Shoes in seventeen counties of this congressional district, and 10,000 cost price is not an over estimate. All new and hobby styles at Austin's.

At the top of another column will be found the advertisement of Isaac Loeb, wholesale and retail grocer, Kendallville. Mr. Loeb is the leading grocer of the city, and is always at the top of the market in quantity, quality and prices of goods. Corunna people will do well to make a note of this fact, and when at Kendallville lay in a supply from the stock at this mammoth establishment.

The Corunna Flouring Mills changed hands last week, Isaac Bechtel having traded property with Beck & Summers, proprietors of the Eagle Mills at Auburn. The new management went into effect on Monday, and Mr. Bechtel has already taken possession of the Eagle Mills. Messrs. Beck & Summers are practical millers and undoubtedly will maintain the fair reputation which the Corunna Mills have gained under Mr. B.'s ownership.

The editorial den of the HEAD LIGHT was enlivened one day last week by a call from Charley Beugnot of Auburn, and Johnny Provinces of Spencerville. The former is a candidate for Treasurer, and the latter a candidate for Clerk before the county Republican convention. These gentlemen came up here for the purpose of looking after the condition of their finances. If our Republican friends think it worth the trouble to put a ticket in the field this fall, we could not name two gentlemen in the party more deserving of the honor of making the race for the respective positions above mentioned, than Messrs. Provinces and Beugnot.

Undoubtedly the most extensive and attractive retail clothing, Merchant Tailoring and Hat and Cap house to be found anywhere in northern Indiana, is that of the Messrs. Engel & Co. of Kendallville. From a small beginning over fifteen years ago, these gentlemen have grown into a mammoth concern, occupying two stories in one of the largest buildings on a principal street of that city. Engel & Co. are emphatically CLOTHIERS in the true sense of the term and they are perfect masters of their business. Anything, from the finest fabric to the commonest grade in Men's, Youth's and Boy's clothing, ready made or built to order in the most fashionable and perfectly fitting manner, can be had at this well known and popular house. We call attention to their advertisement in another column of this paper, and suggest that the reader give them a call when visiting Kendallville, and examine their goods and learn prices.

Dr. HICKNELL'S Compound Cathartic Pills.—These Pills are carefully prepared from the choicest Vegetable Extracts and have been fully tested in all the various Diseases incident to a Bilious Climate, and found to be far superior to any other Medicine ever offered to the public. They are not like many of the quick nostrums of the day, recommended for the cure of every "ill that flesh is heir to," but, if timely administered, will be found very efficacious in Bilious and Remittent Fevers, Fever and Ague, Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, and all other Diseases where an aperient Alternative or Cathartic is required. ## The Improved Spring Bed Bottom

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

Away with trouble, for itsstead,
And buy a good Spring Bottom Bed.
If you want something for comfort and rest,
You will find the Peerless the best.
With gradual descent from head to feet,
For ease and comfort they can't be beat.
The springs are one hundred and seventeen,
A number bed you never seen.
The Best bed is all the go,
Just try one and then you'll know.
When you lie down on one to rest,
You'll feel yourself greatly blest.
Charley, whose air name is Knapp,
Is driving springs with lots of snap.
Early and late his hammer must go,
He works all over from head to toe.
In this the truth we try to tell,
For all those you know must go to bed.
If your patience I have tried I beg pardon,
And buy your Spring Bed of Alfred Harding.
He drives a span of well matched bays,
He will be along in a few days.

COSCORDIA, INDIANA, MAY 15, 1893.

We will be satisfied with Grant, Blaine, Washburn or Blaine. They tower so high above Tilden, Hendricks, Bryan and any other opposition candidate, as high as the highest tree above the most meadow in honesty, conviction, patriotism and general worth to the country. —Hicksville (a) Independent.

The above paragraph is a fair sample of radical newspaper "cheek." About two-thirds of the Republican papers extol the virtues of the two first named pinks of "honesty" and "patriotism," and the balance kick like jackasses. And they do it with as much impudence as a courtesan would flaunt her infamous signal for patronage on the public thoroughfares. "Out of Thine Own Mouth Will I Judge Thee." This radical brother evidently had omitted to freshen his memory on the records of Grant and Blaine for "honesty and conviction" before he wrote the paragraph else he would not have "stopped over" in the effort. Let us see. Blaine sold his influence as speaker of the House of Representatives to a thieving railroad clique, and has for years been connected with the vilest den of thieves at the capitol. Grant, if not directly a party to the iniquity surrounding his two last administrations, he at least permitted himself to be controlled by the Robersons, Bellhops, Shepherds, vulgar corrupt-bushes who were the confidential enemies. In the light of these facts is it any wonder that Chairman Hubbard, of Kentucky, — a delegate to the Chicago convention — at the St. Louis and Grant Convention on Thursday last remarks the fallacy of Grant's two last administrations to "suppress or diminish dishonesty in the nation's affairs," which had raised the debated question whether dishonesty was a "taint" in the party which supported that administration? Mr. Evenden is wasting his gun on the desert air when he points up on behalf of either Grant or Blaine. Take heed by the admonitions of the old party before you make another reckless shot in that direction.

Thirty men claim copy of the fifty right delegates in the Pennsylvania delegation.

The Texas delegation is for Grant.

Will Murphy has returned to town and is working at the brick and tile yards.

Colkin shipped a lot of lumber to Kendallville Tuesday.

We contracted fifty dollars worth of advertising whilst at Kendallville on the 11th.

May 30th is the day set apart for decorating soldier's graves. As the 30th comes on Sunday, the ceremony will take place on Monday, June 1st.

Bill Little has made another "scoop" on Nye the Sedan horse jockey. Not long since he traded him a billy-goat for a mustang pony and now Nye is mad.

A brace of chimney-sweepers were in town on Monday. They paraded the streets in darkey costume, driving a horse that looked as though it had been fed on scrap-iron and groomed with a brick-bat.

Miss Emma, daughter of Robert Dykes, of Kendallville, a gentleman well known to business men of this place, was married in that city on Tuesday last, to Mr. Wise, of Nebraska.

The man who will refuse to take his home paper, and at the same time subscribe for a half dozen foreign papers, ought to take down his sign, retire from business and travel as agent for a bed-bug exterminator.

Messrs. Bonyon Brothers, Kendallville, druggists, are wholesale dealers in Kerosene oils. Buyers can get the article of them already inspected, on short notice, and in any desired quantity.

Dan Chilcote denies our assertion that the Democrats have made gains in Richland township, and advises us to keep posted. Inasmuch as Dan is good (?) authority on almost anything, we may occasionally ask permission to refer to his political scrap-book. Dan is a fit representative of a truthful and never varying organ, and of course a radical won't prerogative, neither will a duck swim.

While at Kendallville last Tuesday, we were surprised to see so many people in town at this busy season of the year. The streets were crowded with teams and the business places appeared to be thronged with customers. Kendallville is, beyond a doubt, the smartest town on the M. & E. line road. It is the vim and push of her business men that makes it so. Nothing like enterprise in building up a town.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

COOPIUM, INDIANA, MAY 15, 1888.

We improve this opportunity—as we shall issue but one more paper before the meeting of the county convention—to remind our democratic friends that it will be wise to consider seriously the material that shall comprise the make-up of the ticket to go before the people next fall. Let every man chosen be above suspicion and reproach, and not lacking in competency. In this county, where the margin is small and every inch of territory debatable, the Democracy cannot afford to carry a galvanized corpse, or coach through a dead weight. Let the party take warning by the humiliating disaster of 1878. All that the Democracy have to do is to nominate a strong ticket and the road to success is open before us. The enemy is unscrupulous; and he will leave no means unemployed to bear off the flesh-pots and honors. The time has passed and gone forever when a democrat will follow the leadership of party, and vote the ticket right or wrong, regardless of the soiled reputation of a candidate. That is now left for the opposite party to do. True, love of party is as strong as ever in the democratic breast, but honesty and purity of purpose predominates over all other considerations. An unexceptionable ticket and thorough organization, together with energetic and incessant work, from that time until the closing of the polls on election day, will insure a glorious victory.

A bolt of the Grant delegates in the Cook county (Chicago) convention the other day, possibly may be the means of collapsing the Grant boom. There was a fearful wrangle among the two factions which almost terminated in a riot in the convention. It is more probable however that it is the beginning of a larger bolt that will split the Republican party in twain. If Grant is forced on the convention next month in the manner it is now evident his managers intend to force him, there will be a bolt, a second convention, and a disruption of the party like the one that occurred in the Democratic campaign of 1866.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

The Kendallville brewery is gaining the ascendancy over rival establishments, for its excellent quality of lager, under the management of Mr. Wichman.

For a superior job of House Painting or Graining, we can recommend William Murphy of Auburn. He has had a large experience in the business, and performs his work well.

A young man by the name of Geo. Griswold, residing at Kendallville, while boating on Bixler lake last Sunday was drowned by falling out of his boat. He was intoxicated at the time of the accident.

As James Crummy and John Hosler of this place were driving along the road in a buggy near Stone's Corners they were suddenly brought to a halt by a small tree or sapling falling across the buggy directly in front of them. The tree had become loosened at the roots where it was growing on a hill-side and happened to topple over as they passed. It was large enough to leave its mark, and had it struck them the consequences might have been serious.

Four citizens were startled last week by the report that J. Lipsett & Co. grocers and produce shippers had "gone under" or rather made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. These various creditors had been previously notified, and all met on Friday last for consultation and adjustment. After considerable wrangling the conference broke up, the parties failing to agree among themselves upon a division of property. Lipsett & Co. offered to settle at 40 cts on the dollar and the others, from "all claims so that they could resume business." The best offer offered to take 25 cents and permit Lipsett to go ahead. Trentman & Co. of Port Wayne, seemed to be actuated by a spirit of pure goodness and hung out for the lion's share. As the matter now stands Lipsett holds the fort. (Beck having withdrawn from the firm) and is still doing business as usual. Mr. Lipsett offered everything honorable to effect a settlement and the principal creditors were disposed to favor him. The cause of the embarrassment is attributable to heavy losses in shipments of produce.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The Republican journals continue to amuse themselves with speculations about the physical condition of Mr. Tilden. It is difficult for the Republicans to get Mr. Tilden out of their guilty consciences.—Plain Dealer.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is of opinion that while all the Ohio delegates to the democratic national convention will vote for Senator Thurman, a majority of them are ready at any time to vote either for Tilden or Payne. There is quite a sprinkling of straight-out Tilden men in that delegation.

The Indianapolis Journal dares the democracy to carry the question as to whether the amendments were constitutionally ratified before the supreme court. The challenge should be promptly accepted. We are of the opinion that a party can well afford to demand that the letter and spirit of the constitution shall be rigidly adhered to.—[Ligonier Banner.

The test of the Grant strength in the convention will be on the question of maintaining the unit rule. If the Grant men have a clear majority over all opposition they will vote to enforce the rule. If they have not it will be broken. In that event they say they will get more votes from other delegations which were instructed for other candidates than they will lose. Their slate shows Grant to have three hundred and ninety-five votes in the convention.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Mr. Hayes makes haste to say that he most positively will refuse to accept a nomination for another term. He is anxious to lay the burden down, and would not take a second term, even, says Mr. Hayes, if it were offered to me on a silver platter. It is sincerely hoped that 20 indiscreet persons will ever after this tempt Mr. Hayes by offering him a second term, on a silver platter. We have never heard that anybody has offered him a second term. On a silver platter, or otherwise, but since he has gone to the trouble to make this solemn declaration it may be that some foolish person has done so. But it ought not to happen again. If Mr. Hayes wants to lay the burden down, he must forbid that he should be hindered.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Drinking Ice Water.

There is no more doubt that drinking ice water arrests digestion than there is that a refrigerator would arrest perspiration. It drives from the stomach its natural heat, suspends the flow of gastric juice, and shocks and weakens the delicate organs with which it comes in contact. An able writer on human disease says: "Habitual ice water drinkers are usually very flabby about the region of the stomach. They complain that their food lies heavy on that patient organ. They taste their dinner for hours after it is bolted. They cultivate the use of stimulants to aid digestion. If they are intelligent they read upon food and what the physiologist has to say about it—how long it takes cabbage and pork and beef and potatoes, and other meats and esculents to go through the process of assimilation. They roar at new bread, hot cakes, and fried meat, imagining there to have been the cause of their maladies. But the ice water goes down all the same, and finally friends are called in to take a farewell look at one whom a mysterious Providence has called to a clime where, so far as is known, ice water is not used. The number of immortal beings who go hence to return no more, on account of an injudicious use of ice water, can hardly be estimated. — Baltimore Sun.

The dowry of Mrs. Charles H. Norris, daughter of Hon. Daniel Wells, of this city (the marriage was reported in the Times last week), is probably the largest ever given in the West, and consisted of: a check for $100,000, $500,000 in United States bonds and $150,000 in stocks in iron companies and mines in the Peninsula of Michigan, making a grand total of $750,000. The statement is undoubtedly made because of the exaggerated statements at first published to the effect that Mr. Wells had endowed his daughter with $2,000,000 in cash. — Michigan Dispatch to the Chicago Times.

Chippings.

—The next time you punch a hole in a silver quarter, recollect that two years imprisonment and $2,000 fine are your due by the law of the land.

—As every thread of gold is valuable, so is every minute of time; and as it would be great folly to shoe horses (as the Roman Emperor Nero did) with gold, so it is to spend time in trifles.

—Daniel McFarland, who shot Albert D. Richardson, and who latterly lived at South Bend, is a pauper in Leadville and an inmate of the County Infirmary.

—It doesn't pay a sheriff in this state to hang a man. His fees are only 45 cents in a hanging case, 35 cents for reading the death warrant and 10 cents for making returns.

—Mr. and Mrs. Bloomer, the latter the inventor of the Bloomer costume for women, recently celebrated their fortieth wedding in Council Bluffs, Iowa. They formerly lived in Seneca Falls, New York.

—E. P. Weaver, an Indianapolis undertaker, who has a contract for interring the pauper dead of that city, is charged with having, for the purpose of gain to himself, buried five infants in one coffin. The matter is undergoing investigation, and if Weaver is found guilty as charged, he should be dealt with as rigorously as the law permits. — Wabash Courier.

—Captain Howgate's Arctic expedition, by which he expects to reach the north pole by gradual approaches, forcing a colony along year by year, as far north as possible, is in a very fair way of leaving here this summer. The government will furnish officers and sailors to man the vessel, and material for the colony is offered in provision. Captain Howard hopes the vessel may leave by the last of this month. It will go as far north as possible on the Greenland coast, establish a colony, and return to go again next year.

Heartloss.

William Smith, an old man eighty-one years old, one of the old settlers of Kosciusko county, and for many years, one of its most respected and wealthy farmers, recently attempted to commit suicide at the county house of that county. The cause of this attempt at self murder on the part of Mr. Smith was in consequence of the heartless and outrageous treatment he had received at the hands of his children. The Indianian in a scathing article draws a picture of the total inhumanity that robbed this old man of his property, and then left him to starve or become a county charge, while his children, in the friendliness of their nature, roll in comfort, ease and wealth. Some years ago the children of this Mr. Smith induced him to convey his property, which was large and valuable, to them on condition that they should provide and take care of him and his wife during the remaining portion of their lives. Having secured the property, the old man was shifted around from place to place until he was finally cast off, and brutally deserted by his children, and left in the last days of his life a vagrant and a county charge. As the Indianian says: "A blessing, withering, and dying shame for the children and grand-children who have eaten out by substance, despoiled him of his home, and while they fatten on the ill-gotten blood money they have filched from his grasp never give a thought to the barren wretchedness of his lonely life. Language fails to express the enormity of this crime against God and nature." The depths of human depravity and heartlessness can reach no lower level. Although he will recover from his attempt at self-destruction, he declares that he has no desire to live, and wants to die. Lafayette Register.

"Ah fine bustling wife," said George, the week after his marriage. "If your husband were to die, what would you do?" "I don't know," said George, and the wife, reflectively, "I never thought of that. I must look in my Book of Etiquette and read the rules for young widows!"

Discovery of North America.

A Wall street broker laid a wager one day that Christopher Columbus discovered the continent of North America, and, of course, lost it. It is surprising how many intelligent persons entertain the same error. Knowing that he discovered a number of islands in the western hemisphere, they think he must of necessity have discovered the continent also. They forget that he died in ignorance of the grandeur of his achievement, believing Cuba, Terra Firma and other islands he had found, to be remote parts of Asia. Amerigo Vespucci, after whom North and South America is named, did not discover this continent properly, either. The land he discovered lay near the equator, and he, too, was deluded with the notion that it was a portion of Asia. John Cabot was the discoverer of North America (some suppose in May, 1497), which he likewise supposed to belong to the dominions of the Grand Cham. He sailed along the coast for 300 leagues, and went ashore, without finding any human being, although he believed the country to be inhabited. It is remarkable that the three great discoverers of the western world should all have been Italians. Columbus having been born in Genoa, Vespucci in Florence, and Cabot presumably in Venice. The birthplace of Cabot is uncertain as are his age and the place and time of his death. But the fact that the license granted him by Henry VII. calls him Cabotto, Venetian, would seem to determine the question of his nativity. The discoverer had a sorry fortune. Columbus, as we are aware, was treated with the blackest ingratitude by the King of Spain. When officers of the vessel on which he was carried, a prisoner, to Spain offered to remove his chains, imposed upon him by royal order, he replied, "I will wear them as a reminder of the gratitude of princes." He died, as everybody knows, neglected, in extreme poverty, of a broken heart.

Vespecci had many trials and died poor, and Cabot fell into such obscurity that no one can tell how or when or where he died. Surely the auguries attendant on the birth of the western world were not favorable, and in a superstitious age might have led to the belief that its history would never be marked by good fortune.

That Boy.

Little Rock Gazette.

The other day a lady, accompanied by her son, a very small boy boarded a train at Little Rock. The woman had a care worn expression hanging over her face like a tattered veil and many of the rapid questions asked by the boy were answered by unconscious sighs.

"Ma," said the boy, "that man's like a baby, ain't he?" pointing to a bald-headed man sitting just in front of them.

"Hush," said the lady.

"Why must I hush?"

"After a few moments' silence, 'Ma, what's the matter with that man's head?'

"Hush I tell you. He's bald."

"What's bald?"

"His head hasn't got any hair on it."

"Did it come off?"

"I guess so."

"Will mine come off?"

"Sometimes, maybe."

"Then I'll be bald, too, I?"

"Yes."

"Will you care?"

"Don't ask so many questions."

"After another silence the boy ex-

"Ma, look at that fly on that man's head."

"If you don't hush I'll whip you when we get home."

"Look there's another fly. Look at 'em fight, look at 'em."

"Ma, Ma," said the man, putting aside a newspaper that was lying around.

"Ma, Ma," said the boy, "that young b'yan."

The woman blushed, stammered out something and attempted to smooth back the boy's hair. "One fly, two fly, three flies," said the boy innocently, following with his eyes a basket of oranges carried by the newsboy.

"Here, you young hedge-hog," said the bald-headed man, "if you don't hush I'll have the conductor put you off the train."

The poor woman, not knowing what else to do, boxed the boy's ears, and then gave him an orange to keep him from crying.

"Ma, have I got red marks on my head?"

"I'll slap you again if you don't hush."

"Mister," said the boy, after a short silence, "does it hurt to be bald-headed?"

"Youngster," said the man, "if you'll keep quiet I'll give you a quarter."

The boy promised and the money was paid over.

The man took up his paper, and resumed his reading.

"This is my bald-headed money," said the boy. "When I get bald-headed I'm going to give boys money." "Mister, have all bald-headed men got money?"

The annoyed man, threw down his paper, arose and exclaimed: "Madam, hereafter when you travel, leave the young gorilla at home. Hitherto I always thought that the old prophet was very cruel for calling the she bears to kill children for making sport of his head, but now I am forced to believe that he did a Christian act. If your boy had been in the crowd he would have died first. If I can't find another seat on this train I'll ride on the cowcatcher rather than remain here."

The bald-headed man is gone, said the boy and the woman leaped back and blew a tired sigh from her lips.

YOUNG MEN

—A lady of Chatham, North Carolina, had a gold watch and finger ring which she often expressed a desire to be buried with whenever she was dead. Finally she was taken ill and her attending physician pronounced life extinct. At her burial her desire was complied with and the second night after interment a white man and a negro went to the grave and dug up her body. As they took the lid off the coffin and the darkey began pulling the ring she rose up. At this the men took flight and ran away. Finally the negro went back and she made him go and get the white man. Both of them then go home with her. Her husband fainted when he saw it thinking it was her ghost. She is still yet.

It Grant is the patriotic and strongly sensible man he is claimed to be, is it not strange that he permits himself to be made a stock jobbing "point" by a faction of political gamblers? Enough has already transpired to show that the demand for his candidacy is neither general or respectable. The Grant movement is engineered entirely by the men who tainted the public service from 1868 to 1877. Every element of character and worth in the Republican leadership is opposed to it. Only a few days ago a convention of independent Republicans assembled in St. Louis to protest against the indecency and danger of a third term. Prominent representatives were present from New York, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, Iowa and Kentucky. In short the opposition to him in his own party is widespread and commanding. Yet he is stubbornly unabashed. The wife of the ex-President once remarked, "Mr. Grant is a very obstinate man." She might have added that he is a very greedy man. All pretense that Grant is not actively promoting his canvass has recently been demolished by published letters of his in which he announced his unalterable purpose to "stick." It is the fatal step of his life. Whether successful at Chicago or not he has deliberately chosen to wallow in the mire of corrupt politics, and henceforth will take his place with the foul birds with whom he flattered in the days of his power. The Democrats welcome him as an opposing candidate because they can beat him, but that will not prevent them from making the most of his character as an exemplar of the modern Federalism. The final vindication of American republicanism will be wrought next November. If there were not good assurance of this, the outlook of the struggling democracies of the Old World would be dark. What would they think, for instance, if the American people should elect an Executive pledged to practically subvert the institutions of the country.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Republican papers have all figured it down to a nicety just how the delegation will stand in the Chicago convention. The fact that no two of them agree shows that even journalism is not infallible.

BLOTCHES, ROUGH SKIN, PIMPLES.

A. S. J. B. ROCHESTER, N. Y., Feb. 15, 1878.

Dr. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—A young man here has had a terribly diseased face for many years. He had never been able to get any relief until he began taking your medicine. He is now on the sixth bottle of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic, and his face is entirely well. Yours truly,

MRS. L. C. SMITH.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it; for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Bileousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its cause.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhoea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures. For sale by Ruth & Co.'s drug and Co. Coruna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

I loved you dearer than I did my own life. I have made preparations to leave this world. I want to be buried in the lot in the graveyard reserved for me, and at your death I want you to lay alongside of me." ## Frederick's Industry

A visit to the extensive People's Remedies manufacturing establishment of Dr. M. M. Fenner reveals the fact that the sales of his popular medicines have more than doubled since December last, month by month, over any preceding year, though he has been known for years as doing a very extensive business in the way of manufacturing and shipping his remedies all over the world. This increase appears to have no reference to any so-called "business boom," but is the natural and legitimate outgrowth of a more intimate and extended acquaintance on the part of the people with the intrinsic merit and excellence and curative capabilities of his rare medical combinations. He has steadily increased his manufacturing force and extended his facilities until they are now fully double the capacity of one year ago. We notice he is getting off to-day one of the largest shipments he has ever made to any house outside of New York city. The purchasers are Messrs. Morrison, Mumler & Co., of Chicago, one of the most enterprising, popular, successful and extensive drug houses of the west, and the salesman is Dr. H. Q. Simon, well known here as the genial, able and popular general traveling agent of "People's Remedies." The doctor was not originally a medical man, but by his long service in Dr. Fenner's employ (he has literally grown up with "People's Remedies," coupled with his close application to business, native ability and good sense, together with his extensive experience and observation, have conspired to render his prescriptions of "People's Remedies" infallible in the alleviation of disease, and have really earned for him the title of "doctor," by which he is now known. ### Democratic County Convention.

Delegates from the several townships in this county will meet at the court-house, Auburn, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following offices to-wit:

SATURDAY, JUNE 5th, 1880,

Representative; County Clerk;
County Auditor; County Treasurer;
County Sheriff; County Recorder;
County Surveyor; County Coroner;
County Commissioner, north district;
County Commissioner, southwest district.

The convention will transact such other business as may come before it.

SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

In accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the county central committee, all democrats and others who intend to support the ticket nominated by the convention above named, are requested to meet at the usual voting place in their respective township or precinct, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1880, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of selecting delegates to the county convention, in accordance with the following apportionment, based upon the number of democratic votes cast for secretary of state at the last state election:

Butler twp. 10 delegates	Jackson twp. 18 delegates
Concord twp. 21	Newville twp. 8
Madison twp. 10	Wilmington " 19
Auburn " 30	Waterloo prec. 10
Richland twp. 17	Paired twp. 21
Snodgrass " 10	Franklin " 9
Snodgrass " 10	Keyser " 2

Total..... 124

The democrats of each township and precinct will at the same time, (May 29), appoint one delegate to the judicial convention to be held at Kendallville on the 6th day of August 1880.

W. E. BLAIR, Chairman.

Thos. Rupp, Secretary.

—Another instance of the enterprise of Ruth & Cloyd the druggists, is made manifest by the appearance of a handsome soda fountain which they have just put up in their store.

—The citizens of Waterloo have decided to observe Decoration day on the 30th, and accordingly a committee has been appointed to make arrangements for such services on next Sabbath.

—We have received from the secretary, Programme of exercises of the Fifth Annual convention of the DeKalb county S. S. Association, which will be held in the U. B. Church at Waterloo, on the 7th of June. All Sunday school workers are cordially invited to attend and participate in the exercises.

—Godey's Lady's Book for June is a most attractive number, full of good things from cover to cover. The illustrations are superb while the literary and fashion departments are replete with entertaining and useful matter. The literary department is very fine, fully up to the usually high standard of the magazine. Every department is well filled with the matter most attractive to those for whose use the Book is designed—the ladies. We will furnish the HEAD LIGHT and Godey's Lady's Book for $2.25 on application at this office.

—The Book so long expected of the late General F. B. Hood is now just published and the delay in well repaid by the beauty of the style in which it is prepared and published for the sole benefit of the "Hood Memorial Fund." It is called "ADVANCE AND RETREAT—Personal Experiences in the Armies of the United States and Confederate States," contains two portraits (one a fine heliograph photograph, the other a fine line engraving), four fine maps of battle fields, 360 pages, 8vo, well printed, handsomely bound. Write to General G. T. Beaurgard, New Orleans, for all the particulars, or better, send in a postal order or registered letter, three Dollars, and have a copy sent to you registered postage free, and then ask your neighbors to subscribe for it. Why not?

Letter from Arkansians.

The following letter, written by Stephen A. Masters a former resident of this village and well known to our citizens, was received too late to appear in last issue. Mr. Masters is now residing in Arkansas and the letter contains much useful information descriptive of that country, whither immigration is rapidly tending. - Ed. HEAD LIGHT.]

CHARLESTON, ARKANSAS,
May 6th, 1880.

MR. J. C. LOVELAND, Sir:—Having a little time to spare this pleasant May day, I thought I would write you a few lines from this the garden spot of Arkansas.

We are living in the southern part of Franklin county, Arkansas, three miles south of the flourishing town of Charleston, and our residence is situated at the foot of Potatoe Hill, a brief description of which and the surrounding country to be seen from its summit I propose to give to you; and which if you think worthy of publication you can publish in the HEAD LIGHT, several copies of which we have received from friends and were much pleased with.

Potatoe Hill is situated about twenty miles south-west of OZARK, and about 22 from Ft. Smith; south-east, and it is about 10 miles from the nearest point on the Arkansas River. It is situated about the center east and west of the prairie of the same name. It is a regular cone shaped elevation, nearly 100 feet in height. That is above the level of the prairie. It is covered from base to summit with small trees and shrubs, at this time of the year of deepest green, but in the autumn all the colors of the rainbow, there being some 18 or 20 different kinds of trees and shrubs on it. On the summit of this hill is level ground entirely destitute of vegetation and is about 20 feet in diameter. It is accessible from all sides, but in some places would be very difficult of ascent on account of the thick growth of under brush and vines, and it is also in some places quite precipitous.

In quite an undertaking to reach the summit, but you are repaid by the grand view that is spread before you. Looking north you see the whole of the prairie spread out before you. Then on across an intervening strip of timber in which Charleston is situated you see a Grand Prairie which is appropriately designated that is bounded on the north or further side by Hickory Ridge, which is the first elevation. Then coming next in view are Mill Creek Mountains, just this side of the Arkansas river. Then beyond in succession comes the mountains of Troy, Bayne and the Boston mountains, all parts of the Ozark Range. Then north-east you see two detached mountains, called Short mountains, which are of similar appearance. Then looking east, first you see Pine mountain 2 miles off, after which comes range after range till the view stops with Majestic Magazine, with its great white rocket gleaming in the sunlight and which are plainly visible from here, a distance of 30 miles. Then all along to the south range after range meets the eye as far you can see. Then looking to the southwest over an intervening country of forest and prairie you see in the far distance "Sugar Loaf," across which runs the line of the Indian Territory. Then to the far west the view extends into the territory, which completes the circuit except that a great deal is left unmentioned. The circle which is thus visible from the summit of this hill is over 300 miles in circumference. No one must think from this description that this country is all mountains, for there are large tracts of intervening country that are fertile prairie and timber land.

Now if any of my former friends and acquaintances ever visit this part of Arkansas let them call at our humble residence and they will be made heartily welcome and I will very willingly accompany them to view the places of interest in our vicinity.

Yours very truly,
S. A. MASTERS.

When Secretary Sherman receives the nomination at Chicago or not, the record he has made in the Treasury Department is something that he and his friends may feel proud of. [Warren Republican]

Secretary Sherman has indeed made a fine record in the Treasury Department. It is a record that smells to high heaven. Let the great financial wrecker of the nineteenth century, the tool of the bond holding aristocrats, and who how fallen on his ill-gotten gains, receive the nomination of Chicago by all means. The people will consign him to oblivion next November.

Weamer vs. Loveland.

Weamer has again stepped out upon the street and got off his squirt-gun. The last shot from the masked battery of the Auburn Smut Machine is a clincher. The fellow is a regular Sweeping Terror of the Desert. It seems that our beloved Radical brother has volunteered to act as our Uncle Pumblechook and admonishes us to "be grateful to those who brought us up by hand"—i. e. on the bottle. And now he accuses us of borrowing a nickel of him to buy a drink with. O Weamer, thou streaked, striped, bespangled and bedeviled specimen of the jackass creation. This scrap of information must have created a buzz of merriment at Auburn town where Weamer's impecuniosity is notorious, and more especially among the poorly paid staff of that old concern, where we venture to say, haven't seen a nickle for a month. Even if what he says is so, it was base ingratitude to "steal" an of five. Let us compare Weamer's present condition with his former condition in life's desert. About fifteen years ago, while we were publishing the New Era at Auburn, as an Autumn evening was closing in, there came along a poor, bare-foot, hungry tramp printer. We generously fed, lodged and groomed him down, but having no work for him that time, the next morning we secured his passage on the hack line then running between Auburn and Port Wayne, and sent the poor printer on his way rejoicing. In the place of the poor tramp printer, we had a fine, well-dressed, and successful man, who had made his fortune by an untiring turn of the wheel of fortune in one of the above and looks for a nickle, which he gets accompanied with a pair of trousers, a shirt, a pair of shoes, in the described manner. Now, if the dung him hicks of the Auburn Smut Machine, such is life. Of course we never expect him to pay back the money, but if he were inclined to be honest, he would give us credit for accounts for the lastest nickel. Weamer has so long been a public officer, a Republican Party, that he imagines his brother craftsmen are as impecunious as himself. 'Tis well; let the organ grind, and while there is music the Radicals will dance to the tune of stinking Weamer. "We thought Weamer had smoothed down his feathers," since General Blair bombarded that particular part of his individuality that most resembles two Boston crackers by the aid of a microscope. His features carry about the same expression. He invariably looks as though he had just been ticked, and ought to be kicked again, a traveling specimen of one who carries a damaged rear that sadly needed repairing. Then all hail the slumebriing volcano of the Republican, the bright and shining light of the Radical camp, who "shines and stinks, and stinks and shines, like a rotten mackerel by moonlight." Inasmuch as Weamer is a professed temperance man he ought to temper his lectures with charity and not strike an erring brother when down. And under the circumstances it is to be presumed that Weamer never drinks anything strong "just for his stomach's sake." Oh, no, he simply fills up on the tramp from a demijohn which he carries home, and remains "staving gone blind" for 10 hours.

National Democratic Convention.

The executive committee of the national democratic committee issues the following call:

The national democratic committee, having met at the city of Washington, February 2nd, has appointed Tuesday, the 23d of July next, at noon, as the time, and chosen Cincinnati as the place of holding the national democratic convention.

Each state is entitled to representation therein equal to a double number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. All Democratic, conservative and strong efficient United States, prospective or past political positions of difference, who conclude with the object of a pure, national government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention. At the last national democratic convention, held in the city of the Louisiana, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the national democratic convention, this conference to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to continue the two-thirds rule in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such request in the call for the next convention.

WILLIAM H. BLANCH, of Connecticut, Chairman.
FREDERICK O. PRINCE, of Massachusetts, Secretary.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, MAY 30, 1880.

BELOW will be found a list of the delegates chosen at the Richland caucus, in the county convention, on Saturday last.

N. McIntyre, L. W. Treesh, Dr. H. Ruth, L. D. Britton, M. Franks, R. Sheppey, C. B. Kagey, J. R. Scott, Peter Treesh, Z. Dawson, Jas. M. Goetschius, G. I. Patterson, G. Mathews, Geo. Beard, John Merica, J. L. Smith, J. Becher.

J. C. O. MYERS, editor of the Kendallville Standard—and a decided vicious target of the Radical persuasion—charges the editor of this paper, with having deserted the Democratic party during the late war, and joined the Republican party for a monied consideration. Now everybody acquainted with Mr. Myers and the circumstances of the case, knows that he lies like the devil. We did no such thing. Like thousands of other Democrats we cut loose from party lines and allied ourselves to the so-called "Union party," organized for the sole purpose of sustaining the war for the Union, and in so doing were drawn into the "no party" trap set for Democrats. We are not repentant of our course in sustaining the soldier of the rebellion on the field of martial conflict, but our youth and inexperience of the time just answer as an apology for permitting ourselves to be deceived into such an abhuration with a gang of political tricksters, gamblers and harlots, who have ruined the country. The petty and malicious lies invented and set afloat by Myers as political capital, is too thin for practical purposes.

MILLER, the efficient agent of the L. & M. S. Railroad at Corunna is a candidate for Treasurer of DeKalb county. If Mr. Miller secures the nomination at the hands of the Democratic party he will be elected as he is highly thought of by the community about Corunna, and where he is known. Kendallville News.

Sound logic and every word of it true. Our townsman, Mr. Laf. J. Miller, has been a resident of the county for about seventeen years, and for the past ten years at least in the employ of the Railway company as general agent. As a business man he ranks A 1, which admirably fits him for so important a position. An unflinching Democrat, his valor has been tried on more than one sanguinary field. He has many friends here in both political parties. This commendatory personal notice is not intended to disparage other gentlemen who will come before the convention seeking the same position, as they are all worthy men.

Announcements.

SHERIFF.

J. J. VanAuker's friends will present his name, and ask that he be nominated for Sheriff by the Democrats of DeKalb county, in convention assembled.

TREASURER.

The democratic friends of L. J. Miller, of Richland township, will announce his name in convention as a candidate for county treasurer.

AUDITOR.

The many friends of John W. Dill, of Concord township, will announce his name in convention as a candidate for county Auditor.

Dr. Bicknell's Compound Cathartic Pills.—These Pills are carefully prepared from the choicest Vegetable Extracts, and have been fully tested in all the various Diseases incident to a Bilious Climate, and found to be far superior to any other Medicine ever offered to the public. They are not like many of the quick nostrums of the day, recommended for the cure of every ail that flesh is heir to, but if timely administered, will be found very efficacious in Biliousness, Remittent Fever, Fever and Ague, Costiveness, Indigestion, Liver Complaint, and all other Diseases where an aperient Alternative or Cathartic is required. Prepared by H. M. Bicknell, Druggist and Apothecary, Garrett, Indiana. Five boxes sent by mail to any P. O. in the United States on receipt of $1.00.

Notice.

Persons having had business transactions with the undersigned, while carrying on the saloon business in Auburn, will take notice that I have left all accounts in the hands of J. E. KENDALLVILLE, INDIANA, MAY 30, 1880.

Excursion via Baltimore &amp; Ohio Railroad to Chicago.

To the republican national convention to be held at the exposition building in Chicago, June 2, 1880.

Excursion tickets via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, at low rates, will be sold from all stations. Tickets good going May 31 and June 1 and 2, good until returning June 6 inclusive. Excursionists via the Baltimore and Ohio road, will be landed at exposition building, and within five minutes walk of the principal hotels and business portion of the city of Chicago.

Three through trains daily from the Ohio river to Chicago, equipped with elegant day coaches and Pullman Palace sleeping cars, without change. No other route can offer such inducements to excursionists to this convention, either in time, comfort or accommodations. The fast mail train runs through in daylight, leaving Baltimore at 6:05 a.m. and arriving at Chicago at 5:00 clock p.m. (15 hours.) From Cambridge in 13 hours; Mt. Vernon in 10 hours; Mansfield in 9 hours; Auburn in 8 hours; Garrett in 5 hours.

Returning from Chicago, a corresponding fast train leaves Chicago at 5:15 p.m., arriving at Garrett, 10:00 p.m., Mansfield, 5:10 a.m., Mt. Vernon, 4:15 a.m., Newark, 3 a.m., Cambridge, 2:34 a.m., Baltimore, 2:40 a.m., hours in advance of all other lines. Excursionists would do well to note these facts.

Special cars will be furnished to parties of 10 or more, upon application to agents of the B. & O. Railroad, or to W. E. Ruppert and F. W. Lee, passenger agents, Columbus, Ohio.

E. Lonn, General Passenger Agent.

F. Huelenbeck is erecting a new brick building on Seventh street, next to Lichtig's barber shop, which he will move his business fixtures into as soon as completed.

A lively runaway occurred this afternoon. About 2 o'clock a team owned by William Krall, from Stone's Corners, while unloading grain at the depot took fright and started for "glory and the grave," crossing the railroad bridge at a higher rate of speed than the time made by the fast (?) train on the Lake Shore. In the language of our friend J. O. Mc, the said vehicle "will get into Chicago in time to help nominate Grant."

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

KENDALLVILLE, INDIANA, MAY 30, 1880.

Our readers will bear in mind the County Democratic Convention which takes place at county-seat on Saturday next. It is expected that there will be a large turn-out, as all ticket is to be put in the field.

If the game were worth the powder it would be an easy task to effectually shell the standard roost composed of the Kendallville Standard, Waterloo Press and Auburn Republican, the trio of foul birds of prey who sit on the track of the HEAD LIGHT editor. We notice that the Standard has just come to the relief of the latter named guttersnipe.

We suppose that either Sherman, Blaine or Grant will be nominated by the Republicans at Chicago, but it has already been given by their respective organs that neither of them can be or ought to be elected. The personal unfitness of the Republican candidate having been previously established by the Republican papers, the Democrats will be relieved this year of much labor in the way of argument.

As may be seen by announcement elsewhere in this paper, Mr. Jay J. VanAuken of Auburn, will be a candidate before the County Democratic Convention on the 6th for the position of Sheriff. Mr. VanAuken has held the office of County Surveyor for several terms, and given general satisfaction to all parties. While there will be other good and available men before the convention, we think he has superior claims for the nomination.

Mr. John W. Dills of Concord, on behalf of a host of Democrats, will be a candidate before the convention next Saturday for County Recorder. Mr. Dills is an old settler of the county, and has rendered valuable service in the ranks of the Democracy in sunshine and storm. It seems that his many admirers desire that he shall make the race for Auditor. If nominated he will be elected, and the same may be said of any gentleman named for the position.

Chat. Here and Elsewhere.

The Corunna cornet band left to-day for Kendallville to attend memorial services.

Despite all the drawbacks in its erection, Kiblinger's new store on the corner will be one of the finest around the square. The cornice was adjusted to-day, and all it now needs is the roof.—[Auburn Courier, 27th.]

Lew. Smith, with Col. J. E. Casebier of the Crosby House, Defiance, Ohio, has a regular Celestial hair cut; nevertheless Lew. is a handsome young man. By-the-way, the Crosby under the management of the Colonel is doing a bang-up business.

A drunken cigar maker by the name of Frey, and three children aged from eight to fourteen years, were burned to death in a house Friday night 21st inst., in the neighborhood of Angola, Ind. The house was occupied by three women of doubtful chastity, and the cigar maker who slept there on the night of the accident, it is supposed set the house on fire while smoking.

[From the Garrett Edition.]

—John Paul drives the "boss" nag.

—Lucky is selling goods at cost.

—Garrett is to have a show and Powell and Bicknell are happy.

—Mr. Hartford's youngest boy is dangerously sick.

—The house to be occupied by Judge Carpenter is about completed.

—Our grocery dealers report a splendid trade.

—Sullivan's Ice Cream Parlor has been doing a flourishing business.

—The Garrett City Mills are turning out first-class flour.

—Gus Nass claims that business is improving.

—Munn, candidate for Recorder, was in town Saturday.

—John Boyles, of Butler, candidate for Sheriff was in town Tuesday.

—T. H. Tomlinson, of Franklin township, candidate for Auditor, was in town Tuesday.

—P. Fluke of Auburn was in town trading with our merchants. Phillip's head is level.

—The farmers are complaining of the wet weather stopping corn planting. Most of them however are nearly through planting.

—The Tarney House opened out this week under the new management. Mr. Rencher derfer landlord.

—The B. & O. Boys do not take kindly to the insurance scheme as explained by the Company.

—Mr. E. C. Reyher and Miss Mary Bimler were married Tuesday evening. El doesn't believe in any fuss or excitement. Sensible.

—Travis and his dog Fido hold forth every afternoon under the awning, master and dog yelping with each other in feasts of ground and lofty tumbling. By-the-way, the dog does show some smartness.

—We dropped in upon Bro. Eveland of the Hicksville, Republican, the other day, and found everything lovely at that establishment. The Republic is a bright, newsy sheet, and its editor a gentleman. We wish it success financially.

—Mr. Wildersmith, General Agent of the State Mutual Aid Association of Columbus, Ohio, spent a few days in Garrett is the interest of the Company establishing agencies. Frank M. Bacon was appointed general agent for DeKalb county. The company has the reputation of being sound and responsible.

We learn that the news-gatherer of the Auburn Republics wore out his welcome at the Garrett railroad shop the other day. He didn't "circulate" fast enough, and was finally ordered to depart, and he did. —Herald, 27th.

Just as The Head Light "collected" of that concern "circulated" as a certain occasion with the assistance of the lot of a No. 9 boat in close proximity to his rear of 1880.

A rumor that some of our favorite readers have got their backs badly crooked over the men in fast lane celebrating a mild famine, induced in by some of the boys at Hempel's hall celebrating the result of city election. One patron has gone so far as to withdraw his patronage, and we understand that propositions have been made to purchase the editor at sight! Now, friends and brethren, the withdrawal of said patrons will hardly squelch the HEAD LIGHT, and if there are any heavy weight men about town so offended, and who are ambitious to sit upon our cold corpus, we hereby announce that the fighting editor is not invisible. Good morning, gentlemen.

—The fast train recently put on the B. & O. Road has caused a great increase of travel on that favorite line. See time card on page 18 respecting excursion facilities to the national republican convention.

—There are several sharp young alecks in Garrett town that a good square whack in the jaw would do them a "power of good."

PUBLIC OPINION.

With Grant as the nominee, there wouldn't be any close states. They would be all Democratic.—[Cincinnati Commercial.]

THE Republicans at Chicago should remember that they must elect their candidate next November; they cannot count him in this time.—[Exchange.]

ONE thing at least can be said in Whittaker's favor. He was not so much of a noodle that he did not know that the part of his body which needed trimming most was his ears.—[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

WHITELAW Reid, of the New York Tribune, last Tuesday told a Cleveland Leader reporter: "H. B. Payne has been talked of somewhat, but lately few expect his friends have thought he would be given the first place on the ticket. Payne is a very good man, however, and if nominated would consolidate the Tammany and anti-Tammany elements of New York. However [laughingly] any candidate except Tilden would do that."

THERE are now fourteen distinguished gentlemen named as candidates for President by the Democracy, to-wit: Tilden, Hendricks, Thurman, Fields, Payne, Palmer, David Davis, William R. Morrison, Senator Randolph, Hon. Joel E. Parker, General McClellan, English, of Indiana; Barnum, of Connecticut, and Jewett, with some states to hear from! Any one of them can beat Grant.—[Plain Dealer.]

The Campaign literature that is being manufactured for the Democrats at Chicago these days is remarkable, both for its plentitude and richness. In the campaign to come, when the essential unfitness of the Republican leaders is to be demonstrated, the proofs will be at hand ready furnished by the gentlemen themselves. We have always held the Republican party to be unfit to have possession of the government, but the full extent of its iniquity was never entirely comprehended until now it is self-confessed.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

It Will Never be Played.

Mr. and Mrs. Defoe sat before a cheerful fire in their home the other evening. There had been a long period of silence, when Mr. Defoe suddenly exclaimed "By gum!"

"What is it, dear?" she responded. "Say, we've got tired of playing games and what do you say to private theatricals?"

"How?" "Why, we'll get three or four of the neighborhood men to and we'll meet at each other's houses and have regular plays."

"That will be splendid!" she gasped. "Hanged if it won't! Wonder we never thought of it before. Twenty dollars will get us all the scenery we want and each one can furnish his own wardrobe. By gum! we've got the idea now!"

"What sort of a play could we play?" she asked as he marched up and down with tragic step.

"I have it—aha!" he exclaimed as he stopped short. "Don't you remember I started to write a play about five years ago? I'll finish it and we'll bring it out. Now let's see how the characters run. There is the Count Dumoff, who is in love with Geraldine the fair. I'll be the Count, of course, as he is the hero. He kills four men, rescues Geraldine from several dangers and there is a good deal of kissing and love making and a happy marriage."

"And I'll be Geraldine." "You! Oh, you couldn't play that part. She must be young and vivacious. Let's see? I think I'll cast you for Hannah, who keeps a bakery near a park in Paris."

"I'd like to see myself playing Hannah in a bakery, I would!" she defiantly answered. "If you can play Dumoff I know I can play Geraldine."

"Oh, no you can't my love. You are a little stiff in the knees, and how you'd look throwing yourself into my arms as the villains pursue. I shall cast that little Widow D. for Geraldine."

"Then there'll be two Geraldines of us! If you can play Dumdooff with your lame back and catarrh I know I can play Geraldine with this little lameness in my left knee."

"Now you listen to reason, Mrs. De-foe. You aren't built for a Geraldine; you are too fat, your feet are too large, you haven't got the voice for it."

"And you'd make a pretty Count Dumdooff, you would," she fired back. "You want to get that crook out of your back, that bald head shingled over, your mouth repaired and your eyes touched up with a paint brush. I think I see you killing four villains. Ha! ha! ha!"

"Woman, do not anger me," he said in a deep toned voice, "as he rose up."

"And don't you anger your Geraldine, either."

"Geraldine! Why, you don't know a sky border from a flat."

Dumdooff! And you don't know a Skye terrier from the big fiddle in the orchestra."

"Tis well! We'll have no playing here."

"Then you needn't. When I play Hannah in a bakery to let you hug and kiss the Widow D. or any other woman all over the stage you'll be three or four Count Dumdooffs!"

"I'll burn the play, jealous woman!" "If you don't I will, vain man!"

Then they sat down and resumed their former occupation of looking into the fire, and the disturbed cat went back to her rug and her dreams.

Probably the meanest trick that was ever played on a white man was played last week in New York, and the fact that there is no vigilance committee there is the only reason the perpetrators of the trick are alive. A business man had just purchased a new stiff hat and he went into a saloon with a half dozen of his friends to fit the hat on his head. They all took beer and passed the hat around so all could see it. One of the meanest men that ever held a country office went to the bar tender and had a thin slice of Limburger cheese cut off, and when the party were looking at the frescoed ceiling through beer glasses this wicked person slipped the cheese under the sweat leather of the hat and the man put it on and walked out. The man who owned the hat was one of your nervous people, who is always complaining of being sick and who feels as though some dreadful disease was going to take possession of him and carry him off. He went back to his place of business, took off his hat and laid it on the table and proceeded to answer some letters. He thought he detected a smell and when his partner asked him if he didn't feel sick he said he believed he did. The man turned pale and said he guessed he would go home. He met a man on the sidewalk who said the air was full of miasma, and in the street car a man who sat next to him moved away to the end of the car and asked him if he had just come from Chicago. The man with the hat said he had not when the stranger said they were having a great deal of small pox there and he guessed he would get out and walk, and he pulled the bell and jumped off. The cold perspiration broke out on the forehead of the man with the new hat and he took it off to wipe his forehead, when the whole piece of cheese seemed to roll over and breathe and the man got the full benefit of it and he came near fainting away. He got home and his wife met him and asked him what was the matter? He said he believed mortification had set in and she took one whiff as he took off his hat and she said she should think it had. "Where did you get into it?" said she. "Get into it?" said the man. "I have not got into anything, but some deadly disease has got hold of me and I shall not live." She told him if any disease like that had got hold of him and was going to be chronic, she felt as though he would be a burden to himself if he lived very long. She got his clothes off, soaked his feet in mustard water and he slept. The man slept and dreamed that a small pox flag was hung in front of the house, and that he was riding in a butcher wagon to the pest house. The wife sent for a doctor and when the man of pills arrived she told him all about the case. The doctor picked up the patient's new hat, tried it on and got a sniff. He said the hat was picked before it was ripe. The doctor and the wife held a post mortem examination of the hat and found the slice of Limburger. Few and short were the prayers they said. They woke the patient and, to prepare his mind for the revelation that was about to be made, the doctor asked him if his worldly affairs were in a satisfactory condition. He gasped and said they were. The doctor asked him if he had made his will. He said he had not, but that he wanted a lawyer sent for at once. The doctor asked him if he felt as though he was prepared to shuffle off. The man said he had always tried to lead a different life and had tried to be done by the same as he would do it himself, but that he might have made a mistake some way and he would like to have a minister sent for to take an account of stock. Then the doctor brought to the bedside the hat, opened up the sweat leather and showed the dying man what it was that smelled so bad told him he was as well as any man in the city. The patient pinched himself to see if he was alive and jumped out of bed and called for his revolver and the doctor couldn't keep up with him on the way down town. The last we saw of the odiferous citizen he was trying to bribe the bar tender to tell him which one of those pelicans it was that put that slice of cheese in his hat lining.

A STORY OF HORACE GREELY.—I happened to witness one interview which was sufficiently amusing. A widow, or at least a woman in black, wanted to go somewhere, or set up a school, or start a mission in some far-away region of Africa, or do something for sewing girls—never mind what! Mr. Greeley, who was up to his eyes in work, repeatedly told her to go away, and kept on writing. But going away was the last thing the petticoated philanthropist proposed to do. She kept on talking, and Mr. Greeley kept on writing as well as he could, until at last in sheer desperation he rushed to the speaking-tube which led to the counting-room, and bawled querulously through it: "S—, for God's sake, send me up five dollars!" The money came up, and having thrust it into her hand, and resolutely discouraged the long speech of thanks which she instantly began to make, Mr. Greeley half bowed and half put her out of the little room and went back to his work with a complacent smile illuminating his excellent face. He had purchased his time, and he had paid a pretty good price for it.

—A poor fellow up town fairly danced with joy when the doctor told him he had Bright's disease. "What will the Smith girl say now?" he exclaimed triumphantly. "She always said there was nothing bright about me! O, I guess not; but the doctor's certificate will show what kind of a hairpin I am."

The Democrats now have a splendid opportunity of showing the country how a national convention should be conducted and how to nominate a President and Vice President for the United States.

The presence of "Mr. George Washington" in the Chicago convention gives the finishing touch to the farce. It reminds one of the gaunting dens, in which, when invaded by the police, are invariably found a number of historic persons, such as Patrick Henry, John Hancock, Ben Franklin and Daniel Webster.

—No personal considerations of any sort can be admitted to influence the action of the Democratic convention. The Democratic candidate may be Tilden, if he shall be judged the strongest; if he is not the strongest the candidate must be some other man. This is a contest for principle, not for men, and it is principle that we are to vindicate by our votes, not individual sufferers. — Boston Globe.

THE HEROIC BIG THREE HAVE TO STAND DOWN IN THE HALL,

And One of the "S" of the Infamous Electoral Commission;

WHO HELPED TO STEAL THE PRESIDENCY

For Hayes, Nominated for President, with a Removed Custom House 'Ring' Official as Second on the Ticket.

Special to the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CHICAGO, June 8.—The great race is over and the dark horse has won. After six days of fierce dissensions and bitter contest between the factions of Grant, Blaine and Sherman, all three of these leaders have fallen and the nominee of the convention is of Ohio. The result is a triumph of the opponents of Grant but it was secured only by sacrificing both Blaine and Sherman and the defeat of the triumvirs is tempered by the reflection that Blaine and Sherman have gone down in the common ruin. To the very end the

was unbroken: All through the thirty-six ballots the line never wavered and the supporters of the old commander clung to his fortunes with a moral heroism that compels admiration for their invincible pluck and admirable discipline. Grant had 304 votes on the first ballot and 806 on the last. It was clear to the anti-third termers that the Grant position was winnable and the balloting might go on day after day and no break could be expected in the faithful three hundred. The delegates were getting tired on the other side and if the deadlock continued there were apprehensions that there might be a stampede to Grant sufficient to nominate him. The danger grew more pronounced with every ballot. Blaine's forces were steadily melting away and all hope of his nomination vanished. The Sherman vote had reached its highest point and the other candidates had almost vanished from the field. It was the

in the contest. If the fight had been prolonged beyond this it is more probable that there would have been a break to Grant and his nomination could hardly have been prevented. The thirty-fifth ballot gave Garfield nine votes and there was a perceptible wavering. It was in the air somehow that Garfield was the coming man. The Sherman men saw their only chance to defeat Grant without helping Blaine and when the

THIRTY-SIXTH BALLOT

was commenced the break began. As state after state stampeded from Blaine and Sherman to Garfield the wildest excitement reigned in the hall. It was evident from the first that the long battle was over. Still, even in the utter hopelessness of defeat, with the whole third term structure, reared at so great a cost by the triumvirate, falling into ruins around them, the Grant men stood firm in their ranks and cast their ballots for the ex-President with the same unflinching courage that marked their course throughout. When Vermont had voted and it was evident that Garfield was nominated an

INDISCREET SCENE

of wild excitement occurred. The delegates began to cheer and wave their hats, canes, umbrellas or anything they could get hold of in the air. The galleries took up the shout and for almost an hour the tumult was so great that the Secretary was unable to announce the vote and all business was suspended. Garfield, unable to comprehend what was going on, was congratulated by the delegates, who made a rush for him and were so violent in their manifestations of delight that Garfield in a short time left the hall and went to his room at the hotel.

When the vote was completed and announced, the final ballot stood: Grant 306, Blaine 42, Sherman 3, Edmunds 6, Garfield 890.

MADE UNANIMOUS.

Conkling was the first of the Grant leaders to recover from the effects of their overthrow and he arose with a sardonic smile on his lips and in a loud tone, in which was nothing of bitterness or disappointment that could be perceived, moved to make the nomination unanimous, which was done with a mighty shout. This ended the work of the convention, as the nomination of a Vice-President was felt to be something that would require little time and a recess was accordingly taken until evening.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

At the evening session of the convention the vice presidency was easily disposed of, Charles A. Arthur, ex-Collector of the port of New York, being chosen on the first ballot. This a sop thrown to the Grant men and to Conkling particularly, Arthur being one of the special pets of the New York Senator.

WHAT IS THOUGHT.

It is too soon yet to be able to ascertain the sober judgment of the delegates and of the politicians here in regard to the wisdom of the nomination. Everything is in a whirl of excitement and the mad enthusiasm which any nomination, other than that of one of the principal contestants was sure to evoke still prevails to an extent that makes opinions of little value. Of course there is great satisfaction that a successful result was reached and that a compromise of any kind was had that avoided a split in the party. Aside from this it must be said that Garfield has by his conservative course in the convention made himself very popular and that an enthusiastic boom has been worked up that is real as far as it goes. When this is said, however,

ALL IS SAID.

Shrewd politicians do not hesitate to say that the nomination is a weak one and that when the excitement dies away and the party comes to look at the cold, hard facts of the case the action of the convention will be looked upon with disappointment and it will be realized that General Garfield will be an exceedingly weak candidate for so desperate a fight as awaits the party in the campaign now opening.

THE FEUDS

that have almost torn the party to pieces have not been appeased by the nomination of Garfield and although the Grant men say nothing there is a sullenness manifested that bodes no good for the man who slaughtered the hero of the third termers. It is the opinion of many that the defeat of Conkling means certain defeat for the Republican nominee in New York.

THE SHERMAN MEN

are much disgusted at the nomination and it is the general opinion that it will be a heavy weight for the party to carry.

—The United States have this year been called upon to disburse an unusual amount in charity. First there came the famine in the west of Ireland, for which large contributions were made. Scarcely had the worst passed in Ireland, when the sympathies of the charitable were again invoked for burned towns and villages. All these demands have been nobly met. It is to be hoped, however, that the distress which caused these demands will not last much longer.

—Garfield stands no more chance of carrying New York than the Democratic candidate does Iowa.

—A body found in the St. Joe river near Edgerton, Williams county, O., has been identified as that of a farmer named Marshall who had been missing for several days. Murder is suspected.

—The Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage baptized eighteen converts at the Brooklyn Tabernacle on Sunday. He stood up to his waist in the water and put the candidates for baptism all the way under. Most of the women wore cream colored suits and white satin slippers.

—The only vital issue presented by the Republicans in their platform is that which declares for the centralization of power. Whoever is the candidate the imperialistic tendency is evident. The party declares itself in favor of a central government with power superior to the Constitution and it is clear where this doctrine leads to.

—If the Republican party has but narrowly escaped being split wide open by the dissensions arising out of a choice for chief distributor of spoils, it has been so severely strained that it will not be able to elect the candidate it has nominated. It has only escaped violent disruption to die a more lingering death.

—Whatever may be the fate of American manufactures in competition with the British, it is absolutely certain that Great Britain must depend hereafter very largely on American food supplies. This is shown in the recently published statistics of the cattle trade. In spite of the compulsory killing of American cattle on their arrival in England, and the levying of heavy duties, the number of animals imported into Great Britain has, since 1877, increased 80 per cent. Besides this there are over 100,000 carcasses of beef imported from America every year.

National Democratic Convention.

The executive committee of the national democratic committee, having met in the city of Washington, February 23d, has appointed Tuesday, the 24th of June next, at noon, as the time, and chosen Cincinnati as the place of holding the national democratic convention.

Each state is entitled to representation therein equal to a double number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. All democratic, conservative and other citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political association or difference, who can unite with us in the effort for a pure, economical government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention.

At the last national democratic convention, held in the city of St. Louis in 1876, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the states be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to use the two-thirds rule longer in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such request in the call for the next convention.

Resolved, That the states be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to use the two-thirds rule longer in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such request in the call for the next convention.

Resolved, That the states be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to use the two-thirds rule longer in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such request in the call for the next convention.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

TUESDAY, JUNE 15, 1880.

The long agony is over at Chicago and the Republicans have trotted out the dark horse and his name is James A. Garfield. Not so much of a dark horse either, as the nominee had long been prominently before the party as a probable compromise candidate. Thus has Grant and third termism been forever silenced—"gone where the woodbine twineth." And pray, who is Garfield? Pronounced by the Republican press and party henchmen a pure and unsullied statesman and patriot. Pure indeed! So is the devil's kitchen. He comes before the people with unclean hands and so badly tainted with the corruption of a wicked and ugly administration that saltpetre won't save him from defeat. The nomination may unite the discordant factions of the party, which will feebly rally to his support, but can the man who is up to his elbows in the Credit Mobilier speculation and other dishonest practices, and who helped to frame the infamous electoral commission that defrauded the country out of their lawfully elected President, hope to glide into the Presidential chair on sharp skates and smooth ice by the votes of the people? Never! Such is General Garfield. Let him bear in mind that there will be no "business" on the docket at the approaching trial. An honest election or a racket, James A. Mr. McArthur of New York, the candidate for Vice, a discharged custom-house officer, is of so little consequence that New York will roll up a majority of 50,000 for the Democratic ticket. In the next issue of the HEAD LIGHT we will give some readable facts from the official report of the investigation in the Oakes Ames Credit Mobilier affair, in which Garfield figures as a conspicuous character.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT!

THE LAKE SHORE DISCOVERS ANOTHER DITCH—NO LIVES LOST.

There was another accident on the Lake Shore Railroad at Corvina on the morning of the 8th, under the following circumstances: No. 56 local freight eastbound had gone on the siding for No. 5 Pacific Express westbound, which passes this place at 2:55 a. m. Fifty-six had done the necessary switching and was waiting for the express train. In passing through the east switch either the brakeman forgot to close and lock the switch or some tramp re-opened it, both theories being attributable to the accident. The Express came tearing along through the open switch at a speed of about 40 miles an hour and ran into a lumber and flax car immediately in front of the freight engine. The passenger train was composed of a mail and baggage car, three coaches and two sleepers. The crash was fearful and the mail and baggage car combined was dished and thrown over on its side, and one passenger coach was pitched down the embankment horizontally. Fortunately no one was injured and it is certainly providential that the accident was not attended with broken limbs and loss of life. The ditched passenger coach was full of passengers and all escaped unhurt. The postal clerk and baggage-master happened to be on the north side of the car as it went over down the south bank, preventing the baggage from falling upon them. Engineer Fleming in his terrible ride seemingly into the very jaws of death, quickly opened the throttle and let on the brakes which materially lessened the force of the collision. All took place in an instant with the rapidity of a shot from a Galling gun. Mr. Fleming remained bravely at his post and escaped with only a slight sprain of an ankle. The locomotives of both trains were considerably disabled and four freight cars somewhat damaged. There is no correct theory as to how the switch became misplaced and nothing positively will be made known until after an investigation at headquarters. The devil seems to be running a railroad muck in this immediate neighborhood as this is the third accident that has occurred here within a few years. The great accident in the spring of 1876 near Moody's Crossing is no doubt still fresh in the memory of our readers. In fact accidents are so frequent and terrible in late years on the Lake Shore Road, that people will be compelled to travel over other lines in order to insure the safety of their necks.

The election on Monday, 6th inst., was a hot contest. Every available inch of territory was closely contested. The enemy intruded their forces upon trustees and fought the fight upon their officers. All the work that the machinery of the Republican party could bring to bear upon Mr. Jordan, was put in requisition. But the gallant Richmond Democracy stood their ground bravely and won the golden prize. The entire ticket with the exception of constable is elected by increased majorities. We have secured nine of the thirteen trustees in the county, and the amendments are defeated by a majority. The victory is significant and will have a telling influence on the fall election. All a well that ends well. Below we give a tabular statement of the various townships as far as heard from.

Richland.
Trustee.	Thomas F. Jordan, Dem. 161
	Amos Britton, Rep. 124
Jordan's maj.	38
Justice.	John Finch, Dem. 148

Constables.	Albert Harding, Dem. 139
	Isaac Tryon, Dem. 168
	John O. McNabb, Rep. 139
	Henry T. Shade, Rep. 138
Isaac Tryon having received a majority of the votes cast was declared elected, he being the only constable that was elected, the other three having an equal number of votes and there being no choice.
Fairfield.
Trustee.	Solomon Reinoehl, Dem. 183
	John J. Lyng, Rep. 173
Reinoehl's maj.	10
Assessor.	Henry H. Deitz, Dem. 216
	John Buchanan, Rep. 98
Deitz's maj.	117
Justice.	John Potts, Dem. 197
	David C. Ansley, Rep. 116
Potts's maj.	81
Keyser.
In Keyser township the Democracy were more unfortunate, although the opposition win only by very small majorities. The democrats caused their own defeat here by trying the plan of amalgamation, and by the display of poor generalship. It will never do to mix things and the result is shown in Monday's election.
Trustee.	Harvey Moody, Dem. 200
	Orrin C. Clark, Rep. 218
Clark's maj.	18
Assessor.	L. Lockwood, Rep. 218
	J. Cattell, Dem. 159

this before." He drew from his pocket a small flask of wine and handed it to me. Now, I was temperate in regard to drinks. In fact I detested the sight and smell of any thing intoxicating. But I had not the moral courage to tell him so, and hand back the flask undisturbed. I feared to offend him, and so I drank; perhaps, three good swallows. He called my attention to the woods on the left, as he received back the flask, and when I looked around again he was just removing it from his mouth, as if he had drank heartily.

In about five minutes I began to feel queer. The fences along the road seemed to grow higher, and the trees to grow larger; something came to my ears that the rattle of the buggy sounded a long way off. "How strange! Why, I believe that I am going to be sick!" I exclaimed, holding on to the coat with all my might.

"You do look strange," he replied, a snaky smile stealing over his face; "I shouldn't wonder if it was apoplexy."

I did not suspect the game he had played. His words were like an echo, and his face seemed twice as large as it was. My head began to spin and my brain began to snap and crack, and I was greatly frightened.

"You are badly off," he continued, looking into my face. "I will drive as fast as possible and get a doctor."

My tongue was so heavy that I could not reply. I clutched the seat, shut my eyes, and he put his horse at his best paces. We met a farmer's team, and I can remember that one of the occupants of the wagon called out to know what ailed that man. Raleigh did not reply but urged his horse forward.

About three miles from Grafton was a long stretch of forest, and this was where I reached. The pain in my head was not so violent, and I was not so fully affected when opening my eyes.

FARAN & MCLEAN, Pub'rs,

CINCINNATI, OHIO.

I had settled into a sort of dumb stupor, with a brain so benumbed that I had to say to myself, "This is a tree, that is a stump," etc., before I could make sure that I was not wrong. Half a mile and then Raleigh turned the horse into a blind road leading back into the woods. I could not understand what he intended. I tried to grapple with the question, but could not solve it.

"Well, here we are!" exclaimed Raleigh, when he had reached a point forty rods from the main road.

He stopped the horse, got out, and hitched him, and then came round to the wheel.

"You don't feel just right, but I guess you will be better soon," he remarked. "Come, let me help you down."

He reached up his arms, and I let go the seat and fell into them. It seemed to me as if I weighed a ton, but he carried me along without an effort, and laid me down within about a rod of a fence which ran along on one side of an old pasture. Just now I began to get a little better. The effects of the drug were wearing off, and I got a faint suspicion that something unusual had happened. But I was powerless to move a limb; the sensation was like that when your foot goes to sleep.

"Can you speak?" inquired Raleigh, bending over me. "because if you can it will save me some trouble. I want to know just where you have stored away that money."

Now I began to realize my situation. His face looked natural again, and the load was off my tongue. I also felt that I could move my fingers a little.

George Raleigh, are you going to rob me? I asked, finding my voice at last.

Well, some folks might call it robbing, but we dress up the term a little by calling it the only correct financial way of equalizing the floating currency, so that each one is provided for, and no one left out.

"You shan't have the money. I will die first!" I yelled, rising a little. "Ah, I see, didn't take quite enough," he coolly remarked. "Well, I have provided for this."

He went to the buggy, procured ropes and a gag, and knelt down beside me. I had but little strength yet, and he conquered me in a moment. Lying on my right side, looking toward the fence, he tied my hands behind me and then forced the gag into my mouth.

"There now! You see you are nicely fixed up, and all because you acted like a fool instead of like a sensible young lawyer about to be admitted to the bar."

While he was speaking—I indeed while he was tying me, I had caught sight of the white face of a little girl looking at us from between the rails of a fence. I could see her great blue eyes and knew that she was frightened. There were red stains around her mouth and on the little hand resting on the rail, and I knew that she was some farmer's child searching for strawberries. I could warn her of her danger, and I feared that she would be seen or heard. While Raleigh was tying the last knot I winked at the little girl as hard as I could, hoping that she would move away. But she did not go.

"Well, now for the money!" said Raleigh, and he began searching my pockets. He went from one to the other, removing all the articles, felt down my boot leg, and then finally passed his hand over my bosom and found the money.

"Ha! here it is," he exclaimed, drawing out the packages. "I don't really believe that old Grip will see any of this to-day."

He sat down near my head, undid the packages, and was cool enough to wait at it to count the money. As he commenced the little girl waved her hand to me. My head went thump for I expected that she would utter a word or shout, but she sank down

A SPECIALTY

Yours Very Respectfully,

from sight, and I caught a gleam of her frock as she passed through the grass.

"You see my young friend," remarked Raleigh, as he drew off one of his boots and deposited some of the bills in it, "there's nothing like transacting business as it should be transacted. Some men would have shot or stabbed you, but it's only the apprentices who do such work. All the real gentlemen of our calling do business as gentlemen should."

He drew off the other boot, and placed some "fifties" and "twenties" in it, and then continued:

"I have it all planned out how to deal with you as soon as I get this money disposed of around my person. I shall lay you on your back and pour the balance of the wine down your throat. There's enough of it to make you sleep until to-morrow night, and by that time I shall be hundreds of miles away. As soon as I see the drug take effect I shall untie your hands and remove the gag. When you come out of your sleep—if you ever do—you had better crawl out to the road, where you will most likely meet some traveler soon. I want to use the horse and buggy, otherwise I would leave them for you."

How coolly he talked. He treated the matter as if it were a regular transaction in which I fully acquiesced. He had me a fast prisoner, and I felt that he could do just as he pleased. While I was thinking, I saw the little white face appear between the rails again, but in a moment it faded away and its place was taken by the sun-burned phiz of a farmer. He looked from me to Raleigh, and back again, and I winked at him in a way which he readily understood. His face disappeared, and I felt that I should be saved.

No, old Grip won't get his tin to-day," mused Raleigh, storing away the bills in his pockets. "You will go back to Law & Law feeling put out and cut up, but they couldn't blame you; it is not your fault at all. True, had you minded your business on the car and not been so free with a stranger, this would not have happened. I was on my way to Milwaukee, and no thought of such rich pickings here."

I saw nothing of the farmer. Raleigh finished his counting, and I made up my mind that the farmer was afraid to interfere, and had run away. My heart went down as Raleigh got up, for I saw that he was about to carry out his plan of further drugging me. He turned me on my back, sat down astride of me, and then pulled out the flask.

"Now, in just about a minute we'll be through with the business," he remarked, trying to put the mouth of the flask between my jaws.

I rolled my head on one side and he did not succeed. He was jamming the flask against my teeth, when I caught the wind of a soft step, the crash of a club, and Raleigh rolled off my body. He tried to leap up, but three or four farmers struck him down, and one of the blows rendered him senseless. Before he came to I was free of ropes and gag, and we had him securely bound.

Over beyond the pasture a farmer and his hands were raking hay. "Little Blue Eyes," only eight years old, had wandered off after strawberries, and had, fortunately for me, witnessed a part of Raleigh's proceedings. She had hurried back to her father and told him that a man was all tied up out there. Understanding the situation he and his men had moved around so as to secure an advantage, and Raleigh's capture was the result.

When the rascal found his senses he was terribly taken aback and cursed enough for a whole Flanders' army. We took him back to Grafton, and when I saw him again he was on his way to the penitentiary to serve a sentence of fifteen years.

The mortgage was duly lifted, and the gift which Law & Law sent Katy Grey kept her in dresses for many years.

For myself, I felt so humiliated at having fallen into the rascal's trap, and so wrathful at the treatment, that I determined to devote myself to a thorough warfare on rogues. I therefore joined the detective force, and after due study, took my place as a full fledged detective.

—He had asked for her photograph. She excused herself with some kind of story about her negative being lost, and another would have to be secured, etc., when he interrupted her rather warmly with the remark: "What do you suppose I care for your negative, Carrie? It's your affirmative that I have been after these six months." She said nothing, but kind of turned up the whites of her eyes, and he—well, it is nobody's business what he did. It's only necessary to say that he started, for the tailor's first thing next morning, and she—why she has done nothing but try on all sorts of things ever since.

Clarence E. Davis, the drummer "masher," and man of many wives, whose elopement with a young school girl of Quincy, Illinois, named Carrie Cleveland, we recently narrated, was arraigned in the North Side Police Court at Chicago, on the 1st. People crowded in to stare at him, and all seemed astonished that a man of his appearance could capture so many women. Davis subsequently made a long, incoherent statement to a reporter, the substance of which is that all the women were in trouble, and he married them to avoid scandal.

The pretty story that the "fifteen puzzle" was invented by some school-master or other, who missed a fortune by neglecting to have it patented, will hardly stand. It has been supplemented by the claims to authorship of half a dozen other men, and some one else claims to have found the self-same puzzle described in a very old book in an Edinburgh library. There is nothing new under the sun.

A Bright Horse.

The reader who admires that noble animal the horse, will be interested in the following extract from the New York correspondence of the Detroit Free Press, sketching a visit to a fire engine house:

"You ask if we have any particularly bright horses," replied a hook and ladder man, "Here is Peter; he's been with us nine or ten years, and we rather brag on him. Let me introduce you. Peter, here is a chap from the Detroit Free Press."

Peter nodded his head and pawed the floor.

"Peter, have you been to a fire to-day?" He shook his head.

"Were you out yesterday?"

He nodded.

"Peter, how old are you?"

The horse pawed thirteen times with his right foot.

"That's right, old boy. Do you remember when a loafer stabbed you at a fire?"

He did.

"Where is the scar?"

Peter bent himself about double to bite his hip at a spot where a scar could be traced.

"Now, Peter, show the Detroit man how you take your place at the pole."

Down went the chain and the horse covered the distance at two jumps.

"Now walk around the truck and come and take my hat off."

The horse obeyed to the letter.

"Now," continued the fireman, as he lay down on the floor, "step over me."

Peter lifted his feet very high and stepped softly over, and returned to his stall.

"That horse is one of us," said the man, as he brushed off the dust and saw down.

"We can rest the foot of a ladder on his back and he will not move. Whenever we stand him at a fire there he will stay without watching. He eats with us, chews tobacco, likes beer and would learn to play dominoes in a week if he could only handle them."

There died of consumption in New York in 1879, 4,814 persons; 1,861 Americans, 1,803 Irish, 730 Germans, 385 of other foreign nationalities, and 90 negroes. Of domestic servants, 204 died, 192 clerks, 281 laborers, 64 merchants, 45 shoemakers, 89 dressmakers, 64 bartenders, 24 bakers, 2 actors, 17 brewers, 84 carpenters and 81 carmen. Since 1825 849,762 persons have died in this city; 4.26 per cent. of them of consumption. — N. Y. World.

Peter Cooper, L. L. D., has caused a letter to be issued announcing his final retirement from active participation in politics. Mattie Hickok, the six year old daughter of Frank Hickok, Kansas City, was killed by a dose of carbolic acid, administered by her father under the impression that it was cough medicine. The medicine was kept on a shelf above the bedroom door on which Mrs. Hickok had placed a bottle of the acid, which resembled the cough medicine in appearance. Mr. Hickok, in the dark, unfortunately took the wrong bottle and let the child take a large dose. She became unconscious almost immediately and died at six o'clock in the morning. CORNWALL, INDIANA, APRIL 12, 1889.

National Democratic Convention.

The executive committee of the national democratic committee issues the following call:

The national democratic committee, having met in the city of Washington, February 23d, has appointed Tuesday, the 22d of June next, at noon, as the time, and chosen Cincinnati the place of holding the national democratic convention.

Every state is entitled to representation therein equal to a full number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. All democratic, conservative and other citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political association or difference, who can unite with us in the effort for a pure, economical government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention. At the last national democratic convention, held in the city of St. Louis in 1876, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the states be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to convene the same at a later date, in order to the national convention, and that the national committee present such request to the call for the next convention.

WILLIAM H. BARNUM, of Connecticut,

Chairman,
FRED A. PRINCE, of Massachusetts,
Secretary.

Democratic Congressional Convention.

Delegates from the several counties constituting the Twelfth (12th) congressional district of Indiana, will meet in convention at Auburn, Ind.,

THURSDAY, APRIL 19th, 1889, at 10 o'clock, a. m., for the purpose of nominating a democratic candidate to be supported for representative in congress.

The ratio of representation will be the same as that provided for the democratic state convention as follows:

Allen ..... 35
De Kalb ..... 35
Lagrange ..... 13
Shelby ..... 13
Whitley ..... 10

By order of the democratic congressional committee.
J. C. O. McLELLAN, Chairman.

The platform of the Nebraska Democrats is noticeable for its "stalwart" ground on the subject of the great Fraud of 1876. Its sentiments should be re-echoed in every other Democratic declaration of this year:

Whereas, in the presidential campaign of 1876 all of the historical Democratic policies of sound finance, home rule and parity of administration, were in issue and at stake in the candidacy of Samuel J. Tilden; and whereas, in that campaign the Democratic party raised the only standard under which it merits victory; and whereas, in the Republican frauds by which the country was basely cheated of its wish and robbed of its elected choice, the whole republic was despoiled and our institutions injured; therefore,

Resolved, That the Democratic party of Nebraska pledges itself to ceaseless execution, pursuit and punishment of all the authors, aiders, abettors, allies and beneficiaries of that fraud, and promises all its strength to the vindication of the majority rule, which alone can perpetuate our Democratic form of government.

Resolved, That, recognizing all Democratic leaders as pledged to right the wrong done in the theft of the presidency, we pledge to our standard bearers our united support in such measures as may again put in issue the great questions of 1876, and as may provide for their most certain vindication against the crime which in 1876 and 1877, struck down our elected President, despoiled him of his great office and deprived the republic of the beneficent results of a Democratic government and majority rule during the current presidency.

The speakers and press of the Democratic party must keep the Fraud fresh in the minds of our people this year. There could be no better rallying cry. The time has come for avenging the wrong, and that fact will nerve every Democratic hand.

The LaPorte Democracy elected the entire democratic ticket with increased majorities.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

CORNWALL, INDIANA, APRIL 12, 1889.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—April showers sprinkled with snow.
—The order of things are slightly reversed.
March is holding a levee in the month of April.

—The farmer pauses with his hand at the plow, impatiently waiting for the signal to move forward.

Mr. Thos. C. Mays, ex-editor of the Auburn Courier has joined the temperance army, and is now working in connection with Mason Long, the reformed gambler.

[Auburn Courier, March 25th.]
James W. Watson, of Butler, Ind., employed on the coal-dock of the L. S. & M. S. Rail Road at that place, while discharging his duty on the 12th of March, 1889, was thrown from the coal-derrick to the ground, a distance of 11 feet, the fall fracturing his skull and pausing his death. He leaves a wife and one child. His remains were taken to Spencerville, for interment, followed by many relatives and friends. He was born in this county, July 19th, 1846, and was cut down in the prime of life. When he left home on the day of his death, he bade his wife and daughter an affectionate good-bye, never again to meet them on this earth again.
JOHN M. STEWARD.

Godet's Lady's Book for April opens with a most charming scene from "The Ranger," a group of three graceful maidens, the laughing faces of two throwing into strong contrast the sad countenance of the third. It is one of Darley's happiest efforts. The fashions are tempting enough to coax all the dollars from the purses of the fair sex to array them for April's capricious sunshine; and mother's wit find the boy's suit in the diagram a blessing in its simplicity and comfort. The new serial, "Glenarchan," begun in this number, opens with interest, and promises to rival its predecessors in merit. The heroine is a perfect specimen of the American girl of culture and refinement, while also possessing courage and determination; and all readers will watch with interest for the result of her "home mission." The other literary contributions are fully up to the high standard of excellence the publishers seem determined to maintain. We will furnish the Head Light and Godet's Lady's Book for one year at the low price of $2.25 on application at this office.

Dr. Mercer's new store building is rapidly becoming up. The work is being done under the supervision of L. Hoeler the "boss" carpenter.

Austin says his sales of boots and shoes for the month just ended are far in excess of those for the corresponding month last year, and it has been so to a greater or less extent all winter. (Auburn Courier, 1st.)

Since taking possession of the Mercer drug stand by the new proprietors, that establishment has undergone such a thorough renovation in the hands of the painter and glazier that there is scarcely any resemblance to the old place.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW MAN."

Hor Bottom, Pa., Sept. 20, 1877.

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.,

Dear Sir:—After being treated by eminent physicians without benefit, I began to take your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic with your Capitol Bitters, and the effect was wonderful. I began to improve immediately, my strength and appetite returning, and the pain and palpitation ceased. I also had fainting and dizzy fits which are cured and I have gained ten pounds in weight. I took one-half dozen bottles of the Blood medicine and continued the Bitters a year, and now I feel like a new man, being more healthy than ever before.

Yours very respectfully,

J. F. A. TINGLEY.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargements, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Houry will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Ruth & Goyd, druggists, Corunna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

Jake Becher is pushing his slave factory enterprise.

April sat down in the lap of Spring and she has made a nice mess of it.

Abe Depeu was in town last week and brought the encouraging (?) election news from Keweenaw township.

Milo Calkin and Chas. K. Knapp, two Corning boys, have secured positions in the B. & O. Shops at Garrett, and left for the latter place last week.

Uncle Dalton, living near this village, who is now nearly 90 years old, was present at the Blehland polls on Monday and voted a straight democratic ticket.

Rev. James Johnson, pastor of the M. E. Church, left home last week to attend an annual Conference which is now in session at Union City, Indiana.

A fire occurred in L. N. Reed's ash, door and blind factory at Kendallville, on the 29th ult., damaging building and contents to the amount of $200.

Mrs. Minnie Tuttle sister of our townsman Geo. H. Miles, who has been stopping with her brother for a year past, returned two weeks since to her home at Strongsville, Ohio. Mrs. Tuttle has been in feeble health for several years, and she returned with the hope of being benefited by the change.

The old reliable Cleveland Plain Dealer, the leading afternoon democratic daily of northern Ohio, has been changed to a morning edition. Under the present arrangement the Dealer reaches all points along the Allegheny on the afternoon mail, the same day of publication. Terms of Daily $10.00, Tri-Weekly $4.00.

Travelers visiting our town will find the United Hotel kept by Chas. Trues, a pleasant place to carry. The hotel has been repaired and generally renovated, and has a convenient sample room for the use of commercial men. The rates are low and guests will find the landlord to be an accommodating gentleman.

TO OUR PATRONS.

We this week send the HEAD LIGHT to our readers in an enlarged form, having added four pages to the work, and announce that it will hereafter be issued semi-monthly, on the 15th and 30th of each month. The price per annum will remain as heretofore, only Fifty Cents, but payment will be required strictly in advance. The price asked with these improvements will leave us but a very small margin. In the past we have issued the paper indiscriminately, receiving scarcely any compensation for our labor, but have relied upon advertising and job receipts for support. We are entering upon the great campaign of 1880, when the events of the day will be eagerly sought after, and certainly every democrat in the county can afford to add fifty cents more to his paper bill by subscribing for a paper worth double the money; and especially those living in the village and who have a pecuniary local interest in its prosperity will not refuse to patronize their home organ.

Judged by the undercurrents of Garrett, as revealed by the fruits of the late election, either a second Boss Tweed or the devil is at the republicans' helm in Garrett town.

The Democracy of Keweenaw could not have made a better choice of candidate for Trustee than Harvey M. Wiley. All parties admit the fact. He yet he was defeated through bad management or treachery, or perhaps both.

It is a pity that the Democracy of Garrett permitted themselves to fall into the amalgamation trap on the 15th. Such a course is demoralizing and will generally result in humiliating defeat. And again, traitors and spies in the camp should not be tolerated. Kick them out. Nominate straight haired men, stand by your colors and the disaster of Monday can easily be retrieved next fall. Watch and pray!

Chat, Here, and Elsewhere.

Candidates are cropping out as thick as frogs in spring-time. Shake.

Mr. Cramer has returned from Buffalo, New York, and will remain with Dr. Fairfield Snyder this summer.

Ruth & Lloyd have received a lot of fine chromes, already framed, which they will dispose of at a bargain.

Geo. H. Miles has bought the vacant lot adjoining Cissel's drug store, and purposes erecting thereon a building this summer.

The Spring and Summer term of the Corvuss school opened on Monday Inst. Mr. Josiah Shull has been engaged as principal and Miss Josie Rush as assistant.

Mr. John Stearns and wife of Michigan, are spending a few days in the village, visiting with the parents of Mrs. Stearns, nee Miss Ella Topping.

We omitted in our last issue to give the report of District No. 3 School, taught by Mr. Jos. Conrad. The report stands, generally average 38.38-80.

The Flouring Mill owned by Messrs. Short & Bower, Fairfield Center, turns out an excellent brand of flour. The Fairfield flour is kept on sale by Corvuss merchants.

Messrs. Cap. Carpenter and Gilt Helmer have formed a co-partnership for the purpose of carrying on the wagon and blacksmith business. They intend to enlarge their shops and keep on sale an assortment of wagons and buggies in addition to their custom work.

A very sanguine republican on the evening before election, offered to bet two to one against Tom Jordan. A little democratic rouser standing by yanked out a 500 bill and invited the Rep. to "cover that." He didn't do it all the same, but changed his tactics to Fairfield township, betting against Sol. Reinhold, and of course lost his ducks.

Geo. R. Knauser agent for the White Sewing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., claims that he has not had a single order in his place, he embarked in that precarious traffic. Geo. is rather popular on account of his good looks, which may in a spare word of those who growl with shotgun looking out for the irrepressible sewing machine agents. By the way, George is selling more machines than any other agent in the county.

CORVUS, INDIANA, APRIL 15, 1880.

The township committeemen met at Auburn on the 1st inst. and organized for the campaign of 1880 by electing permanent officers and appointing delegates to the various conventions to take place between now and the 22d of June. In our next we will publish the organization complete.

By voting for the adoption of the present amendments the Democracy of Indiana have simply disfranchised themselves. It is the same with every person, of whatever party, who endorsed them. There was not a single clause in them to recommend their adoption. And had the essence of the thing been comprehended by the masses it would have been voted down three to one. The Democratic press of the state neglected their duty and failed to enlighten the people upon the fallacy, whereas the entire republican press kept up a continual howl from the time of their passage by the legislature up to the day of election, urging the people to vote favorably. It is gratifying to know that the people of De Kalb county put the seal of condemnation on the iniquitous thing by a routing majority.

On the morning after election the chief republican henchman of the day looked like a sick bug after the breaking up of a hard winter.

The quarterly meeting of the U. B. society in session for several days past at this place, presiding Elder J. K. Allwood and Rev. Senter officiating, closed last Sabbath evening.

Ed. Johnson returned a few days ago from an extended prospecting tour to the lumber regions of northern Michigan. Ed. pushed his way far into the pineries wading through deep and crossing streams of frozen snow two feet thick. He comes back disgusted, despairing that no inducement would cause him to live where winter reigns pine months in the year, where about two-thirds of the inhabitants are semi-barbarians, and a christian must necessarily take a navy revolver to bed with him and watch the whole night for cut-throats.

BUTLER PARAGRAPHS.

The constitutional amendments were made a party issue. Do we not need some improvements on our streets.

The Republicans wonder why things are so in Wilmington township.

We are expecting our band on the streets to enliven our town each evening.

If the awakening efforts of the democrats of Wilmington township continue, the party will surely reap the reward of their industry.

Butler Grist Mill has changed hands. Undoubtedly the successor will succeed because of usual good work done at these mills.

An examination of De Kalb County Teachers took place Saturday, 3d of April. Quite a number of teachers were present.

We notice that propositions are made for the furnishing of the remaining part of $70,000 for the continuance of the Eel River Railway to Detroit, by Detroiters.

Clippings.

W. H. Vanderbilt's fortune amounts to-day to $180,000,000. He recently drew U. S. Treasury interest to amount of $310,500, for three months, which is four cents a second.

John Shean got drunk and went to bed on the Chicago & Rock Island track, near Colfax. When found the next morning, several trains had passed over him. The coroner's jury gave a verdict accordingly, though it was first supposed he had been murdered and placed on the track.

Robert P. Wooley, of Winfield, Kansas, hung himself in a barn, under circumstances which showed the greatest persistency. He was an estimable young man, only four weeks married to an excellent young woman, whom he appreciated. His rash act was caused by mental depression from loss of property. He left letters and $3,000 for his wife.

The American Colonization Society has undertaken to give free passage and support for six months to as many persons possible within its means. A ship-load of eighty, or one hundred negroes will soon sail for Liberia under its auspices. The society's funds are limited and it is obliged to disregard most of the calls upon its help. Negroes in many southern districts despairing of conquering race prejudice were anxious to surrender everything and emigrate to Liberia if facilities were furnished them for travel.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

Our republican brethren are remarkably quiet since election.

A little daughter of J. D. Williamson has been very sick, but is now, in a fair way to recover.

It is a noticeable fact that there is not so much rip-roarin' and snoring within the radical camp, "about these days—these days."

County School Superintendent Lord McIntosh will soon have to pack his grip sack and "git up and git."

Mr. L. Sherlock of Ohio, brother of R. and Wm. Sherlock, gave them a call week before last while en route home from a visit to Kansas.

Byron Imus has removed his shoe shop to the room formerly occupied as a millinery store, next door west of Wiseman's furniture store.

Joseph Jones, an old resident of Richland township living near Sedan, has sold his farm and will locate either in Kansas or Nebraska.

Another wrinkle has been added to the brow of our friend Gen. H. Miller. The cares of life multiply as the years roll on.

We'll take a little lemon in our's, George.

A French physician has published a pamphlet showing the terrible effects of smoking on the heart.

Of course if a man will take out his heart and smoke on it he is bound to endanger his life.

Mr. R. B. Blucher, the famous travelling salesman for Messrs. Wm. H. & Co., wholesale Cracker and Confectionery merchants Toledo, Ohio, was in town the other day attending to his numerous customers.

Mr. C. J. C. who resides in the south Middleburg, Ky., manufacturing company, Jackson, Michigan, has been stopping at home for a few days attending the bedside of a sick little daughter.

Mr. C. had told us that the season of 1880 had been a profitable one for the sale of this celebrated and indispensable with Millers.

Cuppings.

Business in Chicago is reported to be exceedingly active.

The Spitz dog is still on duty. Last victim Philadelphia.

An unusually heavy cut of logs is reported in Wisconsin.

The Atlanta Cotton Factory has five hundred and sixty employees at work.

A glass manufactory will be built in Parkers, Pennsylvania, at once.

There are in sight in the United States and Canada a little short of 50,000,000 bushels of grain, of which one third is at Chicago.

The Wild Cat or heavy timber regions of Pennsylvania are in a very prosperous condition, and rafts are being run from there by the hundred.

Sir George Balfour lately spoke in the House of Commons to the Speaker alone, there being actually not one single other member in the House.

Re W. Hodgins, a child between seven and eight years of age, living with its parents at No. 345 West Fifth-street, New York, became so frightened by a thunder storm that it was thrown into convulsions and died.

Terre Haute, Indiana, is speculating on the zoological character of a flying creature, captured recently, in a saloon, which it had entered through an open door.

The weight of authority, so far pronounced it a rod bat.

The measles are prevailing to an alarming extent at Kingsford, Ind.; there being nearly one hundred cases in the town now, and they are still spreading, new cases developing every day.

A man giving the name of George M. Jones and claiming to be a Boston merchant, but supposed to have been a Lieutenant in the navy named Smith, shot himself fatally on the 26th in St. Vincent Hospital, New York.

There is a rumor prevalent in a Chamber business. One man in the city will probably be a business this season of over 200,000 feet, and encouaging reports come from all the lumber regions of the states and Canada.

Stagnant Clear blocks of ice, thirty inches thick, are all thing out of the River St. Charles for Quebec storage.

Ice cutting has lasted much longer this year than ever known before.

Heretofore it has always ceased prior to March 15th.

A person by the name of Bartlett returned to his home in Carrollton, Mo., early in the morning and becoming incensed at his wife, burst a leap at her, which, however, struck an infant child in the mother's arms, and will likely result in the death of the child.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1880.

JAY Gould is credited in Wall street with having bought recently 70,000 shares of New York Central Railroad stock from the Syndicate, and there are two opinions as to the purpose in doing so. Some think that he intends to use the stock as a hammer with which to beat down the market, and thus make a general break, but others see in the purchase an indication or a plan to seize on the position left vacant by Mr. Vanderbilt's retirement, and to become the monarch of a line of railroad now reaching from San Francisco to Toledo, and which, by the acquisition of a control of the New York Central Road, would be extended to New York.

The New York Herald says: There is a class of timid people who are afraid of store clerks and who hardly dare to go away without buying something. They tremble at the sight of a waiter and see him, and patiently take what he places before them, never grumbling. They reverence a conductor or a brakeman as if he were a prime minister, and are filled with glory if he only does not put them off their car. They always take the poorest seats for fear that people may think they are selfish, and if a snowball hits them in the head they turn and smile a vote of thanks to the hoodlum who threw it. They are not Irish Heeps, but modest, unworldly, good-hearted people, who admire the saucy, practical ones. But away down in their hearts is a spirit of Wild Bill, and once in a while, when too much imposed upon, they rise up and spill things.

possible rob others to enrich themselves. There are they who oppress the hardy in his wages and take advantage of a man's necessities to devour their substance. They prattle about for pity, and often feed on what does not belong to them. Nothing comes amiss to them, provided they can share it with a good show of safety for themselves.

There are lawless dogs, also, which take advantage of night to do their best.

By day they seem quiet and orderly enough, they lie about the houses, and are in the evening humming. But when night comes they go where they will and do what they please. What were known as sheep-dogs among the farmers in my childhood, always did just this, and only for the blood-stains which they sometimes carried home with them some of them would never have been identified as the guilty brutes they were.

There are human beings much like them. By day they assume a look of innocence. Only they assume a good name. They sometimes are by day the loudest declaimers against the outrages which they themselves commit by night.

But in secret they plot mischief. By day they seek to make an impression by a smiling countenance; at night they follow the lead of their own evil hearts. By day they might almost appear to be defenders of human rights, at night they are ready to slay the innocent.

They are further marked in this text as "evil workers," and in Corinthians II, vi, 15, as "false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ." They taught false doctrines and appealed to the Scriptures for their authority; they undermined the faith of the disciples and claimed to be an act of friendship for them and for truth; under the plea of emancipating men from error, tore their bleeding hearts and plunged them in despair.

the world.

Brethren, beware of such! Cling to the Bible! While doubters cavil do you kneel at the cross! There is but one gospel. All others are false and treacherous fabrics of human carpentry. This one is built by the Infinite; it is after the similitude of a palace; it is as strong and safe as it is glorious. Abide in it forever!

4. There are treacherous dogs; dogs which come fawning about you and then, in an unguarded moment, wound you.

They are enemies disguised; they are like the Indian, who covers his malevolence with a smile and covers his rifle with his blanket until the moment comes to strike, and then does his work of death.

The men just described are of this class. They speak studied words of honeyed kindness, and under cover of these do irreparable injury. They tell men of the innate glory of human nature; in sentences of glowing rhetoric and stately phrases they discourse of human possibilities; of the angel in every human life, which only needs the right kind of culture to develop it; just as the chrysalis only needs sun and air and time to make it a butterfly; or just as every block of marble has in it a Venus or a Greek slave which only needs a sculptor of genius enough to chip off the rough outside and discover the "form divine."

And while thus seeming to set men in pursuit of noble ideals, they really make large things impossible by separating man from God, and leaving him to struggle to the skies alone. A bird might as well try to fly without a buoyant atmosphere by which to rise as for a human being to rise to perfection without God. It is as impossible as for a brook to run from the meadow to the mountain by gravitation. Left to himself, man tends earthward by a law as inevitable as that by which the melted snow rushes in torrents from the hills to the valleys. All history proves it. In the world's most brilliant heathen epochs its intellectual brightness has been fringed by an immorality as dreadful and dark as the night of Egypt.

Men, therefore, who talk so eloquently of human possibilities, but leave God out of the problem, are deceivers; they are the wreckers who display brilliant lights on dangerous coasts and thus lead ships upon the rocks; they are teachers who trifle with man's highest interest, a wrecker who dashes upon the rocks a merchantman from the Indies laden with gold, and spices, and all precious things; nay, one who wrecks a steamer freighted with loves, hopes, plans, of a thousand and human beings commits a venial act, compared with him who, by false teachings, ruins souls.

And I do not wonder that Paul here gathers into one word all the indignation, condemnation and burning scorn of his great soul and hurls at such men the epithet, "dogs." Such they are, and as such shall be branded through everlasting ages.

False doctrine is not the only form in which treacherous dogs approach us. Any evil that comes to us in the guise of an angel is of the same character. Such is any seeming good which can be reached only by a path which lies across the domain of moral conviction. Speculation may seem good to a young man, even if he steal from his employer, temporarily, the money to speculate with. Evil companions may seem less dangerous than croakers preach, and he may suppose himself strong enough to resist the shock of seductive sin.

Moderate drinking may seem to offer to convivial companionship and pleasant exhilaration with little danger. And so on to the end.

Now, let me warn you to beware of all these, and every other like them. They are all treacherous dogs; they only lick your hand that they may get a chance to bite it.

I used to read of serpents, which crept up carefully into trees where were birds. Then the charmer caught the bird's eye; he moved his body in gentle oscillations; dazzled the bird by his flashing eye; threw over him such a magic spell that the bird at length fluttered into his very jaws, dazed, bewildered, his natural dread palsied by the cunning tricks of his destroyer. Then a sudden spring; a forked tongue; deadly fang—death.

Such is seductive sin; the velvet paw of a tiger, which has under the velvet five claws, a casket of silver, gold-mounted, which has in it a corpse.

Such is the suggestion which comes sometimes to the young Christian, that Christian duty had better be done by older persons; that an easy conscience is a means of pleasure, and that the true theory is a compromise between Christ and the world.

I tell you nay. These are only deceptive beauties, by which Satan conceals the gate of hell. As serpents sometimes lurk in beds of sweet-scented flowers, so death hides behind these delusions.

5. There are rabid dogs whose bite causes madness. Their victims are drunkards, who have delirium; men whose brains are peopled with swarming troops of gorgons and devils; creatures of all horrible shapes and malevolent tempers; serpents which twine themselves in their deadly coils and bury their fangs in the quivering hearts of those they torment.

Gamblers, also, who play until the wildest winds that sweep earth or sea are zephyrs compared with the whirlwinds which rage in their minds. Suicides, also, who rush in frenzy before the throne of God.

Now, rabid dogs do not always show it. Many a victim has been bitten by an animal which seemed only in sport, and days and sometimes months and years have passed before the deadly virus threw the victim into the horrors of hydrophobia.

Just so the men who now lie in drunkard's graves, and others who reel delirious toward them, did not dream of peril when they took the first step in the downward way. They were playing with madness without knowing it, as a child might sport with a tiger's cub, supposing it to be a kitten:

Oh! beware! A man who should play with a rattlesnake because it is a little one would be called a fool. The danger is not in the size of the thing but in its nature. One of these serpents not a foot long has venom enough in the little sack which lies at the root of his hollow fang to kill an elephant. The bite of a rabid poodle is as deadly as that of a mastiff and would kill Goliath as readily as an infant.

Oh! shun initial sin. Touch not, taste not, handle not. A man who does not drink the first glass will never be a drunkard.

6. There are silent dogs. They are not like Goldsmith's, in the Deserted Village.

"That bayed the whispering wind."
Sending their hollow cry far along the valley. They come noiselessly; as the robber comes; you are in their power before you know of their presence.

Just so there are temptations which come as the lion comes; they catch men as the hunter catches birds, in an evil hour, when it cometh upon them.

Against such as these there is but one protection—everlasting watchfulness. Keep away from their hunting grounds. "A wise man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself." A man who does not wish to be stung will not thrust his naked hand into a hornet's nest.

There are backbiting dogs—a cowardly crew which always attack in the rear. They have hope only in taking you at a disadvantage. They would skulk away from the glance of an honest, manly eye. They take no risks and offer no advantages to an opponent. They are like night thieves, who are always cowards, and never enter a house except upon the presumption that the inmates are defenselessly asleep.

Such is sin. It assails men where they are weakest, just as vultures come down on men in battle-fields who are wounded and too weak to defend themselves. If there is any opening through the defensive armor of the soul, that is just the point through which Apollyon thrusts his deadly spear. He tempts the warlike with money and the ambitious with power; the vain with finery and the lustful with indulgence. He digs pits for the third men and breaks the crutches of the lame.

All this is devilish, I know, but what else can we expect of the devil? You look for treachery from an Indian and cruelty from a liar.

Perhaps it may appear from all this that Paul meant much when he said, "Beware!" It is one of those terrific things which flashed out of his great, indignant heart, as lightning leaps from an overcharged cloud. He was not farther from a jest when he ranged amid the splendors of the third heaven, viewing the cohorts of God and gazing on the Son, than when he wrote this line of hot denunciation.

Beware! That does not mean that you are to seek a fight with him, but rather the contrary. If you are a wise man you do not pick up a stick or stone and rush to attack every evil you see. You don't do it even if he stands right in your way. A man who tries to pick up every dog that crosses his path is a fool. We don't do that; we turn aside. If he is a very large and surly-looking beast, we turn out early and give him a wide berth; and do it politely.

So a man who rushes at every evil and seeks a fight with all sin is unwise; he has studied his Bible and himself to little purpose. Elijah rebuked Ahab three and one-half years. That great rough prophet of the desert taking counsel, courage, faith, power, light of mind, but counsel was wisdom.

Every man, it isn't best to provoke the devil. He is a great deal too smart and cunning to be so easily deceived. He will find enough to do to defend himself from the evil that calls him. Don't rush into temptation as a sort of strength. Don't dare destruction by exposing yourself to kill it. Kill a rattlesnake if he attacks you, but don't go snoring the mountains hunting rattlesnakes for fun. A man who has got into the rapids just above the falls is wise to strike for the shore, seize a rope, cling to it, and anything to escape. But there is a good deal more wisdom in keeping so far away from those whirling waters that he cannot fall in. Stopping down to gather flowers close along the edge of them is the folly of maniacs.

Gough tells of a man who used to hold a plug of tobacco in his hand and say: "I conquered you." This might do for him, but the principle is wrong.

By all this I warn you to beware of the danger of dogs; also against their character and example. Do not allow yourself to become treacherous to the highest interests of man by teaching false doctrine, or living a false life. Do not assail men, in treacherous ways. Do not live a selfish life, and fail to make return for what you get.

I have spoken of silent dogs which bite without warning. Such are silent because they are subtle. Do not be like them, but attack even sin and Satan, in a manly, brave and Christian way. But there are other dogs which are silent because they are cowards. When the thief comes they run and hide. Do not imitate them. Every good man is bound to speak and live so that, as Jesus said, "I was a constant rebuke to the sinners of his time, he will warn men of the danger of sin. A man who fails to raise his hand and voice to resist the march of the gigantic sin which stalk like armed men through these years, is a moral imbecile or coward. He who courts unnecessary danger is presumptuous; he who runs from the just and God-appointed war against sin and seeks safety in the rear of ranks of braver men, is despicable. When God commands utterance silence becomes sin. The truly brave man will not rush unbidden to the cannon's mouth, nor, when commanded to do it, will he skulk away and let another die in his place.

There rises before me a beautiful city. I enter it; walk over its golden pavements, gardens, rivers, palaces, where princes live, for all here are kings. No dog is here, no vicious thing, no unclean, no sorer, no whoremonger.

Where are they? Without!

Forever! That gate of pearl opens often, but not for them. Children come in, fathers, mothers, saints with silver hair—but no one unclean!

Therefore, "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may enter in thro the gate into the city."

Another Town Heard From.

BOSTON, N. Y., July 31, 1878.
M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—I have always been opposed to medicines, but I had been an invalid, being with dizziness and fainting fits caused by a deranged stomach and bowels and indigestion for several years. I doctored a great deal but still they grew worse. I have taken seven boxes of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic and have not had one since I began its use. I am happy to say that I feel fully restored by your blood and liver tonic, which I recommend on every occasion. If a system is out of order it appears to have the power to restore it to health, and that is what it wanted.

Very truly,
OBED G. CHASE.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Tonic may well be called "The conqueror of the times." It is truly the triumph of the age. Whoever has "blue" should take it, for it regulates the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility, Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline, cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhoea, etc.

Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

JIM BLAINE, OF MAINE.

Leading members of the Ohio House of Representatives (including John C. Covert) have sent "ringing" telegrams to the Blaine Club of this city, which were read at the meeting of the club on Saturday night. We quote this reference to the mighty Jim: "He is the greatest embodiment of patriotism that lives beneath the folds of our flag. The great mass of the American people prefer him to any other man in the Union." Jim was a lovely cherub of a "patriot" when he sold his influence as Speaker of the House of Representatives to a thieving railroad clique. The whole vile story has been told once and has never been discredited. If chance should make Jim Blaine, of Maine, the Republican nominee for President it will be told again. How do the "great mass of the American people" like to have it said of them that they prefer such a man "to any other in the Union?" It is not alone in the case of Grant that the Democrats are having their old arguments and persons' allegations verified by the Republicans. Since the Republican camp has been rent by presidential factions, all that the Democrats ever alleged against Blaine, and much more besides, has been charged by his Republican enemies. The Democrats are evidently to have powerful allies this year.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

—The following is the latest authentic case of cutting off one's nose to spite his face: It occurred in Connecticut, on the Connecticut Western Railroad. The conductor noticed a man who repeatedly paid his fare on the train, and never seemed to think of having a ticket, so he thought the passenger suffered the extra loss possibly through ignorance that it was cheaper to buy tickets. The man said: "Well, I'll tell you, some time ago last summer I got into a little trouble with this company, and they need me meanly, so I just said to myself, 'That Connecticut Western Company won't never get another cent of my money if I live a hundred years, and they won't and that's my last year.' So I went to the conductor and the conductor went into the baggage car to laugh."

The Late John L. Wilson of the B. & O. Railroad.

Under the caption of "21 years on the rail—some scenes of an old Conductor," by Mr. Henry F. Fisher, editor of the Clyde (O.) Express, formerly associated with the editor of the Head Light, in the publication of that paper, he gives the following personal reminiscence of the late John L. Wilson, of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

PERSONAL REMINISCENCE.

Mr. John L. Wilson died sixty-one years. The deceased had been for many years in the employ of the B. & O. R. Co. and for some years, had quite recently, in the capacity of Chief of Road, been at the B. & O. Road, this city, were employed at that time in the office of the B. & O. R. Co.

A rather singular character was Mr. John L. Wilson, spoken of above. He was one of the victims of the great poisoning affair at the National Hotel in Washington, in 1857, just previous to the inauguration of James Buchanan, as President, in which it has ever been believed that the life of the incoming President was intended to be destroyed. From the effects of the poison, aided perhaps by the terrible discovery that he was one of the poisoned ones, the hair and beard of Mr. Wilson turned in a single night from its natural black color to an almost perfect white, and continued so the remainder of his life-time. He never wore a beard afterwards, keeping his face closely shaven; and as it was so remarkably fresh, youthful face, the intense white eyes which shone out from under the white hair gave him an appearance that was very striking and sure to attract attention. The writer's acquaintance with him began in 1859, about the time the Baltimore & Ohio Company took charge of what is now the Lake Erie Division, formerly the Sandusky, Mansfield & Newark Railroad. Mr. Wilson had come from Baltimore in company with President Garrett, and other officials of the company, on a trip of inspection over the newly acquired line. They arrived at Sandusky on a Saturday afternoon, and the same evening President Garrett and the others, Mr. Wilson excepted, went off on the steamer Jay Cooke to spend Sunday at Put-in-Bay Island. Mr. Wilson remained in the city, and by appointment met the writer—at that time in charge of the operations of the Division—at the Company's office Sunday morning.

On meeting him, "How," said he in a good bad manner, "other his own," "these other fellows have gone to the Island to look at the scenery. I don't care a d—n about any kind of scenery except railroad scenery, and I want to see everything you've got." Accordingly the forenoon was spent in going about the buildings, shops, warehouses, docks and grounds of the Company—the keen eye of Mr. Wilson discovering every noticeable thing faster than the writer could point them out to him. Though perhaps the most inveterate cigar-smoker we ever met, he was carefully observant of his own regulations which prohibited smoking in shops and warehouses, and promptly put out the light of his "five-twenty"—a name he had given the cigars he smoked, on account of their great size, strength and cost—before entering any of these places.

Though Mr. W. was a white haired old man, and the writer a young one, the elder's powers of endurance were the greater, and before the hour for dinner we had to "hush" and beg to go home and rest. In the afternoon it was warm weather, we again met him; this time he wanted to "see the town." And he did see it, as Bayard Taylor saw Europe in his "Views Afloat," but it came pretty near being a rising up process for his guide. If there was any part of the city of Sandusky that we didn't look at, it was because we couldn't find the way. The capsizing of a small boat in the bay caused the old man to run like a boy to the water's edge, and as the capsized parties, two in number, were brought ashore with a nearly emptied beer keg whose contents had been the means of their catastrophe, Mr. W. poured questions at them in mutter like a shower of grape grinning from a Gatling gun.

Finally, as the sun began to sink, Mr. Wilson proposed a return to his private car where he could have his negro man Joe "stir up a pitcher of lemonade." Arriving there, Joe was not long in stirring up the lemonade—about a two gallon wash-pitcher, running over the brim. The old gentleman looked thirstfully at the pitcher as Joe set it down, and then in a tired voice said to the writer:

"P—, wouldn't you just as soon have a glass of wine? There isn't any more lemonade than I want myself, and Joe has some elegant champagne on the ice—some that was brought over in one of our own steamers."

Of course the old gentleman got the lemonade, and drank it too, draining the pitcher. We almost looked for him to swell up and burst, but he did neither. Next day, relating the affair to Mr. W. C. Quincy, General Manager of the company's line in the West, it assumed us this was nothing unusual, that Mr. Wilson was habitual in drinking lemonade in as large or even larger quantities—adding, if we mistake not, that this practice was adopted after the "poisoning" affair at Washington, and kept up as a sort of perpetual antidote ever afterwards.

In the evening Mr. W. was again bright and lively as at dawn, spending the time, seated on the edge of a dock overlooking the Bay and watching for the coming of a steamer with his friends from the Island, in giving an account of the Company's works of all kinds at headquarters in Baltimore, and puffing away at one after another of his five-twenty-horse-power cigars. The man must have had a wonderful constitution, to have gone through a poisoning from which a number of others died, and inhaled so much concentrated tobacco smoke for so many years afterwards. He was a genial gentleman, but full of fire and profanity when aroused. Our own acquaintance with him never grew intimate, for not long afterward he gave up his duties in part, and did not make any more trips West of the Ohio. But he had the respect and regard of those who had known him longest and best. His familiar figure, bright face, shining eyes and crown of white hair, his inevitable black cigar and sometimes rough language, cannot help being long remembered as a part of the railroad circle of which he so long formed so prominent a character. But he could take no cigars with him.

"This," said the wild-eyed stranger, as the train rushed past two ancient trees and the last sad remains of a once beautiful rail fence, "this is the spot, where, four weeks ago, we stayed: three days and three nights snowbound, unable to leave the train."

"Gracious," said the little man in the next seat, "pray how did you live all that time?"

"Oh, we managed to get along all right, all except a couple of babies who were being weaned; they suffered for the want of milk."

"Dear me," said the little man in a sympathetic voice, "and of course no milk was to be had?"

"No, though they might have been spared; but for the brutal, unnatural conduct of the engineer, some of the boys offered to milk the cowcatcher, but he wouldn't let 'em."

Then the wild-eyed stranger pretended to pick a cinder from his off eye.

GIVE us a Western Democrat for President on a platform that will meet the Democratic national sentiment, and there will be such a campaign fought and such a victory won in 1880, as has never been paralleled in history.

National Democratic Convention.

The executive committee of the national democratic committee issues the following call:

The national democratic committee, having met in the city of Washington, February 23d, has appointed Tuesday, the 23d of June next, at noon, as the time, and chosen Cincinnati as the place of holding the national democratic convention.

Each state is entitled to representation therein equal to a double number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. All democratic congressmen and other adherents of the United States, irrespective of past political associations or differences, who can unite with us in the effort for a pure, economical government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention. At the last national democratic convention, held in the city of St. Louis in 1878, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the state be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1890, whether it be desirable to continue the two-third rule longer in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such resolution in the call for the next convention.

News Briefs.

—Col. James Wood, late Superintendent of the Cincinnati police force, died on the 20th.

A New Orleans boy who was exercising in a gymnasium, was accidentally strangled to death by getting his head in a swinging ring.

A physician at Africa, Ohio, named Parker administered strychnine in place of salutarina to a little two-year-old child, and it was seized with convulsions and died within an hour.

A terrific Western tornado passed over Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and Arkansas, on Saturday night, 18th inst., causing great destruction of life and property. The storm carried dissolution and death in its track, tearing down houses and outbuildings, and destroying every bit of vegetation in its way. Wagons were driven for miles and stock killed as though carried to the slaughter pen. In some instances almost entire villages were demolished. The village of Shoreline in Rock county, Wis., and the towns of Jindilly and Marshfield, Mo., sustained heavy damages and the loss of life is fearful to contemplate. Seventy bodies have been recovered. The loss of property will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Latest reports from the Northwestern wheat region are not very favorable to a large crop this season. Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska, all agree to this—there is less seed was sown this spring than last and that the farmers calculate on having but little to spare for exportation. Many of these statements must be taken with several grains of allowance, but it is doubtless true that the low prices at which the farmer has had to sell, despite high prices paid by consumers, have induced him to turn his attention to other crops.

The reports of the commercial agencies just published show that there is a steady increase in the mercantile prosperity of the country. Against 3,355 failures throughout the United States during the first three months of 1878, and 2,521 in 1879, there were during the same quarter just passed only 1,432 failures. The amount of liabilities represented by these failures at the beginning of 1880 was only about $13,118,788 and $43,000,000 last year, during the corresponding period.

Baltimore, Ohio &amp; Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune, April 29th.]

The annual meeting of the stockholders of this Baltimore, Ohio & Chicago, (Chicago branch of Baltimore & Ohio) was held at the Palmer House yesterday. Mr. Daniel A. Jones was elected (chairman and Mr. J. H. Hope Sutor acted as Secretary. A large majority of the stock was represented, mostly by proxy. The election of Directors for the ensuing year resulted as follows: John King, Jr., William Keyser, C. H. Hudson, J. K. Cowan, Col. Geo. R. Dennis, James Walsh, John Tyrrell, Nelson Ludington, and D. A. Jones. The Secretary read a report showing that the condition of the road has been well maintained and considerable improvements made. Two new elevators were erected on the line, one at Bremen, Ind., and one at Hicksville, Ohio. There have also been laid during the year 505 tons of new steel rail between this city and Chicago Junction. The report of earnings and expenses were already published in the Baltimore & Ohio report.

Vice-President, Keyser, of the B. & O., made the statement that the increased terminal facilities at Baltimore and the construction of a new elevator would have the effect of largely increasing the foreign business of the B. & O. Forty-nine million bushels of grain were exported from Baltimore last year. This year it expected to increase the amount of foreign business to $6,000,000.

After adjournment the following officers organized, and elected the following officers: John King, Jr., President, J. H. Sutor, Secretary and Treasurer, and J. L. Randolph, Chief Engineer.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

[From the "various" Edition.]

—The late Mrs. Bracken and her engagement, on the Baltimore Road, now wear uniforms.

—P. Rowe has sold out his interest in the meat market and is devoting his attention to the stock business.

—Geo. Biehler a former resident has returned to Garrett and opened a saloon at his old stand on Randolph street.

—Mr. A. H. Phillips is "fixing up" for the summer business by whitewashing and kalsomining his grocery room on Randolph street.

—390 Thomas is said to be so expert a pistol shot that he can hit a flea's eye two out of three at ten paces. D—f we believe it.

—Corporation election for choice of town officers for the ensuing year will be held next month, and then we shall see what we shall see.

—Farmers and Stock dealers, look to your interest and use Uncle Sam's Condition Powder, for sale at the Blue Front Drug Store.

—Joe Loveland's Head Light is now issued from Garrett in an elegant and tasty form. [Kendallville News.]

Thanks. But the HEAD LIGHT is issued from both Corvina and Garrett.

—At the Blue Front Drug Store you can find all kinds of Sewing Machine Needles for any machine that's in use.

—The Head Light will be issued semi-monthly hereafter. It has been enlarged and otherwise improved. We wish it success. [Herald.]

—Wall Paper in a variety of patterns, and nobby styles, at the Blue Front Drug Store.

—At Corvina, DeKalb county, Indiana, a party of twenty went to the house of Tunia Miller, whose daughter has been recently married, to give the married couple a belling. Jesse Miller, brother of the bride, went out to induce the men to go away, and being so induced by John Williams, Miller shot him dead. Miller was put in jail.

We clip the above from the Cleveland Plain Dealer of the 21st. It will be news to this community, as this is the first information we have had of the occurrence of such a blow of a racket in Corvina town.

Clippings.

—Now, said the examining physician to the unhappy pilot, "you may pick out all the heads you can." The pilot commenced by grasping the learned professor's nose, which was worsted. "That will do," said the professor; "your certificate is ready."

—Another man has been found who says a man told him that he saw a man who was traveling on the cars, who a man told him that a prominent Democrat had informed him that Mr. Tilden would certainly withdraw because he was sick.

—While digging a grave for the remains of the late Bishop Pellico, in San Fernando, Texas, Cathedral, the workmen exhumed five skeletons. This part of the Cathedral is 150 years old, and it is supposed the bodies were buried there during the Mexican war. The earth about the place was found full of bones.

—Coroner O. L. Mann and George E. Elton, one of the leading Chicago undertakers, had a disgraceful altercation over a corpse, during which the body was roughly torn out of the coffin, thrown into a box, and carried away by some of the Coroner's assistants, while that official had Elton arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

—There is a largely increased decrease of cotton under cultivation this year. The crop for the coming season is estimated at five million of bales, of about four hundred and fifty pounds each, or 2,250,000,000 pounds. The net profit per pound is about fifty per cent, and the total value of the crop is estimated at not less than $250,000,000.

—That the great business revival of last year has not abated its force, or even attained its limit may be inferred from the railroad earnings of the past month, which, on the thirty-five principal roads of the country are over one third greater than they were in March, 1879. The exact figures are—$13,880,000 for the latter and $18,560,000 for the former.

—The opening pages of the HEAD LIGHT to-day contains an interesting and instructive sermon entitled, "Beware of Dogs," preached by the Rev. J. H. Bayless at the Central M. E. Church, Detroit, on a recent Sunday, and which we re-publish from the Free Press of that city. The subject is well chosen and the discourse of more the ordinary interest, and it will pay perusal.

—Reyher of Garrett has the best selected stock of Dry Goods and Boots and Shoes in Garrett.

—Not long ago an old and faithful conductor, one of the most popular men on the road, was discharged by the Lake Shore company for omitting to comply in a single instance with one of the established rules, which was to call out each station as the train approached. There was a "spotter" in the car which explains the matter. The conductor was promptly discharged and when inquiring whether he should call at the office occasionally, he was told that it would be of no use as he could not have his position again. A valued exchange in speaking of the pusillanimous conduct of the company in discharging a faithful employee on the report of a sneaking spy, and for so slight an offense, adds that nothing more could be expected of a road that refuses to bury its dead. Just so.

—Remember Reyher of Garrett is the man that knocks the bottom out of goods. Go and see him.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

COLUMBIA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1893.

Mr. W. D. Massey, a traveling salesman, who was one of the passengers on the east-bound train on Sunday night, 14th, and stopped at Marshfield, endeavored to depict the scenes he witnessed there to a reporter of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat on Tuesday. He said that some time before the train reached Marshfield the unusual brilliancy in the sky attracted notice. Getting nearer to the doomed town it was seen that the buildings were on fire and the destruction of the town was threatened. Mr. Massey got off the train at the station, and accompanied the two men who appeared at the station, blood-stained and lacerated, to inform the people on the train what had happened, and to implore assistance. He could not give any idea, he lacked words to describe the terrors of the scenes he had witnessed, and the awful suspense of the "dark night." Finding that telegraphic communication was cut off, a man was sent on horseback to Strafford to telegraph to Springfield for aid, which came at five o'clock in the morning. Mr. Massey related tales of suffering which have been spoken of in the dispatches already received. In recovering the body of the wife of Judge Ryan, from the ruins of their dwelling, Mr. Massey said that two dogs were found completely covered in the debris, alive, and not three feet distant from the mangled corpse of the lady. Seven bodies of white and colored people were found close together near Barnes' mill. Mr. Leeds, a lawyer, and his family sought refuge in the jail building, occupied by Judge Ryan and family. They went into a room adjoining that in which the jailer and his family were assembled, and while the latter escaped with only a few bruises, the Leeds family were all killed. A solitary prisoner was in the lock-up. He was found in utter ignorance of the nature of the disaster. He was injured, his prison being so securely built and protected as to stand uninjured among the surrounding devastation. He pleaded to be released, and without much hesitation, his cell door was battered down and he was set free.

News Brevities.

The new ocean cable is almost completed.

A wealthy Indiana farmer, named David Swygard, has starved himself to death under the hallucination that if he ate, his family would starve to death.

The lame, blind, and sick of Scott county, Virginia, are being healed by the supposed miraculous powers of a deeply religious man named Richard Miller. He cures by the laying on of hands, modestly gives God the credit for it, and refuses compensation.

Inquiry into the cause of the Tay bridge disaster has been reopened to hear scientific testimony. Proofs are said to have been discovered showing that the train went off the bridge before the bridge fell.

Some riotous up in Birmingham built their nest last year in a tree near a tinsmith's shop, and when the March winds blew the limb down the other day, that hanging nest was found wired on to it with pieces of wire and the cuttings swept out of the shop, better than any man could have done it.

The collapse of the iron and other booms, and the threatened collapse of the paper boom, is a sign that cliques that combine to "squeeze" people cannot always succeed. It by no means signifies that the revival of business activity and prosperity has no bottom—that it is founded on a rock is evident from the large increase in business and earnings reported by the great railroad arteries of the country. Everybody is all right except the speculators.

A serious shooting affray occurred at a north side saloon in Clyde, Ohio, Saturday evening, 17th inst., between Geo. Ramsay, a lad aged nineteen years and of rather fast habits, and Geo. H. Clark, a colored laborer. Young Ramsay and the darkey became involved in a drunken quarrel in the course of which the former drew a revolver and shot the latter through the left lung. At last accounts the darkey was in a critical condition and the wound supposed to be mortal. Geo. Ramsay is a son of Frank Ramsay, a prominent stock dealer of that place, and known to many farmers in DeKalb county. The saloon where the fracas took place has become notorious for scenes of violence; it was there that Constable Tammans was shot by Eli Cupp three years ago, and in which Cupp himself was shot to death by Wm. Hays only two years since, the latter tragedy occurring at the time the writer was a resident of the town. The local paper has very appropriately named the dive the Shooting Gallery Saloon. Young Ramsay escaped by a rear door after the shooting, and up to the 22d had not been captured, though officers were in pursuit.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1893.

JAY Gould is credited in Wall street with having bought recently 75,000 shares of New York Central Railroad stock from the Syndicate, and there are two opinions as to the purpose in doing so. Some think that he intends to use the stock as a hammer with which to beat down the market, and thus make a general break, but others see in the purchase an indication or a plan to seize on the position left vacant by Mrs. Vanderbilt's retirement, and to become the monarch of a line of railroad now reaching from San Francisco to Toledo, and which, by the acquisition of a control of the New York Central Road, would be extended to New York.

The New York Herald says: There is a class of timid people who are afraid of store clerks and who hardly dare to go away without buying something. They tremble at the sight of a waiter and see him, and patiently take what he places before them, never grumbling. They reverence a conductor or a brakeman as if he were a prime minister, and are filled with glory if he only does not put them off the car. They always take the poorest seats for fear that people may think they are selfish, and if a snowball hits them in the head they turn and smile a vote of thanks to the hoodlum who threw it. They are not Uriah Heeps, but modest, unworldly, good-hearted people, who admire the saucy, practical ones. But, away down in their hearts is a spirit of Wild Bill, and once in a while, when too much imposed upon, they rise up and spill things.

THE OLD MILL.

BY THOMAS DUEN ENGLISH.

Here from the brow of the hill I look,
A lattice of boughs and leaves,
On a gray mill with its gambrel roof,
And the miller, in his white coat,
And the cooling water's sound,
And I see the black birds rise and fall
As the wheel goes slowly round.

I have sat here when I was young,
With my feet on the mill's side,
And I have sat here when I was old,
And I have sat here when I was blind,
And I have sat here when I was deaf,
And I have sat here when I was dumb,
And I have sat here when I was dead.

The miller's name was Mr. Brown,
And he was a good man,
And he was a good man,
And he was a good man,
And he was a good man,
And he was a good man,
And he was a good man.

BEWARE OF DOGS.

A Sermon by the Rev. J. H. Baylis—Some Earnest and Practical Words of Warning.

(From the Detroit Free Press, March 21)

The following is a copy of a sermon preached last Sunday evening by the Rev. J. H. Baylis at the Central M. E. Church.

Text, 1. Beware of dogs.

It might almost seem, at the first blush, that in using this figure of speech St. Paul stooped a little from the dignity and grace which usually characterize his language. It might appear also that the exhortation, besides being undignified in form, is trivial in matter.

We shall see, however, as we look into it more carefully, that neither of these thoughts is correct. The language is a well-chosen figure, the matter is of great importance.

In both the East and the West the term dog is one of baseness and degradation. To call a man a dog, is to say he is low and mean. There are dogs that are good and faithful, and even noble, but somehow, as a class, they have come to stand for what is possible rob others to enrich themselves. These are they who oppress the hiring in his wages and take advantage of him in his necessities to devour their substance. They prevail about for prey, and often feed on what does not belong to them. Nothing comes under to them, provided they can secure with a good show of safety for themselves.

There are lawless dogs, also, which take advantage of night to do mischief.

By day they seem quiet and orderly enough, they lie about the owners' premises and do not seem to be in the least disturbed. But when night comes they go where they will and do what they please. What were known as sheep-dogs among the farmers in my childhood, always did just that, and only for the blood-sucking which they sometimes carried home with them some of them would never have been identified to the family hounds they were.

There are human beings much like them. By day they assume a look of respectability. Openly they assume a good name. They sometimes are hired by the hired laborers against the outrage which they themselves commit by night.

But in secret they plot mischief. By day they seek to make an impression by a smiling countenance, at night they follow the lead of their own evil desires. By day you might almost suppose them to be defenders of humanity, but at night they are ready to slay the innocent.

They are further described in this text as "evil workers," and in Corinthians, II, xi, 13, as "false apostles, deceiving workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ." They taught false doctrines and appealed to the Scriptures for their authority; they undermined the faith of the disciples and claimed to be an act of friendship for them and for truth; under the plea of emancipating men from error, tore their bleeding hearts and plunged them in despair.

As though one should dig up your grapes, and plant poison ivy, and justify the outrage by claiming that ivy grows better in this climate and furnishes better shade.

There are just such men now, aiming to supplant God's revelation by the loud-sounding and confident inferences of human philosophy; taking from men the heart-strengthening doctrines of Jesus Christ, they would feed them on the rattling husks of their own theories; coming to men who are struggling against sin they rob them of all hope of help from the Infinite and leave them to wage the hopeless war alone; approach the dying as they enter the valley leaning on the arm of Jesus Christ; they steal away that staff and send them down among the shadows all alone, as helpless as an infant in the raging sea; going among the mourners at the grave-side who are burying their dead in hope of a glorious resurrection and a divine immortality; rob them of that hope; and leave them shivering in cold wind of despair.

For all such as these, the Bible has only execration. It regards them as does men who rob widows and smite orphans. It is a sad, sad business, this cutting men loose from anchorage and setting them adrift on the tempest-swept sea of doubt; this silencing prayer on the lips of want; this driving light and song out of the gloomy, dreadful chamber of the mourner's heart; this weakening men in the culminating struggle and leaving them to fight him off the skeleton hand all alone; this erasing Christian epitaphs and names from tomb-stones, and turning the world of struggling humanity over to the cruel mercies of a materialism as cold as the forehead of the dead; oh! it is dreadful!

To steal bread from starving children would be a trivial offense compared to this. I am not amazed that Paul, Peter, Jude and John, evoke their fiercest denunciations when they speak of these men who thus trifle with immortality, and put out the light of the world.

Brethren, beware of such! Cling to the Bible! While doubters cavil do you kneel at the cross! There is but one gospel. All others are false and treacherous fabrics of human carpentry. This one is built by the Infinite: it is after the similitude of a palace; it is as strong and safe as it is glorious. Abide in it forever!

4. There are treacherous dogs; dogs which come fawning about you and

They are enemies disguised they are like the Indian, who covers his malevolence with a smile and covers his rifle with his blanket until the moment comes to strike, and then does his work of death.

The men just described are of this class. They speak studied words of honeyed kindness, and under cover of these do irreparable injury. They tell men of the innate glory of human nature; in sentences of glowing rhetoric and stately phrases they discourse of human possibilities; of the angel in every human life, which only needs the right kind of culture to develop it; just as the chrysalis only needs sun and air and time to make it a butterfly; or just as every block of marble has in it a Venus or a Greek slave which only needs a sculptor of genius enough to chip off the rough outside and discover the "form divine."

And while thus seeming to set men in pursuit of noble ideals, they really make large things impossible by separating man from God, and leaving him to struggle to the skies alone. A bird might as well try to fly without a buoyant atmosphere by which to rise as for a human being to rise to perfection without God. It is as impossible as for a brook to run from the meadow to the mountain by gravitation. Left to himself, man tends earthward by a law as inevitable as that by which the melted snow rushes in torrents from the hills to the valleys. All history proves it. In the world's most brilliant heathen epochs its intellectual brightness has been fringed by an immorality as dreadful and dark as the night of Egypt.

Men, therefore, who talk so eloquently of human possibilities, but leave God out of the problem, are deceivers; they are the wreckers who display brilliant lights on dangerous coasts and thus lead ships upon the rocks; they are teachers who trifle with man's highest interest, a wrecker who dashes upon the rocks a merchantman from the Indies laden with gold, and spices, and all precious things; nay, one who wrecks a steamer freighted with loves, hopes, plans, of a thousand and human beings commits a venial act, compared with him who, by false teachings, ruins souls.

And I do not wonder that Paul here gathers into one word all the indignation, condemnation and burning scorn of his great soul and hurls at such men the epithet, "dogs." Such they are, and as such shall be branded through everlasting ages.

False doctrine is not the only form in which treacherous dogs approach us. Any evil that comes to us in the guise of an angel is of the same character. Such is any seeming good which can be reached only by a path which lies across the domain of moral conviction. Speculation may seem good to a young man, even if he steal from his employer, temporarily, the money to speculate with. Evil companions may seem less dangerous than croakers preach, and he may suppose himself strong enough to resist the shock of seductive sin.

Moderate drinking may seem to offer to convivial companionship and pleasant exhilaration with little danger. And so on to the end.

Now, let me warn you to beware of all these, and every other like them. They are all treacherous dogs; they only lick your hand that they may get a chance to bite it.

I used to read of serpents, which crept up carefully into trees where were birds. Then the charmer caught the bird's eye; he moved his body in gentle oscillations; dazzled the bird by his flashing eye; threw over him such a magic spell that the bird at length fluttered into his very jaws, dazed, bewildered, his natural dread palsied by the cunning tricks of his destroyer. Then a sudden spring; a forked tongue; deadly fang—death.

Such is seductive sin; the velvet paw of a tiger, which has under the velvet five claws, a casket of silver, gold-mounted, which has in it a corpse.

Such is the suggestion which comes sometimes to the young Christian, that Christian duty had better be done by older persons; that an easy conscience is a means of pleasure; and that the true theory is a compromise between Christ and the world.

I tell you nay. These are only deceptive beauties, by which Satan conceals the gate of hell. As serpents sometimes lurk in beds of sweet-scented flowers, so death hides behind these delusions.

5. There are rabid dogs whose bite causes madness. Their victims are drunkards, who have delirium; men whose brains are peopled with swarming troops of gorgons and devils; creatures of all horrible shapes and malevolent tempers; serpents which twine themselves in their deadly coils and bury their fangs in the quivering hearts of those they torment.

Gambblers, also, who play until the wildest winds that sweep earth or sea are zephyrs compared with the whirlwinds which rage in their minds. Soldiers, also, who rush in frenzy before the throng of God.

Now, rabid dogs do not always show it. Many a victim has been bitten by an animal which seemed only in sport, and days and sometimes months and years have passed before the deadly virus threw the victim into the horrors of hydrophobia.

Just so the men who now lie in drunkard's graves, and others who reel delirious toward them, did not dream of peril when they took the first step in the downward way. They were playing with madness without knowing it, as a child might sport with a tiger's cub, supposing it to be a kitten.

Oh! beware! A man who should play with a rattlesnake because it is a little one would be called a fool. The danger is not in the size of the thing but in its nature. One of these serpents not a foot long has venom enough in the little sack which lies at the root of his hollow fang to kill an elephant. The bite of a rabid poodle is as deadly as that of a mastiff and would kill Goliath as readily as an infant.

Oh! shun initial sin. "Touch not, taste not, handle not." A man who does not drink the first glass will never be a drunkard.

6. There are silent dogs. They are not like Goldsmith's, in the Deserted Village.

"That bayed the whelping wind." Sending their hollow cry far along the valleys. They come noiselessly; as the robber comes; you are in their power before you know of their presence.

Just so there are temptations which come as the lion comes; they catch men as the hunter catches birds, in an evil hour, when it cometh upon them.

Against such as these there is but one protection—everlasting watchfulness. Keep away from their hunting grounds. "A wise man foreseeth the evil and hideth himself." A man who does not wish to be stung will not thrust his naked hand into a hornet's nest.

7. There are backbiting dogs—a cowardly crew which always attack in the rear. They have been only in taking you at a disadvantage. They would skulk away from the glance of an honest man's eye. They take no risks and offer no advantage to an opponent. They are like night thieves, who are always cowards, and never enter a house except upon the presumption that the inmates are defenselessly asleep.

Such is sin. It assails men where they are weakest, just as vultures come down on men on battle-fields who are wounded and too weak to defend themselves. If there is any opening through the defensive armor of the soul, that is just the point through which Apollyon thrusts his deadly spear. He tempts the avaricious with money and the ambitious with power; the vain with finery and the lustful with indulgence. He digs pits for the blind men and breaks the crutches of the lame.

All this is devilish, I know, but what else can we expect of the devil? You look for treachery from an Indian and cruelty from a Tartar.

Perhaps, it may appear from all this that Paul meant much when he said, "Beware!" It is one of those terrific things which flashed out of his great, indignant heart, as lightning leaps from an overcharged cloud. He was not farther from a jest when he ranged amid the splendors of the third heaven, viewing the cohorts of God and gazing on the Son, than when he wrote this line of hot denunciation. Beware!

Beware! That does not mean that you are to seek a fight with them, but rather the contrary. If you are a wise man you do not pick up a stick or stone and rush to attack every cat you see. You don't do it even if he stands right in your way. A man who tries to pick up every dog that crosses his path is a fool. We don't do that; we turn aside. If he is a very large and surly-looking beast, we turn out early and give him a wide berth; and do it politely.

So a man who rushes at every evil and seeks a fight with all sin is unwise; he has studied his Bible and himself to little purpose. Elijah shunned Abah three and one-half years. That great rough prophet of the Lord waited patiently for courage, faith, and insight of soul; but caution was wanting.

A man, if he is not best to provoke the devil, he will do well and enough to do to defend himself from the evil that assails him. Don't rush into temptation as a sort of strength. Don't dare destruction by exposing yourself to kill sin. Kill a rattlesnake if he attacks you, but don't go among the mountains hunting rattlesnakes for fun. A man who has got into the rapids just above the falls is wise to strike for the shore; seize a rock; cling to a rock; anything to escape.

But there is a good deal more wisdom in keeping as far away from those whirling waters that he cannot fall in. Stopping down to gather flowers close along the edge of them is the folly of maniacs.

Gough tells of a man who used to hold a plug of tobacco in his hand and say: "I've conquered you." This might do for him, but the principle is wrong.

By all this I warn you to beware of the danger of dogs; also against their character and example. Do not allow yourself to become treacherous to the highest interests of man by teaching false doctrine, or living a false life. Do not assail men in treacherous ways. Do not live a selfish life, and fail to make return for what you get.

I have spoken of silent dogs which bite without warning. Such are silent because they are subtle. Do not be like them, but attack even sin and Satan, in a manly, brave and Christian way. But there are other dogs which are silent because they are cowards. When the thief comes they run and hide. Do not imitate them. Every good man is bound to speak and live so that as pious Lat was a constant rebuke to the fifty dreamers of his time, he will warn men of the danger of sin. A man who fails to raise his hand and voice to resist the march of the gigantic sins which stalk like armed men through these years, is a moral imbecile or coward. He who courts unnecessary danger is presumptuous; he who runs from the just and God-appointed war against sin, and seeks safety in the rear of ranks of braver men, is despicable. When God commands utterance silence becomes sin. The truly brave man will not rush unbidden to the cannon's mouth, nor, when commanded to do it, will he skulk away and let another die in his place.

There rises before me a beautiful city. I enter it, walk over his golden pavements, verdant rivers, palaces, where princes live, for all here are kings. No dog is here, no vicious thing, no unclean, no sorcerer, no whoremonger.

Where are they? Without! Forever! That gate of pearl opens often, but not for these. Children come in, fathers, mothers, saints with silver hair—but no unclean.

Therefore, "Blessed are they that do His commandments that they may enter in thro' the gate into the city."

M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir—I have always been opposed to medicines, but I had been an invalid, being with dizziness and fainting fits caused by a deranged stomach and bowels and impure blood for several years. I doctored a great deal, but still they grew worse. I have taken seven bottles of your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic, and have not had one since I began its use. I am happy to say that I feel fully restored by your medicinal medicine, which I recommend on every occasion. If a system is out of order it appears to have the power to restore it to health, and that is what I wanted.

Very truly,
OBED G. CHASE.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conqueror of the times." It is truly the triumph of the new. Whoever has the blues should take it, for it regulates the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility, Restless Sleep and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, and all other ailments.

Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures. It is sold by all druggists, grocers and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

JIM BLAINE, OF MAINE.

"Leading members of the Ohio House of Representatives" (including John C. Coverty) have sent "ringing" telegrams to the Blaine Club of this city, which were read at the meeting of the club on Saturday night. We quote this reference to the mighty Jim: "He is the greatest embodiment of patriotism that lives beneath the folds of our flag. The great mass of the American people prefer him to any other man in the Union." Jim was a lovely cherub of a "patriot" when he sold his influence as Speaker of the House of Representatives to a thieving railroad clique. The whole vile story has been told once and has never been discredited. If chance should make Jim Blaine, of Maine, the Republican nominee for President it will be told again. How do the great mass of the American people like to have it said of them that they prefer such a man "to any other in the Union"? It is not alone in the case of Grant, that the Democrats are having their old arguments and personal allegations verified by the Republicans. Since the Republican camp has been rent by presidential factions, all that the Democrats ever alleged against Blaine, and much more besides, has been charged by his Republican enemies. The Democrats are evidently to have powerful allies this year.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

The following is the latest authentic case of cutting off one's nose to spite his face: It occurred in Connecticut, on the Connecticut Western Railroad. The conductor noticed a man who repeatedly paid his fare on the train, and never seemed to think of having a ticket, so he thought the passenger suffered from the extra fare. Possibly through ignorance the extra fare was not paid. The conductor asked him why he didn't buy tickets. The man said: "Well, I'll tell you, some time ago last summer I got into a little trouble with this company, and they used me meanly, so I just said to myself, 'The Connecticut Western Company won't never get another cent of my money if I live a hundred years, and they won't and that's why I pay my fare to the conductor.' The conductor went into the baggage car to laugh."

The Late John L. Wilson of the B. & O. Railroad.

Under the caption of "21 years on the Rail—Reminiscences of an old Conductor," by Mr. Henry F. Paden, editor of the Clyde (O.) Enterprise, formerly associated with the editor of the Head Light in the publication of that paper, he gives the following personal reminiscence of the late John L. Wilson, of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad:

PERSONAL REMINISCENCE.

"Mr. John L. Wilson died at Baltimore on last Friday evening, aged sixty-two years. The deceased had been for thirty-two years in the employ of the B. & O. R. R. Company for some years, until quite recently, in the important capacity of Master of Road. Flags at the B. & O. depot, this city, were displayed at half mast in token of respect."

—Baltimore (O.) Democrat, March 24th.

A rather singular character was Mr. John L. Wilson, spoken of above. He was one of the victims of the great poisoning affair at the National Hotel in Washington, in 1857, just previous to the inauguration of James Buchanan as President, in which it has ever been believed that the life of the incoming President was intended to be destroyed. From the effects of the poison, aided perhaps by the terrible discovery that he was one of the poisoned ones, the hair and beard of Mr. Wilson turned in a single night from its natural dark color to an absolute perfect white, and continued so the remainder of his lifetime. He never wore a beard afterwards, keeping his face closely shaven; and as it was a remarkably fresh, youthful face, the intense black eyes which shone out from under the white hair gave him an appearance that was very striking and sure to attract attention. The writer's acquaintance with him began in 1869, about the time the Baltimore & Ohio Company took charge of what is now its Lake Erie Division, formerly the Sandusky Mansfield & Newark Railroad. Mr. Wilson had come from Baltimore in company with President Garrett, and other officials of the company, on a trip of inspection over the newly acquired line. They arrived at Sandusky on a Saturday afternoon, and the same evening President Garrett and the others, Mr. Wilson excepted, went off on the steamer Jay Cooke to spend Sunday at Put-In-Bay Island. Mr. Wilson remained in the city, and by appointment met the writer—at that time in charge of the operations of the Division—for the Company's office Sunday morning.

On meeting him, "Now," said he in a jovial manner altogether his own; "those other fellows have gone to the island to look at the scenery. I don't care a d—n about any kind of scenery except railroad scenery, and I won't see everything you've got." Accordingly the forenoon was spent in going about the buildings, shops, warehouses, docks and grounds of the Company—the keen eye of Mr. Wilson discovering every noticeable thing faster than the writer could point them out to him. Though perhaps the most inveterate cigar-smoker we ever met, he was carefully observant of his own regulations which prohibited smoking in shops and warehouses, and promptly put out the light of his "twenty"—a name he had given the cigars he smoked, on account of their great size, strength and cost—before entering any of these places.

Though Mr. W. was a white-haired old man, and the writer a young one, the elder's powers of endurance were the greater, and before the hour for dinner we had to "bush" and beg to go home and rest. In the afternoon—it was warm weather—we again met him; this time he wanted to "see the town." And he did see it, as Bayard Taylor saw Europe in his "Views Afloat," but it came pretty near being a "using up" process for his guide. If there was any part of the city of Sandusky that we didn't look at, it was because we couldn't find the way. The capsizing of a small boat in the bay caused the old man to run like a boy to the water's edge, and as the capsized parties, two in number, were brought ashore with a nearly emptied beer keg whose contents had been the means of their catastrophe, Mr. W. poured questions at them in number like a shower of grape grinding from a Gatling gun.

Finally, as the sun began to sink, Mr. Wilson proposed a return to his private car where he could have his negro man Joe "stir up a pitcher of lemonade." Arriving there, Joe was not long in stirring up the lemonade—about a two gallon wash-pitcher, running over the brim. The old gentleman looked thirstfully at the pitcher as Joe sat it down, and then in a tired voice said to the writer: "P—, wouldn't you just as soon have a glass of wine? There isn't any more lemonade than I want myself, and Joe has some elegant champagne on the ice—some that was brought over in one of our own steamers."

Of course the old gentleman got the lemonade, and drank it too, draining the pitcher. We almost looked for him to swell up and burst, but he did neither. Next day, relating the affair to Mr. W. C. Quincy, General Manager of the company's lines in the West, he assured us this was nothing unusual; that Mr. Wilson was habitual in drinking lemonade in as large or even larger quantities—adding, if we mistake not, that this practice was adopted after the poisoning affair at Washington, and kept up as a sort of perpetual antidote ever afterwards.

In the evening Mr. W. was again bright and lively as at dawn; spending the time, seated on the edge of a dock overlooking the Bay and watching for the coming of a steamer with his friends from the Island, in giving an account of the Company's works of all kinds at headquarters in Baltimore, and puffing away at one after another of his five twenty-horse-power cigars. The man must have had a wonderful constitution, to have gone through a poisoning from which a number of others died, and inhaled so much concentrated tobacco smoke for so many years afterwards. He was a genial gentleman, but full of fire and profanity when aroused. Our own acquaintance with him never grew intimate, for not long afterward he gave up his duties in part, and did not make any more trips West of the Ohio. But he had the respect and regard of those who had known him longest and best. His familiar figure, bright face, shining eyes and crown of white hair, his inevitable black cigar and sometimes rough language, cannot help being long remembered as a part of the railroad circle of which he so long formed so prominent a character. But he could take no cigars with him.

"This," said the wild-eyed stranger, as the train rushed past two ancient trees and the last sad remains of a once beautiful rail fence, "this is the spot, where, four weeks ago, we stayed three days and three nights snowbound, unable to leave the train."

"Gracious," said the little man in the next seat, "pray how did you live all that time?"

"Oh, we managed to get along all right, all except a couple of babies who were being weaned; they suffered for the want of milk."

"Dear me," said the little man in a sympathetic voice, "and of course no milk was to be had?"

"No, though they might have been spared but for the brutal, unnatural conduct of the engineer, some of the boys offered to milk the cowcatcher, but he wouldn't let 'em."

Then the wild-eyed stranger pretended to pick a cinder from his eye.

GIVE us a Western Democrat for President on a platform that will meet the Democratic national sentiment, and there will be such a campaign fought and such a victory won in 1880, as has never been paralleled in history.

National Democratic Convention.

The executive committee of the national democratic committee launch the following call:

The national democratic committee, having met in the city of Washington, February 23d, has appointed Tuesday, the 21st of June next, at noon, as the date, and chosen Cincinnati as the place of holding the national democratic convention.

Each state is entitled to representation, therein equal to a double number of its senators and representatives in the congress of the United States. All democratic, conservative and other citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political associations or differences, who can unite with us in the effort for a pure, economical government, are cordially invited to join in sending delegates to the convention. At the last national democratic convention, held in the city of St. Louis in 1876, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the state be requested to instruct their delegates to the national democratic convention to be held in 1880, whether it be desirable to continue the two-thirds rule longer in force in the national convention, and that the national committee insert such request in the call for the next convention.

News Brevities.

—Col. James Wood, late Superintendent of the Cincinnati police force, died on the 20th.

A New Orleans boy who was exercising in a gymnasium, was accidentally strangled to death by getting his head in a swinging ring.

A physician at Atletia, Ohio, named Parker administered strychnine in place of santonine to a little two-year-old child, and it was seized with convulsions and died within an hour.

A terrific Western tornado passed over Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri and Arkansas, on Sunday night, 18th inst., causing great destruction of life and property. The storm carried desolation and death in its track, tearing down houses and outbuildings, and destroying every bit of vegetation in its way. Wagons were carried for miles and stock killed as though driven to the slaughter pen. In some instances almost entire villages were demolished. The village of Shopton in Rock county, Wis., and the towns of Findlay and Marshall, Mo., sustained heavy damages and the loss of life is fearful to contemplate. Seventy bodies have been recovered. The loss of property will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

—Late reports from the Northwestern wheat region are not very favorable to a large crop this season. Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska, all agree to this—that less seed was sown this spring than last and that the farmers calculate on having but little to spare for exportation. Many of these statements must be taken with several grains of allowance, but it is doubtless true that the low prices at which the farmer has had to sell, despite high prices paid by consumers, have induced him to turn his attention to other crops.

—The reports of the commercial agencies just published show that there is a steady increase in the mercantile prosperity of the country. Against 3,355 failures throughout the United States during the first three months of 1878, and 2,541 in 1879, there were during the same quarter just passed only 1,432 failures. The amount of liabilities represented by these failures at the beginning of 1880 was only about $13,000,000, against $82,000,000 in 1878 and $43,000,000 last year, during the corresponding period.

—The garden makers are "at it."
—John Trimble, of Dayton, Ohio, went fishing on Sunday and of course was drowned.—New Goods at Lackey's this week.
—There was a slight scrimmage between a couple of politicians in front of Republican headquarters last week. No arm done.

—If you want a nobby Hat go to Lackey's. He has just received a good supply of the latest styles.

—Hank Gettel sold a trifle less than a car load of goods during twenty-four hours immediately following pay-day.

—Ladies' Misses' and Children's Hosiery, in endless variety at Lackey's.

—The last piece of furniture belonging to Mr. Linkenhelt's defunct bar was started for Corona last Wednesday, where it will adorn the new saloon in Billadams' building.

—Lackey is closing out his stock of Groceries. If you want bargains in that line call and see him.

Baltimore, Ohio &amp; Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune, April 9th.]

The annual meeting of the stockholders of this Baltimore, Ohio &amp; Chicago, (Chicago branch of Baltimore &amp; Ohio) was held at the Palmer House yesterday. Mr. Daniel A. Jones was elected Chairman and Mr. J. H. Hope Sutor acted as Secretary. A large majority of the stock was represented, mostly by proxy. The election of Directors for the ensuing year resulted as follows: John King, Jr., William Keyser, C. H. Hudson, J. K. Cowan, Col. Geo. B. Dennis, James Walsh, John Tyrrell, Nelson Ludington, and D. A. Jones. The Secretary read a report showing that the condition of the Road has been well maintained and considerable improvements made. Two new elevators were erected on the line, one at Bremen, Ind., and one at Ellettsville, Ohio. There have also been laid during the year 505 tons of new steel rails between this city and Chicago Junction. The report of earnings and expenses were already published in the Baltimore &amp; Ohio report.

Vice-President, Keyser, of the B. &amp; O., made the statement that the increased terminal facilities at Baltimore and the construction of a new elevator would have the effect of largely increasing the foreign business of the B. &amp; O. Forty-nine million bushels of grain were exported from Baltimore last year. This year it expected to increase the amount of foreign business to 55,000,000.

After adjournment the Directors met, organized and elected the following officers: John King, Jr., President; J. H. Sutor, Secretary and Treasurer; and J. L. Randolph, Chief Engineer.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

(From the Garrett Edition.)

—Conductors, brakemen and baggagemen, on the Baltimore Road, now wear uniforms.

—N. B. Rowe has sold out his interest in the meat market and is devoting his attention to the stock business.

—Geo. Biehler a former resident has returned to Garrett and opened a saloon at his old stand on Randolph street.

—Mr. A. H. Phillips is "fixing up" for the summer business by whitewashing and kalsomining his grocery room on Randolph street.

—340 Thomas is said to be so expert a pistol shot that he can hit a flea's eye two out of three at ten paces. D—'f we b'lieve it.

—Corporation election for choice of town officers for the ensuing year will be held next month, and then we shall see what we shall see.

—Farmers and Stock Dealers, look to your interest and use Uncle Sam's Condition Forwards, for sale at the Blue Front Drug Store.

—Joe Loveland's Head Light is now issued from Garrett in an elegant and tasty form. [Hendallville News.]

Thanks. But the Head Light is issued from both Corinna and Garrett.

—At the Blue Front Drug Store you can find all kinds of Sewing Machine Needles for any machine that is in use.

—The Head Light will be issued semi-monthly hereafter. It has been enlarged and otherwise improved. We wish it success. [Herald.]

—Wall Paper in a variety of patterns, and nobby styles, at the Blue Front Drug Store.

—At Corinna, DeKalb county, Indiana, a party of twenty went to the house of Tunis Miller, whose daughter has been recently married, to give the married couple a belling. James Miller, brother of the bride, went out to induce the men to go away, and being assisted by John Williams, Miller shot him dead. Miller was put in jail.

We clip the above from the Cleveland Plain Dealer of the 21st. It will be news to this community, as this is the first information we have had of the occurrence of such a he-of a racket in Corinna town.

Notice.

Persons having had business transactions with the undersigned, while carrying on the saloon business in Auburn, will take notice that I have left all accounts in the hands of J. E. Douglass for settlement. Those having bills against me and also those who are indebted to the firm are hereby instructed to all upon Mr. Douglass for settlement.

—Now," said the examining physician to the unhappy pilot, "you must pick out all the reds you can." The pilot commenced by grasping the learned professor's nose, which was worsted. "That will do," said the professor; "your certificate is ready."

—Another man has been found who says a man told him that he saw a man who was traveling on the cars, when a man told him that a prominent Democrat had informed him that Mr. Tilden would certainly withdraw because he was sick.

—While digging a grave for the remains of the late Bishop, Pellico, in San Fernando, Texas, Cathedral, the workmen exhumed, five skeletons. This part of the Cathedral is 150 years old, and it is supposed the bodies were buried there during the Mexican war. The earth about the place was found full of bones.

—Coroner O. L. Mann and George E. Elton, one of the leading Chicago undertakers, had a disgraceful altercation over a corpse, during which the body was roughly torn out of the coffin, thrown into a box, and carried away by some of the Coroner's assistants, while that official had Elton arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

—There is a largely increased decrease of cotton under cultivation this year. The crop for the coming season is estimated at five millions of bales, of about four hundred and fifty pounds each, or 2,250,000,000 pounds. The net profit per pound is about fifty per cent, and the total value of the crop is estimated at not less than $250,000,000.

—That the great business revival of last year has not abated its force, or even attained its limit may be inferred from the railroad earnings of the past month, which, on the thirty-five principal roads of the country, are over one third greater than they were in March, 1879. The exact figures are—$13,880,000 for the latter and $18,560,000 for the former.

Church, Detroit, on a recent Sunday, and which we re-publish from the Free Press of that city. The subject is well chosen and the discourse of more than ordinary interest, and it will pay perusal.

—Reyher of Garrett has the best selected stock of Dry Goods and Boots and Shoes in Garrett.

—Not long ago an old and faithful conductor, one of the most popular men on the road, was discharged by the Lake Shore company for omitting to comply in a single instance with one of the established rules, which was to call out each station as the train approached. There was a "spotter" in the car which explains the matter. The conductor was promptly discharged and when inquiring whether he should call at the office occasionally, he was told that it would be of no use as he could not have his position again. A valued exchange in speaking of the pusillanimous conduct of the company in discharging a faithful employee on the report of a sneaking spy, and for so slight an offense, adds that nothing more could be expected of a road that refuses to bury its dead. Just so.

—Remember Reyher of Garrett is the man that knocks the bottom out of goods. Go and see him.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1880.

The horrors of the recent Western tornado increases as the extent of the calamity is developed by further investigation. The town of Marshallfield, Mo., containing 2,500 inhabitants, was destroyed with the exception of the Court House and Jail, and five or six other buildings.

The Union Greenbackers of the county assembled in Convention at Waterloo on Saturday last. A much larger number were present than was expected, considering the inclement weather. The meeting seemed to manifest much enthusiasm and hope. A full delegation to the State Convention at Indianapolis on the 29th inst., was appointed as follows: J. R. Duncan, A. B. Darby, Jason Beard, E. Vian, Henry Milliman, I. Veely, J. B. Holly, J. W. Jackman, A. D. Goetschius, F. K. Shoemaker, Miles Chapman.

On last Tuesday the two contending elements of the New York Democracy assembled in convention at Syracuse and appointed delegates to the Cincinnati convention. Mr. Tilden succeeded in manipulating the machinery so as to secure the choice of the convention as the Cincinnati nominee. There was an effort made by the Kelly men to harmonize the factions but the effort failed. The Kellyites held their convention immediately after the adjournment of the Tilden convention, appointed delegates and passed resolutions condemnatory of Tilden, and protested against his nomination. So there will be two sets of delegates from New York at Cincinnati, and a red-hot time may be anticipated.

The latest sensation on the Pacific slope is the murder of Charles De Young, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, by the son of the notorious Rav. Kalloch, Mayor of that city, which took place last Friday. It will be remembered that De Young shot Kalloch last August for defaming the character of his mother, but who subsequently recovered, and the trial of De Young was still pending. At that time Kalloch was a candidate for Mayor on what is known as the Sand-Lots ticket, composed of the worst elements of the city, such as the hoodlums and denizens of the slums and gutters. Kalloch was elected, recovered from his wound, and has been administering the office since in the interest of the mob that elected him. Kalloch is a representative of the vilest class, which seems to be in the supremacy there at present. The Chronicle has been unremitting in its warfare upon Kalloch and was making an effort to impeach him. In this respect De Young was sustained by the better class of citizens. It seems that the old grudge between the Kallochs and De Youngs was kept fermenting, the latter being the aggressor, and a conspiracy to assassinate the plucky editor was consummated; De Young was attacked and shot down while at his post in the Chronicle counting-room. His murderer is under arrest. It is intimated that the brothers of De Young will be satisfied with nothing less than the blood of the Kallochs. The end is not yet.

CORUNNA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1880.

Stat.) Here and Elsewhere.

John Mosler of Garrett opened the new season in this place last week.

F. Borat is having an extraordinary sale of season for his celebrated patent improved bed bottom.

Charley Mercer gave a dancing party in the new Mercer building last Thursday evening.

Died, in this place on Saturday morning, 17th inst., Henry, son of Wm. and L. Hart, aged three years and six months.

The many friends of the Rev. James Johnson will welcome his return to Corunna, as pastor of the M. E. Church for the ensuing year.

Last Friday morning quite a heavy storm passed over this place, and rain fell like a deluge, accompanied by hail and terrific lightning.

The Odd Fellows of Indiana held the anniversary celebration of the Order of Odd Fellowship in this State at Fort Wayne yesterday.

When the Auburn Republican shall have exhausted its supply of stink-pots which it persists in flinging at the Hyan Lion, (keeping back an exchange containing the putrid essence,) perhaps the sanitary condition of that part of Auburn town where the office is situated will be improved. Nothing like courtesy or gentlemanly deportment toward a political opponent and brother craftsman could hardly be expected from the old blind-eyed heathen, who sits astride of the tripod of that poor old one-horse newspaper concern, and draws the weekly stipend out of the radical corruption fund much less from the contemptible double-faced white-livered sneaking cur who pretends to find the she bang. As remarked by a contemporary on the subject of unprincipled journalism: it is easy to understand that an unprincipled man who runs a paper without capital or brains would naturally turn scavenger; and here the Weimers have found their natural level.

DIED, in Corunna, on Tuesday morning April 27th, 1880, at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. V. McMillen, Mrs. LILLIE B. HEIST. Funeral on Wednesday from the family residence.

Mrs. Heist's death was caused by what is known in medical parlance as pyæmia, or salivation from the effects of calomel, and her illness was of short duration her sufferings were intense to the end. She was a devoted member of the Roman Catholic Church, and Father Demig, of Avilly, was summoned to her bedside and administered the Holy Communion. She leaves three small children and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Libbie was a lady of more than ordinary intelligence, bright and quick at repartee, with a fund of wit, and of a very affectionate disposition, always ready with a cheerful heart and willing hand to do a kind office. Another link is broken in the golden chain that binds the family circle, and a loved one has crossed that dark and unknown sea that rolls all around the world. Thus "one by one the roses fall."

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

COEDUNA, INDIANA, APRIL 30, 1880.

Mr. W. D. Massey, a traveling salesman, who was one of the passengers on the east-bound train on Sunday night, 19th, and stopped at Marshfield, endeavored to depict the scenes he witnessed there to a reporter of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat on Tuesday. He said that some time before the train reached Marshfield the unusual brilliancy in the sky attracted notice. Getting nearer to the doomed town it was seen that the buildings were on fire and the destruction of the town was threatened. Mr. Massey got off the train at the station, and accompanied the two men who appeared at the station, blood-stained and lacerated, to inform the people on the train what had happened; and to implore assistance. He could not give any idea, he lacked words to describe the terrors of the scenes he had witnessed, and the awful suspense of the "big, dark night." Finding that telegraphic communication was cut off, a man was sent on horseback to Strafford to telegraph to Springfield for aid, which came at five o'clock in the morning. Mr. Massey related tales of suffering which have been spoken of in the dispatches already received. In recovering the body of the wife of Judge Ryan from the ruins of their dwelling, Mr. Massey said that two dogs were found completely covered in the debris, alive, and put three feet distant from the mangled corpse of the lady. Seven bodies of white and colored people were found close together near Barnes' mill. Mr. Leeds, a lawyer, and his family sought refuge in the jail building occupied by John Jackson and family. They went into a room adjoining that in which the jailer and his family were assembled, and while the latter escaped with only a few bruises, the Leeds family were all killed. A solitary prisoner was in the lock-up. He was found in utter ignorance of the nature of the disaster. He was hurt, his prison being in flames, and projected as it burned, injured among the surrounding devastation. He pleaded to be released, and without much hesitation, his cell door was battered down, and he was set free.

News Brevities.

The new ocean cable is almost completed.

A wealthy Indiana farmer, named David Swygard, has starved himself to death under the hallucination that if he ate, his family would starve to death.

The lame, blind, and sick of Scott county, Virginia, are being healed by the supposed miraculous powers of a deeply religious man named Richard Miller. He cures by the laying on of hands, modestly gives God the credit for it, and refuses compensation.

Inquiry into the cause of the Tay bridge disaster has been reopened to hear scientific testimony. Proofs are said to have been discovered showing that the train went off the bridge before the bridge fell.

Some troubles up in Binghamton built their nest last year in a tree near a linemith's shop, and when the March winds blew the limb down the other day, that hanging nest was found wired on to it with pieces of wire and tin cuttings swept out of the shop, better than any man could have done it.

The collapse of the iron and other booms, and the threatened collapse of the paper boom, is a sign that cliques that combine to "squeeze" people cannot always succeed. If by no means signifies that the revival of business activity and prosperity has no bottom—that it is founded on a rock is evident from the large increase in business and earnings reported by the great railroad arteries of the country. Everybody is all right except the speculators.

A serious shooting affray occurred at a north side saloon in Clyde, Ohio, Saturday evening, 17th inst., between Geo. Ramsey, a lad aged nineteen years and of rather fast habits, and Geo. H. Clark, a colored laborer. Young Ramsey and the darkey became involved in a drunken quarrel in the course of which the former drew a revolver and shot the latter through the left lung. At last accounts the darkey was in a critical condition and the wound supposed to be mortal. Geo. Ramsey is a son of Frank Ramsey, a prominent stock dealer of that place, and known to many farmers in DeKalb county. The saloon where the fracas took place has become notorious for scenes of violence; it was there that Constable Tammann was shot by Eli Cunn three years ago, and in which Cunn himself was shot to death by Wm. Hays only two years since. The latter tragedy, occurring at the time the writer was a resident of the town. The local paper has very appropriately named the day the Shooting Gallery Saloon. Young Ramsey escaped by a rear door after the shooting, and up to the 22d had not been captured, though officers were in pursuit.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

TUESDAY.....JUNE 15, 1880.

The Greenbackers at Chicago nominated Weaver for President. He is a native of Ohio, born at Dayton, June 12, 1833.

BEFORE another issue of this paper, the Democratic nominations at Cincinnati will have been made. The Democracy have everything to gain and nothing to lose in the coming struggle, provided they act wisely. And they will. The battle is about to open. Column forward!

HON. S. S. Cox, of New York says: "Garfield is the most vulnerable man that could have been selected from the whole country and Arthur the weakest that could have been taken from New York. By common consent the ticket is defeated in advance. We will nominate a ticket at Cincinnati that will knock the bottom out of them."

We to-day place at the mast-head of the HEAD LIGHT the nominees of the Democratic State Convention at Indianapolis, for Governor Franklin Landers, and for Lieut.-Governor Colonel Isaac Gray. The convention was attended with the greatest harmony and unbounded enthusiasm. The ticket is regarded a strong one, even the opposition concede the fact. Democrats, let your rallying cry be, Landers Gray and victory.

The New York Times, a stalwart Republican organ, is disgusted with the Chicago platform, and remarks that the campaign will have to be fought without much reference to it. It says of the document itself, that, "it contains some important truths feebly stated and badly mixed up with common-places which will carry no conviction and scarcely attract attention, and which must lessen the force of that which is really true."

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—We understand that 5,000 persons, including citizens and ex-soldiers, were present at the re-union at Waterloo on last Thursday. It was a gala day for the boys in blue.

—At Kendallville last week we met Mr. H. Munk a former merchant of Fremont, O. who is now traveling salesman for Edward Melchers, 108 Monroe Street, Toledo, O. We found Munk the same jolly chap of yore.

—A. B. Park hardware merchant, Kendallville, has already disposed of two car loads of the Champion reapers and mowers this season, and ordered another car load last week.

—A postal card just received from young Leon Masters calls our attention to an error in the letter from Charleston, Ark., published in last issue. In giving the height of Potato Hill it should have read 1000 feet instead of 100. The letter was written by young Masters. We hope to hear from him again.

• The Hat and Cap department of Mr. Yeabers, Merchant tailor, Auburn, is deserving of more than a passing notice, but lack of space admonishes us to be brief, as we have only room to say that his is the leading hat establishment in the county for latest styles in head-gear, the neatest, handsomest and most durable. Don't buy a hat until you call on Yeabers, and our word for it you will be the happier after the purchase. Try him.

—Many of our citizens attended the annual convention of the DeKalb County Sunday School at Waterloo on last Tuesday and Wednesday. There was a large attendance from all parts of the county and the meeting is reported to have been of more than ordinary interest and profit to the Sabbath school course.

• Joseph Abright the Auburn Jeweler and Silversmith, will make a lead on Silverware, and in the inspection of his elegant wares in this department of his trade. Remember that Mr. Abright's is the leading Jeweler store in the county, where the very best goods are kept on sale.

—The Republicans have engaged all of the bands in the county, including the crack band of Corona, to play at their convention. This is all very well as far it goes, but our Republican brethren should remember that band music and chin music won't elect their ticket.

—Joe Hartman a son of Leonard Hartman, residing 2½ miles south-west of Corona, tried to make an orphan of himself about two weeks ago. He got into a quarrel with his father while under the influence of liquor, and banged away at the old man with a revolver. He fired three shots, none of which took effect. Joseph was taken to Auburn, where he had a preliminary examination and was bound over to court on a charge of shooting with murderous intent.

WEDNESDAY.....JUNE 15, 1880.

"Now, by St. Paul the work goes bravely on!" The county Democratic convention at Auburn on the 5th performed a grand day's work. It was a glorious day for the Democracy of old DeKalb. A full report of the proceedings may be seen on pages 13 and 14. As the candidates are all well and favorably known to the voters of this county they will enlist the hearty support of every Democrat. In fine the ticket is bound to win. The following extract which we copy from the last Auburn Republican, in an article on the situation, is rather significant language at the present time, and sounds like a dismal wail from the lookout of the Republican ship nearing the breakers on a dangerous coast. In speaking of the ticket it says:

"They are representative men of their party, say what you will, and the republicans may as well make up their minds now as in the future, that they must organize fully and work untiringly until the close of the polls in November, if they succeed."

The Radicals will assemble in convention at Auburn on Saturday to nominate a county ticket, to be beaten at the polls next fall. Old Syphillic Weamer will be there of course to pilot the hulk. It is rumored that there are serious dissensions in the happy family and that all is not serene with the dark-lantern brethren. In that case the fur will fly like unto a thomas-cat convention. Watch and pray.

CHARLEY Myers of the Kendallville Standard is not a bad fellow socially—in fact we find him like him—but in matters relating to politics he is an unmitigated scoundrel and unscrupulous liar. But the same may be said of two-thirds of the Radical fraternity in the land. Charley repeats the political slander concerning the editor of this paper, and in the same connection attempts to revive an old joke of seventeen years standing, viz an old joke of seventeen years standing, expressly we presume for the benefit of old Syphillic Weamer. Too thin, Charley.

—On last Sabbath Rev. Snyder in the course of the morning service at the U. B. church, took occasion to lecture that class of christian people who seem to possess more pride than religion, by their display of dress and finery at church and sabbath schools. The reverend gentleman's remarks were well chosen and to the point, affording a moral lesson to those who devote more attention to the idol of fashion and mould of form than to real christian work.

—Once in awhile a customer of ours wanders off, tries his luck in some other store, and then comes back ragged and repentant. Such is the fact with Engel & Co., clothiers, Kendallville.

—With blood in his eye and hay on his horns, Harry, whose Sir name is Weamer, is again on the track of the Head Light man. We supposed we had taken his scalp: and we think we have got it, therefore it will not pay to bandy words with a dead man. That pretty story about canceling the debt due us, supper, lodging and breakfast, and back-fare to Fort Wayne—total $2.00, still remains unpaid, his statement to the contrary notwithstanding and is simply imagination, evidently inspired by copious imbibitions of gin and sugar, which Harry takes for the Butler rheumatism, and under its inspiring influence he becomes very loquacious and extravagant in his statements. And now, dear beloved old Harry, VIVE VAIN!

Late News Brevities.

—A terrible steamboat accident occurred on Long Island Sound on the night of the 10th. Two steamers of the Stonington line, the Narragansett and the Stonington, collided in a dense fog the latter striking the former amidships on the starboard side, and she immediately took fire from the engine room and burned and sank in deep water. There were over 200 passengers aboard, who were struggling between the water, and the scene of these struggling deaths is described by survivors as a truly lurid description. It is supposed that at least 100 perished.

—A heavy forest fire is raging on the outskirts of Hopkinton, Massachusetts, and a number of buildings are in danger.

—A terrific wind storm struck Island Point, Vermont, at 6:30 o'clock Monday night, 7th, blowing down the steeple house and a large covered bridge across the railroad.

—Over 1,300 dogs were on exhibition Tuesday at the opening in Madison Square Garden of the Westminster Kennel Club show. Some of the dogs are very valuable.

Ninety years ago $2,140 was required for the expenses of the Postoffice Department; now the sum of $3,700,000 is asked for. The country has been growing.

—Our new marshal has constructed a big scraper that levels the roads nicely. Use it well, Sergeant.

—Wm. Lee a freight conductor, had one finger of his right hand taken off while coupling cars at Walkerton on the 9th.

—It kept fourteen boys and a mule busy to deliver dispatches from the Chicago convention to Dicknell's.

—Judge Carpenter of Warsaw will remove to Garrett next week. He will occupy J. J. Freeland's new house which has been finished up for him.

Farmers are complaining of the wet weather as likely to injure the crops, but report a favorable prospect for an abundance of fruit.

—The band has secured the services of a teacher who is leader of a military band in the regular army. He is stationed at Colorado.

—Dicknell got considerably excited over the news from Chicago during the convention, but he is again able to attend to business as usual.

—W. J. Frederick, J. W. Wagner and others, went to Indianapolis to attend the democratic state convention. Mrs. Frederick accompanied W. J. and will remain several weeks visiting Mr. F.'s sister.

—A young man residing a mile and a half from Hicksville attempted to board train No. 11 at Mark Center Tuesday night 8th, and by some means missed his hold and fell under the train. One leg was injured so badly that amputation between the ankle and knee was necessary. We did not learn his name.

—On Monday evening, May 31st, a terrible accident occurred in front of Bicknell's Drug store. It was just after six o'clock, and as the men were on their way home from work several of them stopped under the awning which was down, to escape a shower which came up, and to chat a moment. While thus engaged a bolt of lightning descended in their midst after striking and shattering the corner of the house considerably. Tony Palmer was instantly killed and several others quite severely injured, among whom were John Riley who has charge of the wrecking train, badly burned on the left side, the skin being torn off the left forearm and left thigh in several places. Wm. Woodside engineer, burned on right side of body and limbs. L. W. Moss burned on right shoulder and left leg. George Redecker severely stunned. These were all severely shocked and were confined to the house for several days. B. D. Thomas and his son Herschel were both knocked down but were soon about again, although they felt the effects for some time. The theory of some as to Palmer's being killed is that the electric fluid followed the corner of the building down to the rod which supports the awning around to where he stood holding to it, with his left hand and through his body to the ground. Others believe that the cause was direct and that Palmer happened to be in the proper position to receive the full force of the shock. His neck and breast were burned so that the skin came off as if scalded, the shirt bosom and the lining of the left leg of his pants being entirely burned up. In the soles of his boots as also in Woodside's were small holes, as if large shot had passed through from the inside. Altogether it was a most shocking affair and one which our citizens will not soon forget. Palmer was a shoemaker and leaves a wife and one child.

—On the 23d ult. a new time-card went into effect on the B. & O. Railroad. A fast train has been added, nicely equipped with Pullman Palace and Sleeping cars, and the time made by the fast train between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington and Chicago, is ahead of all rival lines. The corrected time-table will be found on page 15 of to-day's HEAD LIGHT and the traveling public will govern themselves accordingly.

PUBLIC OPINION.

To punish James A. Garfield, one of the members of that Electoral Commission that committed the larceny of the people's sovereignty, is the first duty of the Democracy of the Union.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

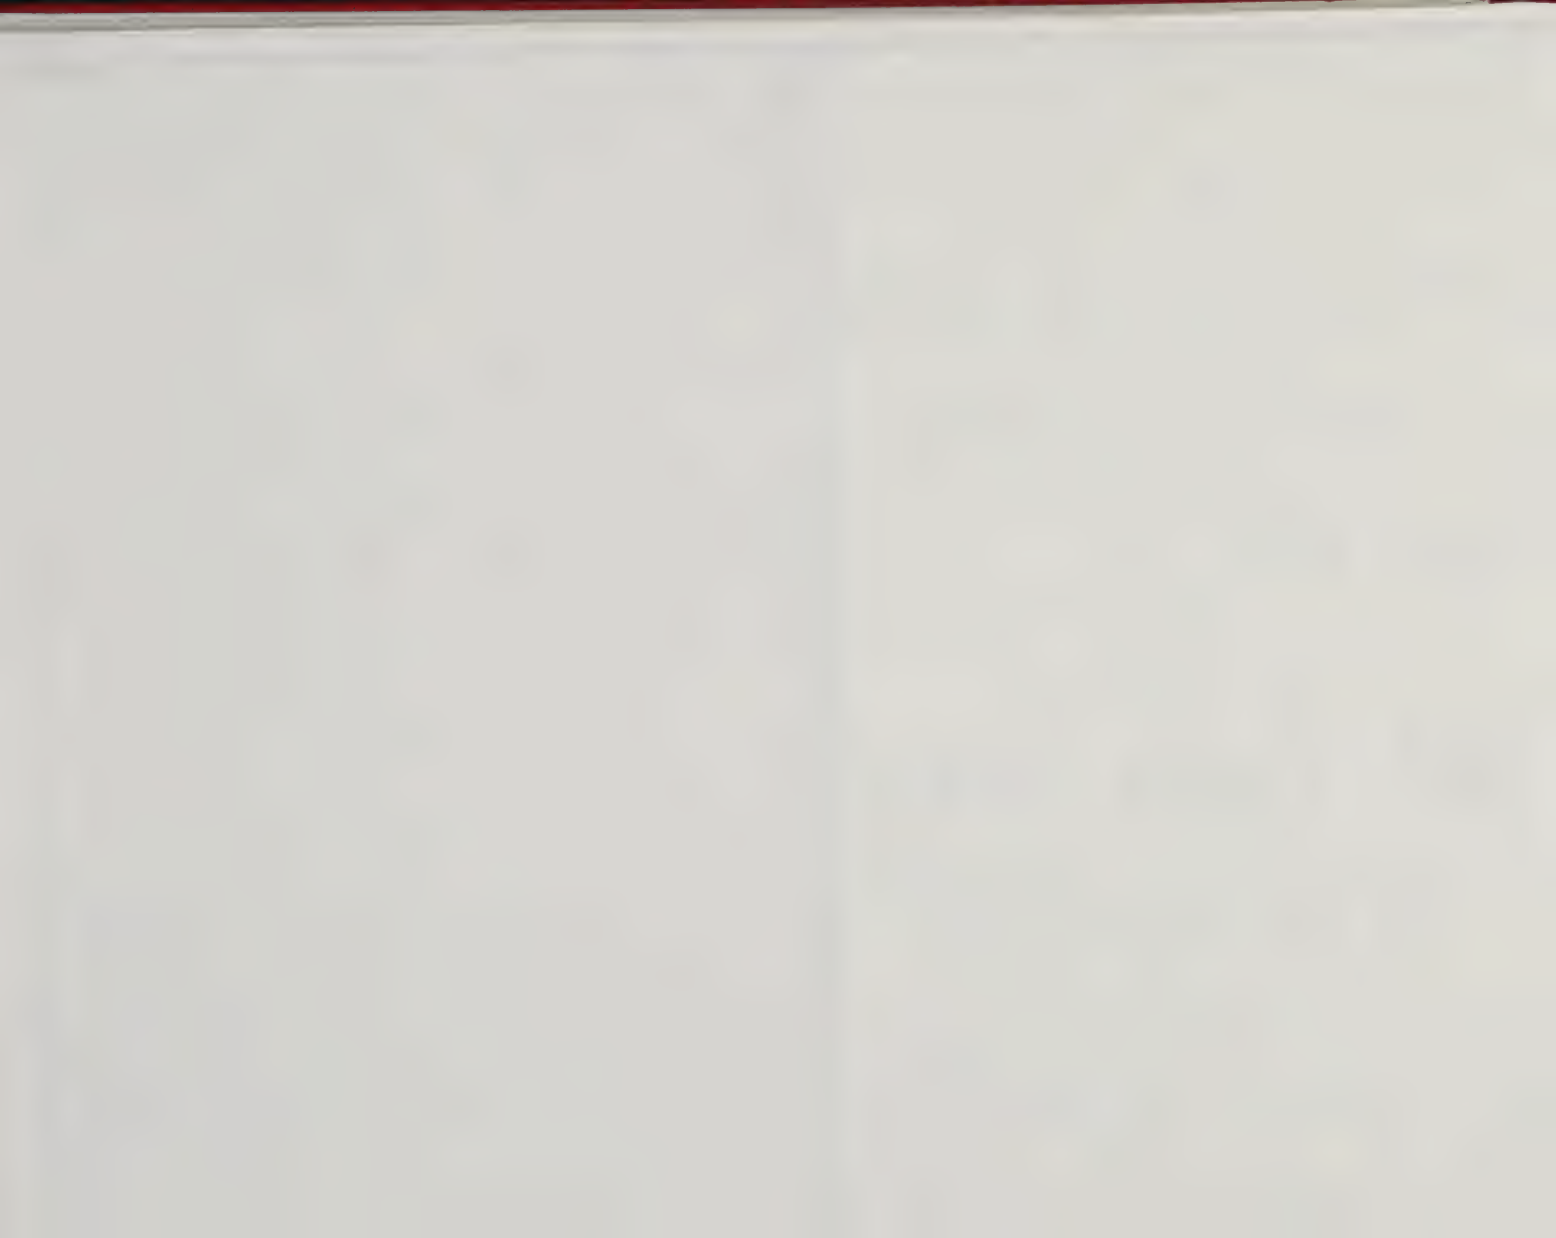

"With a deep sense of my obligations under the Constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you in order that the office may be honestly administered."—R. B. HAYES to Collector Arthur, January 31, 1879.

The New York Herald (Independent) says the Republicans must prove Garfield to be above the reproach put upon him or they are lost. "The people," says the Herald, "have not closed the doors of the White House firmly against imperialism only to open them on oiled hinges to corruption."

The Republican party is on the defensive the first week of the campaign. The Ohio ring, with Charley Foster at the head, has undertaken to explain Garfield's conviction with Oakes Ames, DeGoyer and the salary grab business. The defense boiled down is that G. is more of a fool than knave.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

GENERAL Garfield and the Hon. Henry B. Payne, of Cleveland, Ohio, are strong personal friends. Both served on the Electoral Commission. Possibly they will be rival candidates for the presidency.—N. Y. Times.

Possibly. But Mr. Payne voted with the "seven" to sustain the people's choice, while Mr. Garfield voted with the "eight" to defeat that choice and to sustain fraudulent returns. The difference is wide. Mr. Paine voted to uncover the facts behind the returns in Louisiana and Oregon; Mr. Garfield voted to uncover the facts in Oregon but to cover them up in Louisiana. Mr. Paine voted on the side of the people's choice, Mr. Garfield voted to crush that popular vote. Mr. Paine stood by the people. The people will stand by Mr. Paine.—Hartford (Conn.) Times.

GERT, OR THE WARNING IN THE TUNNEL.

The names and localities herein mentioned, are, of course fictitious, strict truthfulness being avoided for reasons that will doubtless be evident at the conclusion of the story. The firm of which I was the Western agent was one of the largest and wealthiest in the Eastern metropolis, and had recently been awarded a government contract to construct a road and canal in one of the most desolate and least civilized of the Western territories. In order to pay the workmen, it was necessary to dispatch an agent to Wildbush at the end of each month who could be relied upon for courage, watchfulness and sobriety, for in this out-of-the-way region not even a wild-cat bank had as yet been established; and the men preferred gold or silver to bank notes, the latter being looked upon with some degree of suspicion, particularly if new and crisp. I may mention here, as a fact widely known, perhaps, that in the far West, any amount of the 'queer' could be 'shoved,' provided only that it was sufficiently soiled, greased, tattered and shabby—a fact the basis of which will at once suggest itself.

The total amount of the laborer's wages, exactly three thousand seven hundred fifty-one dollars in packages of quarters and eagles and dollars, I carried in a small leather traveling-bag heavily bound with tempered steel bands and securely locked, and you may rest assured that this same bag was to me an object of considerable trouble and apprehension. However, my arrangements for its safety were admirable, it being fastened to my forearm and wrist in such a manner that, even had it been desirable, I could not have deserted my trust for an instant without first unbuckling the four stout straps coiled round my arm and wrist. As a further quietus to base cupidity, I had, before leaving the office, painted in the brown cover, in large white letters, the following descriptive legend: "Simple Spring Locks, A. I.

Y."—an artful idea of which I received a favorable smile from the resident Western partner. Pardon, observant reader, the egotism manifested in the above lines. It is really necessary; and decidedly agreeable to the writer.

"All aboard!" and the impatient engine snorted and puffed and wheezed, and once in awhile suggested hurry by moving forward a few inches, causing a prolonged echo-rattle along the line of the attendant cars, and inspiring nervous passengers with the dreadful idea that they were fated to be left behind.

Securing my ticket, I walked hastily toward the cars, sniffing with a born traveler's delight the sulphurous smoky atmosphere, and was about to enter, when the engine started, and I was almost thrown off my feet, while at the same moment a piercing cry behind me made me turn round on my heel with unusual precipitancy. A sickening sensation of fear and horror made my flesh creep and my sight momentarily indistinct, as I looked down and beheld a white and terror-stricken bit pretty face turned up to mine, while the scared, distended eyes were eloquent with an imploring, pitiful expression that was inexpressibly touching, that reminded me of a picture I had seen in London, of Andromede shrinking back from her foul enemy. The sudden start of the engine had whirled the girl off her feet, and she fell, and now lay half prostrate in the narrow passage between the platform and the cars, and being pushed slowly along as the rumbling wheels turned round. It was the slow pace of the cars that saved her; for had the ponderous wheels moved with but a very little more velocity, they would have ground out her young life with one turn of their remorseless edges. Throwing myself flat on the platform of the car, I reached down, and with one hand—the other was encumbered with my bag—dragged the girl from her peril fraught position and placed her on the step beside me. For a moment

"Certainly—Frank Carter. May I hope you will return the favor?"

me, and said:

"No, thank you. It wouldn't make much difference to me what you might think of me if I were to accept it but I won't."

Not knowing what to reply to this last outburst, I grew ostensibly very much interested in admiring the swift-ly passing scenery, and calculating how many minutes would elapse before we entered the great tunnel near Sandville. Then my curiosity began to overpower my politeness and reticence, and I was making ready to question Gert in regard to her certainly uncalled for blushes and mysterious smiles, when my purpose was nipped in the bud by the startling change that had come over her features—face pale and colorless as an opium-eater's, eyes fixed, hard and stern, lips tightly compressed, nostrils quivering, and under the light shawl I saw that her hand was pressed against her bosom. Crash!

By Gen. J. B. HOOD,
Lieutenant-General Confederate States Armies Published for

The Hood Orphan Memorial Fund,

GENERAL G. T. BEAUREGARD,
New Orleans, 1880.

The entire proceeds arising from the sale of this work are devoted to The Hood Orphan Memorial Fund, which is invested in United States Registered Bonds, for the nurture, care, support and education of the ten infants deprived of their parents last summer at New Orleans, (the melancholy incidents of which sad bereavement are still fresh in the public mind.)

The book has elegant covers, containing 360 pages with a fine black photographic likeness and a beautiful design, made expressly for this work. Four large engravings, made in hand, show a Pine Sheep in its lair, at THREE DOLLARS; a Pine Sheep in its lair, with Marble Deer, at THREE DOLLARS; and a Pine Sheep in its lair, with Marble Deer, at FIFTY CENTS. In Half Bound Morocco, Library Binding, at FIVE DOLLARS; and in Half Bound Turkey Morocco, full gilt, at FIVE DOLLARS.

On the receipt from any person remitting by mail or express, of the amount in a registered letter or by postal order, bank draft, or check, a copy will be immediately sent free of postage, registered as second class matter.

The volume is published in the best style of typography, on elegant paper, with illustrations, executed as highest specimens of art.

The author, the subject, the purpose, all alike render it worthy a place in every library, on every desk—or upon the book shelf of every house in the country.

Agents wanted in every town and county in the United States, and a preference will be given to honorably discharged veterans from the army.

To the ladies, who had a desire to express their sympathy with the Head Orphan Memorial Fund, the sale of this book among their circle of friends, will afford an excellent way of contributing substantially to a deserving cause.

whiz, boom! and we were swallowed up in utter pitch darkness. Instinctively I passed my hand around my bag to be sure that the locks and bands were in good condition. Yes, it was right; and leaning back, I pondered and mused over the queer speeches and actions of my pretty traveling companion. Suddenly a hand was laid softly on my arm; I started, and possibly turned a little pale while I grasped my revolver and held the bag more tightly. A moment's consideration determined me to keep silence and permit the intruding hand to wander where it would. Rapidly but lightly passing down the whole length of my arm, it finally rested for an instant on my wrist; then a small lump or pellet of paper was thrust into my palm, and my fingers passed down over it, as though it was meant to be a secret communication of some sort. At this minute I clutched at the hand, but had only to ascertain it was small and soft like a woman's before it was twisted from me, leaving behind the pellet of paper. At first I thought that the hand must have been Gert's; but then it had come from the opposite side and was bare, while her hands were covered with Lisle-thread gloves. Involuntarily I put out my own hand and touched Gert's. They were lying on her lap, folded and gloved. "Well," thought I, "we must wait until we get out of this never-ending tunnel, and doubtless the mystery will then explain itself," and I began to grow feverishly impatient to escape from the choking, sultry darkness into the open sunlight.

The first thing I did as the train rattled out of the echoing tunnel was to closely inspect Gert's face. It was calm, and perfectly emotionless, and as she seemed in meditation and totally regardless of my presence, I at once proceeded to enroll the mysterious pellet. It was an oblong slip of greasy, brown wrapping paper, covered with barely legible writing, which I deciphered only after much trouble. The following is what met my astonished gaze:

"Don't carry the money with you to Wildbush"—this was the place where the men were working, and I must confess that my breath became a trifle hurried—"for two or three days. Both it and your life are in danger. Your errand is known to Bill Martin and his squad. They will attack you on the road near"—and the last word was so crawlingly written that I could not decipher it. Nearly a dozen times I read and re-read this strange missive without clearly comprehending its purport, then thrust it in my vest-pocket and keenly scrutinized every face in the car to discover a look or a gesture that might lead me to find the writer.

"What is the matter?" asked Gert, smiling pleasantly and looking straight into my eyes.

"Nothing, nothing," I vaguely responded, and renewed my scrutiny of the passengers, but without the slightest success.

After fourteen hours of tiresome travel, I shook hands with Gert, bade her good-bye with studied grace and real regret, and jumped off the car on to the rickety platform at Millcreek. Thence I took my way toward the tavern where I had been instructed to stop overnight. As I walked along, I thought uneasily of the warning letter, and tried in vain to rid myself of a feeling of fear and apprehension. "However," I muttered, "I am well armed with a pair of Ethan Allan's shooters, and they kill at a hundred or more yards."

Then recollections of Gert and her quaint bluntness and odd behavior made me laugh outright, and I amused myself with speculations regarding her past, present and future life and destiny. I shall pass over my stay at Seven-Up Tavern, my uneasy slumbers and three hours of self-ridiculing that determined me to scoff the warning, and allow your imagination to evoke the details. After trotting steadily along for thirty miles or so, I drew rein at the entrance to an apparently interminable, darksome, winding canon nearly choked up with tall, coarse prairie-grass and sombre, gigantic trees, through whose rustling branches flew or hopped myriads of dark-plumaged birds.

"Umph, Frank!" I soliloquized. "If Bill Martin and his scoundrelly gang attack you anywhere, it will be hereabout. Once through this villainous jungle, I shall feel safe;" and half-cocking both revolvers, I rode resolutely forward, keeping a sharp lookout on every side. Permit me to mention, en passant, that an innocent decayed old stump standing in a gloomy corner of the road almost provoked my fire. I had ridden nearly an hour before meeting with anything worthy of attention; this object was a miner or laborer trudging ahead of me afoot. Observing that he seemed unarmed, I felt no alarm, though not especially desirous of his company. Turning at the sound of my horse's feet, the man stepped to one side and exclaimed, with true Western boisterousness, "Halloa, stranger, any tobacco? What's the news from the States?"

"I am sorry" to say that I have no tobacco; as for the news, here is a three day's old journal."

"Good enough," he laconically remarked. In attempting to catch the paper as I threw it toward him, he stumbled and fell. Ripping out a volley of oaths, he regained his feet, and stood close beside me—closer than I altogether relished. Patting Ace on the neck, he said, admiringly, "Fine beast. What sire?"

"Don't know," was my terse rejoinder, and I tickled Ace's side with my spur. Suddenly I saw something bright and glittering gleam over my right shoulder, and involuntarily I bent over in the saddle and dropped the reins. Ace screamed wildly, and pawed the air with his forefeet. A quick glance showed me the cause: a horn-handled bowie-knife was sunk to the hilt in the poor thing's quiver.

ing flank. In front of me stood the treacherous rascal to whom I had given the paper, a sneering smile on his coarse lips and a huge revolver in his right hand. Quick as thought I sprang from the saddle. Jumping over the huge rocks on the roadside, I got behind the nearest tree, whence I noted with desperate calmness from six to seven or eight men clustering in front of me. One of them, a small, wiry fellow, with red hair and crudely bearded joggins, I recognized as the notorious Bill Martin, a desperado of the first water, and one whose known delight was robbery and murder.

Crack, crack, crack! and the bullets flew past my ears with a whirring singing whistle that filled my heart with savage ferocity. To this minute I marvel at my emotionless coolness, as I singled out Bill Martin and one of the nearest men, and fired. The two fellows dropped without a groan; the others wavered and hesitated, evidently at a loss what to do. I noted their indecision with still murderous glee, and fired again. Another fell with a bullet in his shoulder. I cursed my ill-luck in not killing him, and called in hoarse, low tones, "Come on, I've ten more shots left;" and I laughed such a laugh as a tiger-cub might growl out, as it lapped its first fawn. The baffled hushhackers replied with terrific curses, and emptied their rifles a second time without even grazing me. Then I ran back into the swampy forest, and crouched down in a clump of sage brush. There I remained for nearly two hours before I ventured to emerge and resume my journey afoot.

I had not proceeded more than a hundred paces before I was accosted by a slightly-built fellow, attired in the same kind of apparel as were those from whom I had just escaped. My revolver was leveled in an instant, and my finger was pressing hard on the trigger, when a clear, musical voice cried, "Hold on, Carter, don't shoot yet a while."

"Gert?" I exclaimed, bewildered, and irresolute whether to shoot or not.

"Just so, old fellow; Gert I am," urging her horse toward me.

"Hold there!" I cried. "Another step and I fire."

Gert laughingly drew a pair of silver-mounted derringers from her beaded belt, and threw them on the grass at my feet.

"Never fear, Carter, these are my bowers; my ace,"—pointing to a silver-hilted stiletto—"won't hold against your hand." Half ashamed of my fear, I stooped down, picked up the dangerous toys and returned them to her. Replacing them in the belt, she shook hands with me, and said:

"Follow me, Carter; I've a number one mustang tied up for you."

I obeyed in silent amazement.

"Mount, and we'll jog along together. I want to let a little daylight into your brains—not with my pops, but my tongue. Elk, Elk;" and digging her spurs into her own horse, she gave mine a quick cut with her whip, and we trotted briskly along toward the open valley.

"Well, I suppose you are anxious to learn how it is that I am traveling along in your company once more, eh?"

"I am indeed, for my bewilderment is decidedly unpleasant."

"Just so. Now, don't bother me with any questions till I am through with my tale. After that, you may do what you please, for I shall leave you. I am Bill Martin's scout and decoy. How he learned of your errand to Wildbush I don't know; at any rate, I was sent on to Macro Station with instructions to look out for Frank Carter and a bag containing nearly four thousand dollars in gold—that bag," pointing to it, as it lay on the pommel of my Spanish saddle. "If I found you—of course I had a description of your person—I was to keep you in sight until you reached Millcreek, so as to let Bill know of your arrival. You saved my life and treated me like a gentleman. You recollect offering me that opal ring?" As we went through the tunnel, I repaid your attentions to me by warning you against Bill and his gang. You repay me in turn by scouting my warning, risking your own life and taking my lover's." Noticing my start, she laughed grimly and said, in a voice that rang with scornful, devil-may-care recklessness, "Don't be afraid; I don't want any revenge. Jack never treated me so well that I should feel forced to revenge his death."

Mr. Carter, it is not worth while entering into further details; you can fill up the vacancies. I leave you now," and rising in her saddle, the girl bent over and kissed me on the cheek.

"But, Gert," I exclaimed, holding her arm, "you shall not go!"

"What do you want with me?"

There was a world of pathetic meaning in the downward pose of the head and the quivering of her long, brown lashes.

"Tell me who you are, why it is that you are Bill Martin's spy and decoy, where you were born—not in this part of the country, I am sure."

"Oh, it is an old, old tale with new trappings," and a listless, weary look loomed up in the moist eyes made me feel uneasy and remorseful. "I am an eastern girl, and was once rather well educated, though this life has made me rough and savage. I was fifteen, foolish and romantic—be a Western gambler and a villain. I never get angry when I think of him now; that has all passed away." A single tear trembled on the wet lashes. "He was soon tired of me and my love, and left me to shift for myself. I grew mad and reckless. Jack saw me at Frisco, and easily persuaded me to accompany him. When I found that he was one of Martin's gang, I did feel a little shocked—frightened. But that feeling soon wore off, and I very soon grew to like the adventurous life and wild, free manners. In fact, the men all spoke kindly to me, and at that time the devil himself could have turned me around his finger with one kind word. I once showed my shrewdness by inveigling a wealthy old banker into Bill's house at Deluth. That fixed my fate. I was made duck-and-partner in common with the rest of the gang."

Gert's pale lips trembled in spite of her air of defiant bravado; and taking her hand in mine I said, "Gert, whatever you are besides, you are a true, good woman at heart. Come back to the States with me, and God is my witness that I will do my best to make you happy." I would have said more but she placed her hand on my lips, and replied, in unsteady accents,

"No Carter, it's too late—to late. There's too much bad in me now. I should die like a hurt fawn if I were to return home, where I could not fight off the thoughts that get into my head and heart by a race over the quiet prairies or a brush with the Apaches. I am."

A sudden burst of tears choked her utterance, and before I could prevent her, Gert had dug her spurs into her horse and galloped out of sight, leaving me to meditate alone on this strange specimen of woman-kind, not without moist eyes and an aching heart. I finally reached Wildbush in safety, and gladly paid away the three thousand seven hundred and fifty-one dollars that had led me into such dangerous and romantic adventures. I have since learned that the party with which poor Gert furnished me was originally the property of a wealthy old banker who had been robbed and maltreated by Bill Martin and his associates. However, I shall keep the animal as a souvenir of its donor, and pay the banker what he shall consider its value.

"GAINED A POUND A DAY"

SOUTH STOCKTON, N. Y., April 7, 1876.

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—I have been suffering from Aches on my Lungs and Liver Diseases for about three months. Coughed a great deal, had become nervous and restless and my flesh had wasted away. I had been treated by three different physicians without any material benefit. After using two and one-half bottles of Your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic I was a well man. Once fairly under its influence I gained flesh at the rate of a pound a day.

Gratefully yours,

J. H. CLARKE.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargements, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, no Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 30 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Ruth & Cloyd, druggists, Corunna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

Credit Mobilier.

The following is an extract from Oakes' Ames' testimony on the Credit Mobilier investigation:

I got Mr. Garfield ten shares of the Credit Mobilier stock.

Q.—State what grew out of it. A.—Mr. Garfield did not pay me any money. I sold the bonds belonging to his $1,000 of stock at 97, making $776. [This was the 80 per cent. dividend.—Ed.] In June I received a dividend in cash on his stock of $600, which left a balance due him of $329, which I paid him.

The following memorandum was read from Ames' diary:

J. A. G.	Dr.
1868. To ten shares of Credit Mobilier of A.....	$1,000
Interest.....	47
June 19. To cash.....	329
	$1,376
1863. By dividend bonds, Union Pacific Railroad, $1,000 at 80 per cent., less 3 per cent.....	$ 776
June 17. By dividend collected for your account.....	600
	$1,376

After this testimony was given Garfield sought to break its force by trying to persuade Ames that the money he had received was "a loan." Then the committee recalled Ames and he testified in these words:

Q.—State all you know in reference to it. A.—I told him he knew very well that that was a dividend. In one conversation he admitted it and said, as near as I can remember, that there was $2,400 due him in stock and bonds. He made a little memorandum of $1,000 and $1,400 and, as I recollect, said of $1,000 of Union Pacific Railroad there was $1,000 of Credit Mobilier stock and $800 of stock, or bonds. I do not recollect what.

Q.—When was this memorandum made? A.—It was made in my room. I cannot remember the date. It was since the investigation commenced.

Q.—Have you the memorandum that Mr. Garfield made? A.—I have the figures that he made.

Paper shown to the committee in Garfield's handwriting containing figures as follows:

$1,000
1,400
$2,400.

Garfield is a fit representative of a corrupt, rotten political organization. There might have been some excuse for Grant. None can be offered for Garfield.

Postponement.

The National Greenback Labor Convention of DeKalb county, is postponed until sometime in the month of August, previous to which due notice will be given. The postponement is in compliance with many requests, for which the harvest season has made it advisable. It means no abandonment, the convention will assemble and a ticket be placed in the field. By order of committee.

The end of General Hatch's campaign against Victoria's band is the escape of the sold band into Mexico, whither General Hatch cannot follow without permission from the Mexican government. Whether this will be given, or not, remains to be seen, and in the meantime Victoria and his warriors are reported to be "treacherously" just across the border.

A dispatch from Dayton, Ohio, of the New York Tribune states that the Ohio railroad was changed from broad to standard gauge. Twenty-five hundred men were placed along the line from Dayton to Leavittsburg, a distance of 225 miles, and work began at three o'clock a.m. and the last spike was driven at nine o'clock a.m. The shortest piece of work of this kind on record.

The Cincinnati Commercial says: "There were three points in General Garfield's record that require explanation and they relate to the Credit Mobilier, the Salary Grab and the DeCoyler payment." The truest alas, too true! Why don't the Commercial explain them? Perhaps it had the three points in its mind when it exclaimed the day before Garfield's nomination as follows: "The most contemptible thing (that was) Chicago is the chief about Garfield." He has not a record to run on for President and it is extreme foolishness to be wasting time on him. The Garfield talk is merely to interfere with Sherman and should be discontinued. Not. He had not a record to run on for President. —Indianapolis Sentinel.

As we write the gallant hosts of the great Democracy are pouring into the Queen City to select a leader for the coming contest. The convention was organized at Music Hall at one o'clock on Tuesday, with Judge Hoadley of Cincinnati as temporary chairman. Mr. Tilden in a manly and patriotic letter has declined to be a candidate and therefore is no longer a bone of contention with the Kellyites. The roll of states having been called and all got in readiness for the following convention adjourned for Wednesday. There are about eighteen candidates for presidential honors and up to Thursday noon Hancock has the lead and Payne is second best. There is no telling at this hour who among the many able aspirants will be the golden prize.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 30, 1880.

IMMEDIATELY following the Cincinnati nominations grand and jubilant suffrage meetings were held in every prominent city and town in the Union. Day is dawning and the Democratic horizon is ablaze with glory.

THE embellishments of the Radical standard-bearers as they appear at the head of their national ticket, for instance the cut in the Waterloo Press, could make an effective "scare-crow" in some farmer's cornfield. Great Caesar that is a sweet picture of ex-collector Arthur. The victim of R. Hayes' civil service reform ought to go gunning for the artist fiend.

Mr. Lens' nomination was made by acclamation. Mr. Van Auker might as well withdraw and let the election be made in the same way.—[Waterloo Press.]

I guess not, Mr. Baxter. "Don't count your chickens before they are hatched," is an old saw but a good one and particularly applicable to the case. From present indications the buzzard crop is likely to turn out rather slim next fall.

THE County Republican Convention held at Auburn on the 19th, nominated the following ticket: For Commissioner, F. D. Oberlin, of Franklin; Representative, Wm. T. Hopkins, of Keyser; Clerk, John A. Provines, of Concord; Treasurer, Wm. Henderson, of Concord; Recorder, Chas. Haines, of Butler; Sheriff, A. S. Lease, of Waterloo, by acclamation; Surveyor, A. L. Holloper, of Auburn; Coroner, Henry Espy, of Waterloo. So far as our acquaintance extends the above named gentlemen are of average character and fitness for the positions to which they aspire; but with our accredited margin in the county to build upon there is no possible chance for Republican success this fall.

Mexico, South Mountain, Williamsburg, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Chancellorsville, the Wilderness and Finally Washington in 1881.

FOR PRESIDENT,

Major General Winfield Scott Hancock.

From her host of honorable sons the glorious old Democratic party, full of pride and patriotism, presents for the suffrages of a free people that "noblest Roman of them all," WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK. Ohio extends to Pennsylvania her heartiest congratulations, and promises by an unparalleled majority for the Cincinnati nominees in November the inauguration of her favorite son as the next President of the United States.

General Hancock was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1824, and through his veins flows some of the best blood of the revolutionary sires. He graduated at West Point in the class of 1844. Shortly after in the war with Mexico he distinguished himself by his consummate military skill and personal bravery on the field. He was the first to hoist and unfurl our victorious flag upon the Halls of the Montezumas in the conquered city of Mexico. Promoted for gallantry in that campaign he was subsequently assigned to duty and again distinguished himself in the hardships of the Seminole war. Always at the front, his illustrious military services at Williamsburg, South Mountain, Antietam and Chancellorsville, led to still higher promotion, and in June, 1868, he was appointed commander of the historic Second Corps. At the terrible battle of Gettysburg he was severely wounded, being carried off the field in a shattered, bleeding and supposed to be dying condition from the enemy's shot and shell. Partially recovered he was again to the front in the Wilderness campaign, the fiercest conflict of the late war. In 1866 he was placed in command at Washington and subsequently made commander of the Eastern military division whose headquarters are at New York. Thus much for the briefest review of General Hancock's brilliant military career.

His civil record is not less conspicuous for its exalted wisdom and distinguished worth. In his immortal order of November 29, 1867, wherein he boldly declares that "The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved," he will live in history as among the wisest of statesmen. His administration of civil affairs exhibits his usual and wonderful knowledge in that department of life and his steadfast subordination of the military to the civil jurisdictions of our land. We have no space in this article to refer to the many efforts and utter failures of the Radical faction to humiliate General Hancock before the American people for his unswerving devotion to the constitution and constitutional principles. General Hancock has always been a staunch Democrat and was a very prominent candidate for the presidency at St. Louis in 1876. He is a most estimable citizen and honorable gentleman. His record is brilliant and unsullied. His nomination has inspired the Democratic masses with unparalleled enthusiasm. He will be triumphantly elected in November 1880, and inaugurated President of the United States in March 1881.

We rejoice at the unanimity of the delegates of the convention, the unbounded demonstrations of joy at his success, and the sure presage of victory at the polls led by that most courageous of leaders General Winfield Scott Hancock.

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,

the Democratic candidate for Vice-President, was born in Scott county, Indiana, August 27th, 1822. After receiving a good country school education he passed three years at the University of South Hanover. Mr. English studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1846, but his great passion has always been for agricultural pursuits. He was elected Clerk of the House of Representatives of Indiana, in 1843. While Polk was President our candidate was a clerk in the Treasury Department. The state constitutional convention of 1850 chose him its clerk. Mr. English was elected to the lower house of the state Legislature, in 1851 over which he presided as Speaker. Two years later he was sent to Congress. He was re-elected, and soon after was appointed to the highly honorable position of Regent of the Smithsonian Institution. In 1856 he was again elected and became conspicuous in the first session of the Thirty-fifth Congress in the Kansas compromise measure. In the Congress is question Mr. English was Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. He was re-elected to the Thirty-sixth Congress, serving on the same committee. Mr. English is a man of the people, an excellent exponent of the great popular party that has honored him.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

Soon after the nomination of General Hancock, John Kelly, leader of the anti-Tilden faction, marches in amid intense excitement. The organ is playing and the entire audience is on its feet shouting, waving hats, banners, canes and even chairs. The band strikes up an Irish air as the organ ceases. Kelly proceeds to the platform amid uproarious shout. He takes the stand, is presented by the president amid tremendous cheering, not unmingled with hisses. Kelly says to the convention:

"By your action to-day you have united the Democracy of New York. While my brethren and myself have been fighting each other for five years, let past differences be forgotten [tremendous cheering]. Never again shall I refer to what has occurred in a political way in the State of New York. Our personal relations have not been broken. In our calm moments we have seen we were both in error. Now that we are united, I can say to this convention that there can be no doubt of the result in our state in November."

Kelly ceased speaking by saying to the New York delegation:

"Let us return home and advance in harmony as I know we shall, and let him who first refers to the political past between us be put under the ban of a traitor to the Democratic party. Let us take each other by the hand united as a band of brothers and there can be no question as to New York [great cheering]."

The State Supreme Court has passed upon the constitutional amendments which were made a party test at the spring election, and declared them to be unconstitutional. The point upon which they were pronounced invalid was that a majority had not voted in favor of their adoption, the noes and silent votes being considered as evidence of rejection. This decision reverses the old order of things and makes Indiana an October State. Naturally enough the Radical leaders are as mad as hatters over the action of the Supreme Court, and threaten to hold the Democracy responsible for usurpation of power. Let them howl, the people will sustain the action of the Judiciary in this matter.

—Carpenters and painters are busy repairing houses and fences. The people of Garrett are showing more enterprise this spring than ever.

—It was Charley Linkumbelt and Buddy Thomas who the other day went all the way to Mosquito Point a gunning for wild game. In the absence of game they fell asleep by the side of an old sycamore log, where they slumbered on in blissful innocence until the twilight had gathered around the slumbering volcano's, when they were awakened by the thoughtfulness of Travis' dog Sport, who accompanied the party. The question arises, what in the Old Harry, was the matter with Charley and Bud? Perhaps "thereby hangs a tale," and as in the case of Garfield calls for an explanation.

An Explanation of the term "Credit Mobilier."

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

EDITORS PLAIN DEALER:—Please give in your valuable paper a brief explanation of "Credit Mobilier." How is it pronounced? By answering the above you will gratify a reader of your daily.

READER:—The term "Credit Mobilier" is French and means literally "movable credit." The French pronunciation as near as it can be indicated in English syllables is CRA-DEE MO-BEE-EE-A with the accent on the second syllable. If pronounced according to the English spelling we suppose it would be allowable. The Credit Mobilier of America was a corporation within a corporation. That is to say, certain stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad at the time that road was being built formed themselves into a corporation with the above title, and took contracts for building the road. In effect the stockholders in the ring contracted with themselves to construct the road and of course by contracting with themselves and having control of the Board of Directors in the Pacific Railroad, they were able to obtain whatever kind of contracts they desired, in many cases obtaining twice and thrice the amount for constructing certain portions of the road that the construction actually cost. The profits, which were very great, were divided among the stockholders of the Credit Mobilier. In order to produce the funds for this steal the road was loaded down with mortgages, the same set of men in their capacity as directors for the Union Pacific road authorizing the mortgage, and in their capacity as directors of the Credit Mobilier, pocketing the proceeds. The original bonds issued by the government for the building of the road were secured by a first mortgage, but by the manipulation of the Credit Mobilier it was changed to a third mortgage, the mortgages which they had fraudulently issued, and the proceeds of which they had stolen taking precedence. It was this result, that Garfield, Colfax and other Congressmen who figured in the scandal got mixed up, and it was with a view to secure their influence and prevent threatened resignation that Oakes Ames, who was a stockholder, distributed shares of stock among Congressmen "where it would do most good." The Congressional investigation and the death of Oakes Ames ended the career of the Credit Mobilier. Suits were instituted by the government to recover the money stolen by the members of the corporation, but they were never brought to a conclusion, and nothing came of it. The plunder amounted to several millions, and was never extracted from the pockets of the swindlers who got it.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

WEDNESDAY.....JUNE 30, 1880.

The great work of the Cincinnati convention has been accomplished and from the roll of prominent candidates named the choice has fallen upon the military hero and statesman General Winfield Scott Hancock of Pennsylvania for President, and Indiana's distinguished statesman Hon. William H. English for Vice. The former was nominated upon the second ballot and the latter's nomination was made unanimous. The wildest excitement and enthusiasm followed the nomination and such scenes of happy applauds and harmonious feeling were never before witnessed in a national convention. And now the Democracy of the East and West, of the entire North and South, shake hands and rally in a solid body around the standard bearers and pledge their hearty support to the nominees. General Hancock will be elected and inaugurate the next President of the United States in spite of returning Bores, the flesh and the devil.

The Brooklyn delegation which accompanied Tammey are unanimous in pledging their city to Hancock and English.

Charles Atherton, son of Congressman Atherton of Newark, Ohio, is making a note saying he intended committing suicide.

We are a united people once more in New York, gladly say, all the Democratic newspapers of the Empire state, and that unity seals the doom of James A. Garfield.

Chicago, Sunday. Schools on Saturday celebrated the cent birthday anniversary of the establishment of Sunday schools by Robert Raikes. The exercises took place in the Exposition building, about 6,000 children taking part.

John Hancock was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Winfield Scott Hancock will declare and enforce the Independence of the people from ring rule, Credit Mobiler, DeGolyer contracts, and other public nuisances.

PUBLIC OPINION.

HANCOCK & ENGLISH.

Lyman Trumbull: "I candidly believe that Illinois will give it its electoral vote."

Senator Booth (Republican): "It is a strong ticket, and English secures Indiana."

Senator Jones (Florida): "It will sweep the country. It will spike every gun of the enemy."

Congressman Manning (Mississippi): "It will rally under its banners every Democrat.
The ticket augurs an enthusiastic canvass and success."

Senator Barnum: "I think it is a good one. It will carry all the South, and in the North the States of Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Indiana. Oh, we will have a "walk over" this time, sure."

Every man who voted for Tilden and Hendricks in 1876 has a personal grievance against Mr. Garfield who voted to count in the man who was defeated and to count out the man who was elected.—Ligonier Banner.

Mr. Tilden expressed an opinion to a reporter of the Sun that no stronger nomination could have been made. He regards himself as vindicated and did not desire the nomination. He is glad the convention was governed by so great wisdom to act as it did."

Pennsylvania politicians say that Hancock will certainly carry that State. The feuds in the Republican party and the disaffection of the Grant men will end in bringing about that result but the great popularity of General Hancock with the soldier element will make it certain.

Cyrus H. McCormick, of Chicago, the wealthiest citizen of that place, known in every farm house as the originator of the most important labor-saving farm machinery, says: "I like them. They will sweep the country. They will heal the sectional issues and will bring victory to the Democrats in November."

A SCANDALOUS DOG.

How a Young Man was Compelled to Murder a Dog to Prevent a Scandal in the Family.

(Virginia City Enterprise.)

Once upon a time there lived in the city of New York a wealthy old gentleman, who had a wayward son. The young man liked to run with the boys, and managed to use up considerable of the old gentleman's substance for wine suppers, fast teams and other unholly dissipations. Consequently, this young man was always in debt, constantly in need of ready cash and continually making requisitions on his governor's exchequer.

At last the old gentleman took a tumble, whatever that may mean; but the young man, in describing the course his father had concluded to pursue, remarked to a friend that the old man had taken a tumble. The said tumble consisted in his notifying his son and heir that from that on and henceforth no more cash for any funny business, and the old fellow was as good as his word. Down in his heart of hearts the young man was grievous sore, but he assumed a smile though he felt it not, and made earnest protestations of reform. Meanwhile he kept running with the boys, on tick. Tick is one of those things that has a limit, and one day the wayward son found himself at the end of his rope, so to speak, and at his wit's ends for funds to keep up his end with the other boys, and, after canvassing the matter in his mind and assuring himself that the old gentleman was inexorable and that no coin could be squeezed out of him on a square proposition, he hit upon a happy expedient. Entering the paternal presence, and assuming a look of business, he said:

"Father, have you read about that man over in Brooklyn that can teach dogs to talk?"

If the old man had been in the halcyon days of his youth, no doubt he probably would have said, "whatyer gavinus," but, being the father of a family, he said, "what sort of a dam-nonsense are you talking about now?"

"Fact, sure's you live," said young hopeful; "I've seen the thing myself, and I didn't know but what it might be a good idea to take old Tige over and have him taught; a talking dog would be a cheerful thing to have about the house, and would make lots of amusement for the children."

"My son," returned the father, solemnly, "I am an old man, and I've seen a powerful sight of the world, and I tell you that this is an age of humbug."

"That's all right, father, but isn't it likewise an age of progress? Look at the locomotive, and the telephone, and the Atlantic cable, and the patent what-do-you-call-em, and all those other things they didn't know about in the days of the Revolutionary fathers."

"Certainly, certainly, my son; glad to see you showing such knowledge of the world's progress. And you really think the man can teach dogs to talk?"

"Sure pop! But it don't cost a cent if it's a failure. The Professor says he don't want any money if the dog can't be taught in one week to carry on a conversation with any body. The terms are just these: You take the dog over and pay the $50 in advance; if at the end of the week the dog can't talk, you get your $50 back; but if he can talk you pay $50 more, making an even hundred for the lessons."

"Well, it would be odd to have old Tige talking around the house, and I guess we'll try the thing, any how. You can take the dog over this afternoon, if you like."

And the old man went down in his "kick," as the boys call it, and handed the boy a $50 note.

Tige left the house that day.

From day to day the old gentleman inquired of his son as to the progress Tige was making in his studies. The invariable reply of the son was: "The professor says he's just getting on fine, and going to make a talker from base."

National Democratic Platform.

The Committee on Resolutions submitted the following platform, through Mr. Watterson (Ky.), the Chairman, which was read and unanimously adopted:

The Democrats of the United States, in Convention assembled, declare:

1. We pledge ourselves anew to the Constitutional doctrines and traditions of the Democratic party, as illustrated by the teaching and example of a long line of Democratic statesmen and patriots, and embodied in the platform of the last National Convention of the party.
2. Opposition to centralization and to that dangerous spirit of encroachment which tends to consolidate in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism.
3. No sumptuary laws; separation of Church and State for the good of each, and common schools fostered and protected.
4. Home rule, honest money, consisting of gold and silver and paper convertible into coin on demand; the strict maintenance of the public faith, State and National, and a tariff for revenue only.
5. The subordination of the military to the civil power, and a genuine and thorough reform of the Civil Service.
6. The right to a free ballot is a right preservative of all rights, and must and shall be maintained in every part of the United States. The existing Administration is the representative of a conspiracy only, and its claim of right to surround the ballot-boxes with troops and Deputy Marshals to intimidate and obstruct the Electors, and the unprecedented use of the veto to maintain its corrupt and despotic powers, insult the people and imperil their institutions.

7. We execrate the course of this Administration in making places in the Civil Service a reward for political crime, and demand a reform by statute which shall make it forever impossible for a defeated candidate to bribe his way to the seat of a usurper by billeting villains upon the people.

8. The great fraud of 1876-77, by which, upon a false count of the Electoral vote of two States, the candidate defeated at the polls was declared to be President, and for the first time in American history the will of the people was set aside under a threat of military violence, struck a deadly blow at our system of representative government. The Democratic party, to preserve the country from the horrors of a civil war, submitted for the time, in the firm and patriotic faith that the people would punish this crime in 1880. This issue precedes and dwarfs every other. It inspires a more sacred duty upon the people of the Union than ever addressed the consciences of a Nation of free-men.

9. The resolution of Samuel J. Tilden not again to be a candidate for the exalted place to which he was elected by a majority of his countrymen, and from which he was excluded by the leaders of the Republican party, is received by the Democrats of the United States with deep sensibility, and they declare their confidence in his wisdom, patriotism and integrity unshaken by the assaults of the common enemy; and they further assure him that he is followed into the retirement he has chosen for himself by the sympathy and respect of his fellow-citizens, who regard him as one who, by elevating the standard of public morality, and adorning and purifying the public service, merits the lasting gratitude of his country and his party.

10. Free ships and a living chance for American commerce upon the seas; and on the land no discrimination in favor of transportation lines, corporations or monopolies; the amendment of the Burlingame Treaty, so as to permit no more immigration except for travel, education and foreign commerce, and therein carefully guarded; the public money and the public credit for public purposes only, and the public lands for actual settlers. The Democratic party is the friend of labor and the laboring man, and pledges itself to protect him alike against the cormorants and the Commune.

11. We congratulate the country upon the honesty and thrift of a Democratic Congress which has reduced the public expenditure $40,000,000 a year; upon the continuation of prosperity at home and National honor abroad, and, above all, upon the promise of such a change in the administration of the Government as shall insure us genuine and lasting reform in every department of the public service.

—Hon. John W. Forney, of Philadelphia, one of the best known and heretofore strongest Republicans in the country, was one of General Grant's most stalwart supporters, and was deeply disgusted with the way the General was treated at the Chicago convention. He sent a message of congratulation over to General Hancock and expresses the opinion that he will be elected. He informed a reporter that he had not decided what his course in the campaign would be, but he had no hesitation in saying that General Hancock will be elected the next President of the United States and that 100,000 Republicans will vote for him.

—A little girl who was sent out for eggs came back unsuccessful, and complained that "there was lots of hens standing around and doing nothing."

Why Arthur Was Hounded.

As the risk of hurting the feelings of the Federal officers we propose touching upon an episode in the career of Mr. Arthur. Robert Hayes, late of New-Princeton, N.J., our first secretary is Robert H. Hayes. On the first of January, 1876, Mr. Hayes wrote thus to Mr. Arthur, at that time Collector of Customs, New York:

"You have sold the Custom House Centre of the nation to the highest bidder."

"I have sold the Custom House Centre of the nation to the highest bidder, and I am sorry to say that you have sold it to the highest bidder."

"This is a valuable commodity and I am sorry to say that you have sold it to the highest bidder, and I am sorry to say that you have sold it to the highest bidder."

—The Fourth of July opened in Jersey City Saturday by John Chamberlain toying with a pistol and fatally shooting Mary Bott, aged twelve.

—A man named Reed killed another man named Baker Saturday in a house of prostitution in Mt. Vernon, Indiana. They had been quarreling.

—Charles Sylvester, a young lad aged seventeen years, residing at Cleveland, Ohio, committed suicide near that place on the 4th, by shooting himself through the head.

—Mrs. Sylvester Chick, of Kennebunk, Maine, took her only son, eight years old, to the river Thursday, undressed him and held him under the water until he drowned. She then attempted to drown herself.

—The bodies of two more victims of the Sewanahaka disaster were picked up Saturday in East River, making a total of forty bodies recovered. Twelve persons are still missing.

—Senators Blaine and Cameron are both at White Sulphur Springs but won't speak to each other. The harmony that prevails among the Republican leaders is sweet and beautiful.

—Link Williams was hanged in Rolling Ford, Mississippi, Friday for the murder of one Messner. About fifteen hundred persons were present. Williams made a short speech, warning his friends of his fate and asked them to pray for him.

—Don Cameron is sick; Blaine is not very well; Grant is tired; John Sherman is out of temper, and Roscoe Conkling is in love. It will therefore be necessary for General Garfield to stir around and make speeches at all the school teachers' conventions and Sunday school picnics that are held this summer.

Garfield and His Oath.

HIS RECORD IN CONGRESS—HIS VISIT TO LOUISIANA—HIS OPPOSITION TO THE ELECTORAL BILL & HIS COURSE ON THE COMMISSION.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He voted for every one of the many jolts, land grants, subsidies to railroads, etc., that were granted since 1862.

He and Sherman and Stanley Matthews were the three Ohio friends of Mr. Hayes who went down to Louisiana and managed the Returning Board. The electoral vote of that state was in reality not stolen by the Returning Board but by Garfield and Sherman, who furnished them with the inspiration, the courage and the temptation to commit that crime. The Returning Board rascals were only tools in the hands of Garfield and Sherman, who spoke, promised and acted as the personal and immediate agents of R. B. Hayes.

Garfield made a speech of great power against the Electoral Commission bill, upon the sole ground that it compelled an investigation of the Returning Board frauds, compelled to go behind the returns. But, the bill passed, Garfield became a member of the Commission. He took this oath: "I, James A. Garfield, do solemnly swear that I will impartially examine and consider all questions submitted to the Commission of which I am a member and a true judgment give thereon, agreeably to the Constitution and laws, so help me God." This oath Mr. Garfield also signed. Yet he voted at least a hundred times with the other seven Republicans against the very and only thing the commission was created to do—to "examine and consider" the questions of fraud—voted that the commission had to be deaf, blind and dumb, could not go behind the returns, and in fact, could examine nothing, consider nothing, except to count in Hayes.

Garfield, though formerly professing to be a revenue reformer, turned out to be a survival tool of the Eastern protectionists. This present Congress failed to reduce some of the most unjust and oppressive duties largely through the efforts of Garfield, who as a member of the Committee on Ways and Means protected the interests of the Eastern manufacturers.

Garfield's vote on the Electoral Commission counted in Hayes after his voice and hand had managed the Returning Board steal in Louisiana. His election would mean not only the complete popular indorsement of the theft of the presidency, but practically the continuation of it in the same political family.

Garfield is a regular machine politician. He has had no other income than that received from office. He has made his living out of politics for twenty years. He needs office for a living and is, according to Republican evidence and the evidence contained in the Congressional Record, not above temptation. Quite the contrary.

So much for the head of the ticket.

As to the tail, General Arthur, of New York, suffice it to say he is Conkling's man Friday, who never held another office than that of Collector of New York. Sherman and Hayes removed him upon the distinct ground that it was an absolute necessity in the interest of the public service. Arthur is a very ordinary person, of no talents whatever except that of manipulating the machine. His nomination for the vice presidency will prove to have been a great mistake. It is certainly a most astonishing act, a most emphatic slap in the face of the Hayes administration, a most complete triumph of the machine, an humble piece offering to Conkling. The nomination of Washburne for the second place on the ticket would have been a thousand times stronger.

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

THURSDAY JULY 15, 1880.

This is the way the Chicago Journal draws a comparison of the opposing presidential candidates:

"In Garfield we have a man who is an experienced and accomplished statesman, who was also a brave soldier when his country needed his services. In Hancock we have a mere soldier, who has never had one day's experience outside of military life since he was a boy. Do we want a Republican statesman in the Executive office, or a Democratic soldier?—a civil President or a military Dictator? A man who is a soldier, and nothing but a soldier, is not a man to be intrusted with the reins of the civil government of a Republic. The sooner the American people come to appreciate that fact, the better for the future of the country."

Garfield's accomplished statesmanship has consisted of Credit Mobilier operations, DeGoyer pavement jobs, and grants to railroad corporations. He is a fine specimen to be "intrusted with the reins of government." His bravery in the army was nothing to be boasted of, as he soon resigned for the more pleasant and peaceful position of a congressman, and Rutheford B. H. says any man who will abandon duty in the field to accept an office ought to be scalped. As to military Dictator, how about Grant? Was he not a soldier and nothing but a soldier? And is there any more danger of Hancock than Grant? "Do we want a Republican statesman in the Executive office?" Not much; the country has had about enough of that class of "statesmen" and propose to take a new deal. It won't do for the Radicals to belittle the statesmanship of General Hancock. He is not only a military genius but a statesman of the highest order, although his knowledge of Credit Mobilier stock and DeGoyer contracts is rather limited.

Merited Tribute to Tilden.

The Democrats of Logansport held a large and enthusiastic Hancock and English ratification meeting at which a number of eloquent speeches were delivered. Among the best of the occasion was that of M. D. Fansler, who is evidently a young man of discernment and solid sense. In the course of his remarks he said:

One of the glorious things in the affairs of government is that in the times of great need the man for the occasion always comes to the front. In 1860, when the extreme State's right men sought to sever the Union, the right man to say no and carry out his purpose was found. Now the republican party is taking just the opposite course. The tendency of that party is toward centralization and imperialism, and we are glad to know that the person to check this dangerous tendency has come to the front in the person of General Winfield Scott Hancock. Another hero in this emergency is Samuel J. Tilden—a name that will be emblazoned on the democratic banners as long as the party lives. Let me point a parallel: During the war, when Hancock at the head of his men was marching against the enemy, the boys in his command sang in unison the familiar song:

"John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave,
John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave,
But his soul goes marching on."

And so it is with Tilden; his body (politically) may now be mouldering in the grave, but his soul goes marching on. He is the grandest old man on the face of the earth. To prevent a war he laid down his rights and permitted a Usurper to enter the White House; now to insure harmony in his party, and consequently success, he has laid down his pre-eminent claims to the nomination and placed his mantle upon other shoulders. Washington was great; Adams was great; Jackson was great—but neither of them ever sacrificed what Samuel J. Tilden has and his name will live and grow green as long as theirs will.

The Pharos says that at the close of his speech Mr. Fansler proposed three cheers for Samuel J. Tilden which were given with a vim. The patriotic sentiments of the eloquent speaker were roundly applauded.

—According to the census returns Chicago has 500,000 inhabitants.

—Garrett has a population of 1,352, Waterloo 1,430, Auburn 1,542.

it is a splendid medicine. My father had been sick a long time. One bottle has helped him more than any medicine he has yet used. My wife, also, has used a bottle with good results. Yours truly,

JACOB SMITH.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and

Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the "blue" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver

Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipa-

tion, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen

Enlargement, Impaired Nerves and Nervous

Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties.

It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its causes.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain;

as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache,

THE HEAD LIGHT.

BY J. C. LOVELL AND.

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 15, 1880.

Down in Pennsylvania the signs of the times portend that the Republicans will have a close shave, and if things go on from "wuss to wuss" Hancock will carry the state.

THE Democrats of Kendallville organized a Hancock and English club at that place on Saturday evening, July 3d. The meeting was addressed by Andy Ellison of Lagrange and there was a large turnout and over 150 persons joined the club at the close of the meeting. The boys are rallying to the Hancock standard by the thousands, and there are many recruits from the Republican ranks.

WHILE discussing the chances of success in the present political struggle with a republican neighbor, he wound up by saying: "It makes no difference, if you do elect a Democrat we will 'count our man in again.' That's it; the radicals boast of the great crime of 1876, and threaten to repeat it in 1881. Never mind, Hancock's majority will be so overwhelming next November that there will be no need of an electoral commission."

As a specimen of what the best informed Republicans think of the nomination; we publish the following telegram to Gen. Hancock:

"I congratulate you on your nomination for President, and predict your election and the complete restoration of peace to all sections. Your life-long friend, JOHN W. FORNEY."

Similar dispatches were received from a great many Republicans in different parts of the country.

We are Coming, Father Abraham!

Peter Wilson, described as "an ardent Grant man," joined the Hancock club at Streator, Ill., on Thursday night.

A Republican club of sixty-five members, at St. Louis, declared for Hancock and English a few nights ago.

Col. Thomas A. Scott is a warm friend and admirer of General Hancock and will heartily support him for the President.

Southern outrages have begun. The colored folks in the Carolinas and Georgia are joining Hancock clubs in heavy force. Bull-dozing, of course.

Henry Kahlo, a leading business man at Toledo, and two years ago the national green-back candidate for Congress in the Toledo District, has declared for Hancock and English.

Jon. O. P. Davis, national Senator from Parke and Vermillion counties, Ind., announces his purpose to support Hancock and English, and to yield all his influence in their behalf.

Judge E. A. Ely, a life-long Republican, of Jasper, Indiana, announced his determination to forsake Republicanism at the democratic ratification meeting in Jasper, on Saturday a week ago.

The Germans of Cleveland are somewhat excited over the fact that the Waechter an Erie, hitherto accepted as the leading Republican organ of the Germans there, has abandoned Garfield and placed a Hancock flag at its mast-head.

Peter Cooper, the venerable philanthropist, and General S. F. Cary paid their respects to General Hancock one day last week. Mr. Cooper addressed him as "our next President." The old man has prophetic forecast, and his prediction will be realized.

John W. Forney out for Hancock indicates the drift of politics in Pennsylvania as well as anything that could be cited. His last service to the democratic party was as Chairman of the State Committee, in 1866. He went into the Republican party three or four years after, and there is no man in the state who has a better acquaintance with its politics.

Thos. J. Study, Esq., one of the most prominent and able members of the Wayne county bar, who has been a leading Republican, is declared for Hancock and English, Landers and Gray, and has accepted an invitation to address the Democratic club at Richmond on Thursday evening of this week. This is a valuable accession to the democratic party.—Ind. Sentinel.

A brother of William Cullen Bryant, the poet, heretofore a life-long Republican, comes forward to the support of Hancock and English, and presided at a ratification meeting held in Elkhart on last Friday evening. Another gentleman by the name of Field, who had always been a Republican, made a speech advocating the election of the democratic nominees, and pledged his support.

Leonard W. Jerome, a New York millionaire, has just written General Hancock a splendid letter commending him on his nomination, and saying white he (Jerome) comes from a numerous and very old silver-gray Republican family, and has been a life-long Whig and Republican, yet he will cordially vote for the hero of Gettysburg, and expresses a belief that the Jerome family will rally around the democratic banner.

VINCENNES, Ind., July 3.—Rev. Lewis Loveless, a prominent politician of this (the second) congressional district, a resident of Pike county, yesterday published in the Petersburg Democrat a card renouncing his allegiance to the republican party, and declaring for Hancock and reform. Loveless was a candidate for Congress from this district in 1874, and, at though the democratic majority was hopelessly against him, he ran ahead of his ticket. He was one of the most prominent leaders in the party. Mr. L. declares the republican party to be hopelessly corrupt; Hayes a fraudulent President, etc.; his new departure has caused deep consternation in the Radical party in this district, where he is known.

The Republican Congressional convention will be held at Auburn tomorrow. As the party have not any hopes of success in the district, the aspirants are not very numerous.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—The harvest is nearly over.
—The blackberries are beginning to ripen and the crop is abundant.
—Green corn, cucumbers and the holly-nche, will soon be here.
—Quite a number of our citizens spent the 3d at Rome City.
—According to the figures of Enumerator Chilcote Corunna has a population of 250.
—Mr. Wierman of Ashland, Ohio, has purchased the Chris. Krider property, and will take possession this week.
—The Corunna band furnished the music for the Hancock and English meeting at Kendallville.
—The army worm has appeared in Burlington, N. J. and is ravaging the wheat, corn and timothy.
—Owing to the late frequent heavy rain, storms the apples are falling from the trees and the crop will not be as large as anticipated.
—Blossom: produce apples, apples give us cider, and cider produces blossoms. Thus we have one of nature's beautiful compensations.
—Bro. Rob. J. Lowry of the Courier attended the Cincinnati convention. He took in Lookout but didn't venture over the Rhine.
—Engel & Co., Clothiers Kendallville, are now offering goods at a great reduction in price in order to close out present stock for fall invoices. For the next 30 days you can secure extra bargains in summer clothing. Don't forget it!
—Four healthy looking tramps, just in from "Sheeargo" town, struck the village not long ago and hung around for awhile, when they moved east; harvest hands are commanding $2.25 and $2.50 a day and yet the tramp is abroad looking for a job.
—Horatio Seymour, who was 70 years old on Monday, celebrated the completion of his three-score-and-ten years by remarking to a New York reporter: "Well, if anybody thinks I want to be President they are mistaken. Tell them I am too respectable a man to desire the office."

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

A new year has made its appearance in the month of January.

The Town of Garrett was in town Sunday last.

John J. Miller who has been absent for the past two years in Missouri and Mexico has just returned to a new home.

A horse named "The Wolf" has been found in the woods near the town of Garrett.

Miss Calkin has moved into the village and engaged work with Frank Burst in the manufacture of the Spring Bed Bottom.

Benj. Myers' large barn 1 1/2 miles east of Waukegan, was burned Tuesday morning. The fire is supposed to have originated by a lamp standing in the barn. (Kendallville Standard.)

The late Kendallville Standard reports the death of one of its readers, near that place, the result of the flu, by being run over by a train of the Grand Rapids Road, some drops on the track in an attempt to stop it.

There was a very busy selling groceries at the popular grocery house of Isaac Leach, here, lately. They offer the best and the most for the least money at Leach's. Our readers are advised to give this house a call when they visit Kendallville.

When the late J. C. McNeil of the ill-fated freighter McNichols, met J. C. McNeil, and the latter severely injured by a portion of the crew which penetrated the head in a tremendous blow, while holding it over the bow. Although the boy plays carry much attention they are not altogether safe.

The new garage building at Auburn will soon be finished and ready for occupancy. This is one of the handsomest business structures in Auburn and grounds quite a landmark. It is built of brick with all the modern improvements and appointments, and is especially adapted to the extensive hardware and iron business of the Messrs. Kibinger & Co. The enterprise of this firm is worthy of commendation.

(From the Garrett Edition.)

You ought to see how energetic our fat men lay in the shade this warm weather.

Wm. Keyser, President of the Land Company, passed through Saturday on his way to Chicago. He did not stop.

Mrs. Dr. Sherman and children went to Columbus on the 9th to visit relatives. They will be gone several weeks.

The Herald is mistaken in regard to Mr. Hunt's little boy, who was shot, being dead. He is still alive and doing well.

The place to buy Boots and Shoes is at Reyer's corner.

Thomas Watt had his wrist cut and bruised last Friday by a large piece of steel falling on it while he was removing it from a vice, causing a painful wound resulting.

The largest stock of the H. & S. Stock that was ever sold.

The train No. 16 coming west on Friday last, ran into a cow, killed three of them and wrecked seven cars. The cars were scattered in every direction and the track torn up for a distance of a hundred and fifty yards, but fortunately no one was hurt. The accident occurred four miles west of Deerpark, Ill.

Late News Brevities.

There were twelve prostrations and seven deaths by the heat in New York Saturday.

Two more ladies (men) were recovered Sunday from the wreck of the steamer Narragansett, lying at Cold Spring harbor.

A man named Lind was found dead by the side of the railway track near Newark, Ohio, Saturday. He had been on a spree since July 3th.

Miss Carrie French, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, a most estimable young lady, was killed at the crossing of the Western & Toledo and Delaware & Burlington Railroad at Toledo Saturday.

A young man at Danville, Va., entered a house of ill fame, of which his sister was an inmate, and shot her five times in order to wipe out the disgrace of the family. The girl pushed him in his murderous wrath and entrusted him to be led away by the officers. She will die.

Julia Turpin, a well-known young woman of St. Louis, went into a restaurant there, shot herself in the head, and then jumped from a second story window to the sidewalk. Her injuries are not dangerous. She is finely educated and is supposed to belong to a wealthy Chicago family.

Col. Pelton, nephew of ex-Gov. Tilden, who achieved considerable notoriety through his connection with the cipher dispatches, died, yesterday morning, at the Everett house, New York, of heart disease. His remains were soon after removed to the Tilden mansion in Gramercy square, where the funeral will be held on Friday. Pelton was 42 years of age.

FRIDAY JULY 15, 1880

There is a damphead by the name Doctor Tanner, of New York, experimenting on the feat of fasting 40

Before the time is up the apartment for cheap notoriety will probably be carried out to the honeyard.

Fallen had a majority of 32,818 in New York in 1876. What reason is there to suppose that Hancock will be less? What Democrat who voted Tilden will not vote for Hancock? What votes will Garfield get that Hayes did not?

Immigration to the United States during the first half of the year 1880 has amounted to 177,000 persons, an almost unprecedented number and more than three times the number that came during the same period last year. It seems probable that the early estimates will be reached, if not exceeded.

The first state election this year will be Arkansas, occurring on the first Monday in September. Other state elections previous to November will occur as follows: Vermont, first Tuesday of September; Maine, second Monday of September; Colorado, first Tuesday of October; Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia, second Tuesday of October.

A little son of Charles Hunt at Altona got hold of a revolver on Sunday, 27th ult., and in handling it discharged the contents of one barrel. The ball, a .32 caliber, struck him over the stomach and passing under the ribs emerged on the left side four and three-quarter inches from the point of entrance. His life at first was despaired of, but at this date, 6th, he bids fair to recover.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

• Best priors 6 cents at Gettel's.

One day last week Willie Moss, who runs a bolt machine in the shops, had his clothing caught in the machinery, and in endeavoring to free himself, got the end of one finger pinched off between two cog-wheels.

• H. E. Gettel is the first merchant in Kalk county to reduce the best priors to 6 cents.

On the Fourth a son of Mrs. Hicks while firing crackers had one explode close to his eye, burning his face and injuring the eye so that there is danger of losing the use of that organ.

• Reyer's Clearance Sale, for Hareains, will be found interesting to all. We invite the closest inspection of buyers to our prices.

A juvenile base ball club came down from Kendallville on Saturday last and were beaten by the Garrett boys, but they claim that some of our boys were members of the first nine, consequently it was not fair.

• A large invoice of Zephyr and Shetland shawls, in all colors, sizes and weights, bought as a job, to be sold at 50 cents on the dollar. Reyer, Garrett.

Henry M. Cully living two miles southwest of town was before Esquire Paul for committing an assault upon his wife. After a careful hearing of the case his Honor gave the man a good lecture and dismissed him with a fine of two dollars and costs.

• A fine line of Ladies' Hand-Sewed Button Ties, Newport and Sandal for this warm weather, at C. Reyer's, Garrett.

H. C. Peterson, Esq., of Auburn, went to Chicago on Friday last and the police about the Exposition building thought he looked like a suspicious character. What's the matter P? Have you been brooding over political matters until your mind is unsettled?

• New boots and shoes and dry goods at Gettel's.

The Fourth of July, or rather the 3d, was celebrated in Garrett on Saturday. The weather was fine and everything passed off pleasantly. Although the crowd was not as large as was expected, owing to harvest being on hand, yet all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. Judge Carpenter's speech was very fine, the procession was well gotten up, the games good, and lastly but not least came the fireworks which were said to be splendid. In addition to all these were Menkin's show, a tight-rope performance three or four times during the day, and dancing at the bawery and hall. During the day the band discoursed some of their best music, but the boys had practiced so much the night before that they had exhausted their "wind" and did not give us quite enough of their melody. Altogether we think Garrett may be counted a success on getting up a celebration. If the Fourth don't come on the 3d and harvest is a little later, next time we will show folks what is what.

[From the Garrett Edition.]

Eichelderfer has the biggest flag in town.

Doc Thompson can jump like a kangaroo.

John Uran can run a race without stepping much.

Sam Lemmon and Tom Bicknell managed the fireworks admirably.

One or two of the men in business on Randolph street refused to contribute anything toward getting up our Fourth of July.

Several of our citizens went to Fort Wayne on the 5th to help the people there along with their celebration since they were behindhand.

The Waterloo Base Ball Club failed to come to time on the 3d and consequently the match game did not come off. Wonder what was the matter?

Ike Moore ordered a young engineer, and he arrived on the 1th, weight ten pounds. He ought to be very patriotic, we mean Ike and the boy both.

The population of Garrett is nearly four hundred and steadily increasing. Somebody ought to build more houses or borrow some of Auburn's empty ones.

Ed. Carson and Frank Murphy, boys of sixteen or seventeen, were arrested for disturbing the Union Sunday school on the 20th ult., and each fined ten dollars and costs.

The matter of a cemetery at Garrett is now being agitated. The people do not feel like going away from home to inter the dead. The Land company has neglected the matter.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Sembower lost their little daughter Zoula on the 4th of cholera infantum. She was a very interesting child of two years and nine months. She was buried at Auburn.

A little child of Mrs. Deulon aged about a year and a half died at Mr. Galloway's house on the 7th of cholera infantum. Mrs. B. was here on a visit. The remains were taken home to Defiance for interment.

Late News Brevities.

San Francisco has a population of 223,065, more than 20,000 being Chinese.

An elevator at Omaha, owned by McCormick &amp; Co., containing 50,000 bushels of oats, burned on the night of the 9th.

Stephens &amp; Wilcox, dry-goods merchants of Omaha, have failed, with liabilities of $75,000.

A burglar found $2,000 in currency in the house of John McArlel, near Morris, Ill., and took it away with him.

I. B. George, a leading Baltimore merchant, fell out of a fifth-story window in his store building, and was instantly killed.

It is estimated that the loss to farmers by the breaking of the Sny levee was $200,000 on corn, $200,000 on wheat, and $100,000 on buildings, fences, etc.

A dissipated citizen of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, named Jacob Shotsman, took one of his wife's dresses, twisted it into a rope, and strangled himself with it.

Thirty buildings in Tyrone, Pennsylvania, were destroyed by fire, early yesterday morning. The loss is $125,000, and the insurance $75,000.

Two masked men boarded a train on the Missouri Pacific railroad at Winthrop station, yesterday morning, and robbed the United States express company's safe of $250.

A central Hancock Veteran association was formed at New York city, yesterday, by a large number of ex-officers in the union army. Clubs will be established in every city and town in the north and west.

A man named Turnrose, living in Franconia, Chicago county, Minnesota, whose house was on fire, forgot about his children in his endeavors to subdue the flames, and two little girls were burned to death.

Jerome and Patchell, the high-toned young New Yorkers arrested for having $87,000 worth of stolen securities in their possession, have been examined on a charge of grand larceny, and committed for trial.

General Hancock, who has received nearly five thousand letters and telegrams since his nomination, publishes a card stating that delay in answering them has been unavoidable, and promising to respond to all in due time.

George Price ascended the scaffold at Cincinnati, on the 9th at noon, with great firmness, declined the services of a minister, made a few remarks to the people present, and soon after dangled a corpse at the end of a rope. Price killed his employer, Willie Black, a little more than a year ago.

PUBLIC OPINION.

"I have nothing to say against General Hancock. His personal, official and military record is good."—U. S. GRANT.

The negroes imported by the Republicans into Indiana, in the hope of capturing that state, will make but a shabby offset for the soldiers and independents who are rallying to the support of Hancock.—Washington Post.

GARFIELD's friends say that he went into the Credit Mobilier because he didn't know any better. He must have been stupid to sell his good name for $825 and he learned better and charged DeGeyer $5,000.—Boston Post.

In a letter to Col. John H. Perry, ex-Gov.
Hendricks declares that he has no grievances growing out of the Cincinnati convention; that the delegates who believed he could not carry New York did exactly right in voting against him, and that he has no doubt of the success of the democrats in Indiana in October and November.—Chicago Times.

CONSIDERABLE anxiety is felt by republicans at Washington over the situation in Maine.
The coalition effected in that state between the democrats and greenbackers is complete and far-reaching in its effects, extending over a period of two years and embracing the legislature, the state officers, the senatorship, and the presidency. One year ago the combined vote of the democracy and nationalists was one thousand greater than that of the republicans.—Chicago Times.

GENERAL WEATHERS the Greenback candidate for President, has written his letter of acceptance. He favors the abolition of National Banks of issue; opposes the refunding bills now pending in Congress, claiming that the bonds should be paid with surplus revenues; warns the people against the railroad and banking monopolies; condemns the presumption of the Government in disposing of the public domain, the immigration of Chinese, etc., and promises to take the stump in all parts of the country.—Auxiliary.

Marguerite, I will advance de money to you for I know you are a good, honest woman." Vel, he started Jake in business and Jake is now rich. Jake gum to me and asked me to wote for de old man and I woted."

"Yes, but he didn't get in!" said de pecker.

"Yahl! Yahl! he did get in," sharply replied Chris, "but de politishuns would not have Mister Tilden, for de old man would have took too many honest men and de country would have got too honest. Dot's why dey didn't let Mister Tilden in and Jake says so."

Election Betting in Wall St.

[From the Wall Street Daily News.]

The announcement of the nomination of Gen. Hancock gave very general satisfaction to the Democrats in Wall street. In the stock Exchange bets were offered $100 to $80 that Hancock would be elected, and the brokers were very enthusiastic. Messrs. Bouvier & Wallace offered to wager $1,000 on the election of the democratic nominee. R. S. Elliott offered to wager $500 to $450 on Hancock's election. Mr. Wormser offered to bet $500 the same way. And W. L. Kennedy offered to wager 250 dollars that Hancock will sweep the State. No bets were taken, but J. R. Dillon offered to wager that the stock market would drop from five to ten per cent. the day after Hancock's election. Wm. L. Scott has telegraphed an offer from Erie, Pa., to bet twenty-five thousand dollars on the election of Gen. Hancock.

"We already know the names of a dozen Republicans in this county who openly say they will vote for Hancock. 'The woods is full of 'em.'—LaPorte Argus.

THE CAMPAIGN LIAR. (AT LARGE.)—The Baltimore American prints, and the telegraph circulates among Republican papers, the story that General Hancock proposed that the order for the removal of McClellan be disregarded, and the army marched on to Washington to depose Lincoln and Stanton. It takes less than two hundred words to tell the story, but in that short space the following phrases occur: "If I am not misinformed," "it is alleged," "it is said," "the story goes," "it is believed," "it is stated," and finally "that at the proper time the whole story will be told to an astonished public." This is not an artistic lie. It lacks force and color. It advertises the cowardice of those who manufactured the lie.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—There was an elephant that had been trained to play the piano with its trunk in a show. One day a new piano was bought for it, but no sooner had the elephant touched the keys than it burst into a flood of tears. "What ails you, Kiouini?" asked the keeper. The poor beast could only point to the ivory keys. "Alas! they were made of the tusks of his mother!"

—We have heard of an old lady who was so very particularly neat that she always nicely washed her eggs before she broke them into the pan to fry; and was always particularly careful, moreover, to spit in the pan to see if the fat was just exactly hot enough to fry them.—Newburyport Herald.

—"What should women do?" asks the Cleveland Herald. "Women should do up their housework before 11 o'clock in the forenoon, and not spend all the forenoon chinning politics."—New London Record.

—We must give according to our means and according to our outlays upon ourselves. A twenty-five cent donation by the side of a twenty-five dollar shawl would present a painful contrast.

In the Police Court.

Attorney for the defense of a man charged with having brutally beaten a woman, cross-examining the woman:

Now, then, state to the court what your relations with this defendant have been.

Well, I have supported him for two years.

You have supported him for two years, eh? You positively swear that you have supported him for two years?

Well, not exactly for two years.

Oh, no, not exactly two years, eh? Your honor will observe that the witness contradicts herself.

Very well, now, what did you mean by falsely asserting that you have supported this defendant gentleman two years? Answer that, if you can!

Well, I mean—

Never mind what you meant; don't be daunted to tell me what you meant.

Well, the court, now, if you please, what portion of the two years you did not support this honest fellow, my lord?

The only portion of the time I haven't supported him during the past two years was the various times he was in jail.

Attorney retires.

—There were five of the Hammett brothers, and they were the terror of Cross County, Arkansas. They frequently went on sprees together, and were at all times ready to shoot or stab anybody who resisted them. It was one of an attack by a Hammett, an immediate use of a weapon was the only practicable mode of defense.

Thus three of the brothers were killed in so many years, and now a fourth has just met death in the same manner.

I Will Deliver Goods to my Customers in

H. E. GETTEL, Altona.

It seems strange that cars should ever go astray; but that they do is proved by the fact that there is a lost-car agent whose duty it is to hunt up the stray property of his company. One week finds him hunting cars in Florida, and the next may discover him in Maine. The rule governing the business is; that he must travel by daylight, ride in the rear coach, and keep his eye open. Frequently, while rushing past a side-track full of cars, he discovers one belonging to his own company, and by practice he becomes so sharp-eyed that he can photograph the number of that car on his mind in an instant. Arriving at a telegraph station, he politely requests the officers of the road to send home his company's car. Cars are frequently sent from one end of the continent to the other, and sent back empty. In case a road is short of cars, it sometimes takes liberty to retain and use them; sometimes a dishonest road will steal them outright, and coolly appropriate them to their own use.

Coming Back.

[Circulation Enquirer.]

There were many thousands of Democrats who left the Democratic party during the hours of slavery and the hours of war. Slavery and the war are forever buried, and the Democratic nominees for the Presidency represent Union and liberty. There is now no reason why the Democrats we have indicated should not, like Forney, one of them, return to the ranks of the Democrats. And letters from all parts of the country say they are returning.

A convict was lately discharged from the Connecticut State prison, in 19, who had spent his childhood in an almshouse, his youth in a reformatory school, and his early manhood in several prisons. The authorities will try to get him off on a long whaling voyage under a good captain, in hope that "restraining discipline" and absence from temptation will even now reform him.

Hancock in the Field and the Civil Chair.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

An old friend of the Plain Dealer and of the Democratic party sends us the following:

EDITORS PLAIN DEALER: The Congressional Globe 1st session 38th Congress, part 3, on page 2264 has the following communication which elicited unbounded applause when read in the House of Representatives by the Speaker on the 17th day of May, 1864, and at this time may not be devoid of interest to some of your readers:

SPOTTSYLVANIA COURT HOUSE,
May 14th—12 m.

We have made a "ten strike" today. Hancock went in at day light. He has taken over four thousand prisoners and over twenty-five guns, and is still fighting. Everybody is fighting and has been for eight days.

We shall "burr them" this morn, though it may take a day or two more. They fight like devils.

Our losses are heavy. Cannot say how many. If Grant's forces were here now we could crush them to-day.

Hancock captured General Ned Johnson and two other generals besides lots of lower grades. This was Thursday morn. Bet your pile on it.

Grant is a giant and hero in war; but all our Generals are giants, and our men—the world never had better.

Yours in haste, J. M. G.

war will find no grander figure than Hancock. While the war lasted and the Union was any where confronted sults of the war; and nothing was more revolting to his sense of right and honor than the idea of carrying the ways of the camp and the drum head into the administration of affairs. The fact that General Hancock was governed by this idea in his conduct of

of the Constitution, as well as of the mutual relations of the states and the central government?

—This was to be a high-toned campaign. This, at least, was the attitude of the republican press when it reviewed its own work and beheld the mountain of charges it had piled up against the candidate of its own party. But as the fight goes on, and Credit Mobilier, DeGoyer, payement ammunition is supplied from its own arsenal the republican press has concluded on the whole that it won't have a high-toned campaign, except as to Garfield. He is a pattern of all the virtues, while Hancock has been assailed thus far, first, mildly, as an aristocrat, next as a papal emissary, then as a traitor who would depose Lincoln, a conspirator who would prevent the seating of Hayes, and now as a thief. Note the headlines of a journal that a few weeks ago was pleading that not one disparaging word be said of its candidate: "How General Hancock engaged in a magnificent oil-swindling scheme, robbing in poor soldiers who confided in his honesty, and never accounting for the stock and lands sold."—Chicago Times.

Chairman Jewell announces that the Republican plan of campaign will be to "avoid personal discussion" and make the most of the sectional issues. This is wise policy, because "personal discussions" are the very things that General Garfield can't stand. It is because their candidate's personal record won't stand discussion that the Republicans will hang to it when it comes to that. That is what comes of nominating a man with a bad record.

The chap who grumbles so loudly when his wife asked him to put up the clothesline, is generally the first one to rush upon the stage and be half an hour tying a female medium in a cabinet.—Norwich Star.

The Garfield boom has grown so thin that James A. will have to advertise for it soon.

The Head Light.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

FRIDAY, ..... JULY 30, 1880

The young Democrats of south-east Richland in the neighborhood of Jas. Goetschius, one day last week raised a handsome pole and organized a Hancock and English club. The ball is in motion.

DEACON SMITH remarks: "Every paper and every man that fought and sympathized with the rebellion are now for Hancock and English. They want to be reconciled." An exception might be made, perhaps, of the ex-rebel General Longstreet, now minister to Turkey, and Guerrilla Mosby, now consul at Hong Kong. These gentlemen have been reconciled.

The Chicago Times treats the nomination of General Hancock as the democratic nomination as an "absurdity." The Times is a democratic paper, and stigmatized Horace Greeley's nomination precisely in the same style. Radical Exchange.

In the first place the Chicago Times is not a democratic paper, but right to the contrary. Nor has it affiliated with the Democracy since it was suppressed for "disloyalty" during the war when it surrendered promptly to the Republicans and has remained an advocate of radicalism ever since, though professing to be independent. So much for that lie. When the Times or any other paper "treats the nomination of General Hancock as the democratic nominee as an 'absurdity,'" it simply talks like a natural born Damphool of the jackass order.

The editor of the Chicago Tribune ought to wear a brass collar labelled: "Meanest Liar of the Campaign at Large." If there is anything that can get down on its belly, and crawl to do a low, dirty trick in the way of personal villification, it is old stinking Joe Medill the chief mogul of the Chicago Tribune. The personal treatment of General Hancock by that sheet since his nomination for the Presidency by the Democracy is enough to disgust the meanest republican in the party. If personal abuse of a gentleman were a capital offense in this country, old Medill would be stretched by the neck or stoned to death, and his carcass given to the buzzards.

The coolest thing yet is the claim of the Republicans that they can carry Tennessee. Of course this boast is all for bumbcome, as they have no serious hopes of carrying a southern state. The radicals would be wise in keeping their eyes on the gun at home, as Ohio is doubtful and may be lost to them.

Hands all Around.

[Pittsburgh Post.]

There is not a single sore spot upon which the friends of any candidate who was voted for at the Cincinnati convention can place its finger. Hendricks waves the flag in Indiana; the gallant Bayard speaks for the south and heartily endorses the nomination. Tilden and Seymour speak with authority for the empire state. Randall and Wallace clasp hands over Pennsylvania's favorite son and will insist on making their state, as in the days of Jackson, the Keystone of the Democratic arch. From Maine to the golden strand of the Pacific, there is not a discordant note or a sign of discontent. Local jealousies are hushed and rivalries pushed aside. The hopes of the masses, stimulated by the prospect of success, like long pent up waters, overflow the land and overwhelm all impediments. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly fine.

THE grand army of postmasters, postal route agents, department clerks, revenue agents, and other radical administration employees, who have fattened off the government for the last twenty years, are beginning to look around for jobs preparatory to a discharge after the 4th of March, 1881. After that time these chaps will have to scratch for a living.

CHICAGO TIMES: "It is the demand of The National Republican, a journal of little consequence, published at Washington, that a clean sweep be made of all the democrats in the departments. A similar cry was made before the Ohio election last year, and Secretary Sherman went through the departments with a fine-tooth comb, and nary democrat could he find. They are rather proud that they weren't harboring any such animal in those quarters."

TAKING a little rest from his revenue cutter, John Sherman was interviewed at New York, and though in excellent good humor was not quite confident concerning the election of that other Ohio man, General Garfield. He didn't hesitate to express his belief that the Arthur end of the ticket was a source of weakness and a decided mistake, and that the organization of the national committee is likewise a mistake. Of the men who having been pledged to him in the Chicago convention went to Garfield the secretary said nothing harsh: "Foster was one of them. He had the vice-presidential bee in his bonnet. He had an idea of getting on the ticket with Blaine. When that nomination failed, he thought he would push Garfield up to the point, that he could take his place in the senate."

CHAT, HERE AND ELSEWHERE.

Johnny McMillen arrived at home from Missouri last week.

Godey's Lady's Book for August is at hand. It is an excellent number.

The railroad bridge at this place which had become rather "shaky" has been repaired and made safe for travel.

A little son of Mr. Baxter editor of the Waterloo Press, died on the 10th of typhoid fever.

How doth the busy little fly.

Improve each chance to light

Upon the tip end of your nose

And dance with all his might.

Burglars raided the residences of two Waterloo citizens, Jacob G. Brown and M. M. Mitchel, on the night of the 13th, capturing a hat and watch and $3 in money.

Mrs. Marshal Hale and daughter are visiting friends in Steuben county, they having reached this place from their Kansas home last Friday.—Waterloo Press, 15th.

Joe Leavy night operator at this station, who was temporarily suspended at the time of the late accident, has been recalled to his post, the company exonerating him from all blame in the matter.

Mr. T. Y. Dickinson of Waterloo, an old member of the newspaper profession, and for several years past a mail agent in service on the Lake Shore Road, has been incapacitated for business for nearly a year by mental depression, and was taken to the asylum at Indianapolis last week for treatment.

From the report of the census enumerator of Fairfield township, as published in the Waterloo Press, we gather the following farm statistics: Total amount of wheat raised last year, 84,828 bushels; number of acres, 3,850; average per acre over 22 bushels; total amount of clover seed raised, 2,488; number of farms in the township, 221.

Adam Forepaugh's great show is advertised to exhibit at Kendallville on Friday, 30th inst. Forepaugh's monster menagerie and circus is undoubtedly the largest concern now traveling, embracing almost everything in the world of curiosities and involving an outlay of two millions of dollars. It is no humbug, but an honest, square exhibition, a traveling zoological garden. In addition to the great exhibition of last year Mr. Forepaugh has purchased and imported for the present season's entertainments G. W. Rice's great German Menagerie, making it altogether the mammoth show of the age. It will pay our readers to visit Kendallville on Friday and attend the exhibition, as another opportunity of the kind will not again occur this season.

PRESIDING ELDERS' WIFE.

WARREN, Pa., March 20, 1878.

DR. M. M. FENNER, Fredonia, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—After using your Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic, and also Cough Honey for two years past in our family, I can testify that they will do all that you claim for them. Our family has derived more benefit from their use than from any other medicine we ever tried. We heartily recommend them to all. Yours truly, MRS. REV. R. M. WARREN.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic may well be called "The conquering hero" of the times. It is truly the medical triumph of the age. Whoever has "the blues" should take it, for it regulates and restores the disordered system that gives rise to them. It cures Biliousness and Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Headache, Fever and Ague, Spleen Enlargements, Impaired Nerves and Nervous Debility; Restores flesh and strength when the system is running down or going into decline; cures Female Weakness and Chronic Rheumatism, and relieves Chronic Bronchitis, and all Lung and Throat difficulties. It does these things by striking at the root of disease and removing its cause.

Dr. Fenner's Improved Cough Honey will relieve any cough in one hour. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief cures any pain, as Toothache, Neuralgia, Colic or Headache, in 15 to 20 minutes, and readily relieves Rheumatism, Kidney Complaint, Diarrhea, etc. Try a sample bottle at 10 cents.

Dr. Fenner's St. Vitus Dance Specific. One bottle always cures.

For sale by Ruth & Cloyd, druggists, Coaruna, and by dealers in People's Remedies at Garrett, Indiana.

How an Ohio Democratic Editor Flopped Over to Garfield (in a horn),

And the Radical Boom Created Thereby Suddenly Collapses.

The Fremont (Ohio) Messenger's Conversion to Garfield and Radicalism Explained.

The Republican party are hard up for electioneering material and its papers and speakers eagerly catch up everything that looks like a straw and try to work it up into a boom. A few weeks ago the Fremont (O.) Messenger was made the subject of a huge political joke by the substitution of the name of Garfield for Hancock in an editorial, the result of carelessness of the compositor. Immediately after the paper was issued and circulated the Cincinnati Enquirer sent a dispatch to that paper announcing that the Messenger had deserted Hancock and come out for Garfield. The radical press all over the country caught up the item and sent it broadcast in glaring headlines and double headed editorials. We have before us a late copy of the Messenger, the representative of the Old Guard of Sandusky county, which does not read like a Garfield organ. The following note over the editor's signature, published in the Enquirer, explains itself. Will the editors of the Waterloo Press and Auburn Republican, who were probably honest in giving publicity to the error, have the humanness to make the correction by publishing the denial? We shall see.

FREMONT, Ohio, July 9.

William B. Kridler, Jr., who represents the Enquirer at this point, telegraphed over the country that this paper had flopped to Garfield. The special correspondent of the Cleveland Herald says it was a mistake in proof, as Kridler well knew. The error was caused by the compositor changing copy, and being overlooked in proof. You can say that the Democratic Messenger does not propose to flop, not as long as Hancock is on the ticket, or at any other time. You can say that the error and the use they have made of it will give General Hancock one thousand majority in Sandusky county, a gain of over 300 per cent. over 1879. Our ticket will be elected is what makes them catch at such trivial matters.

JAS. M. OSBORN, Editor Messenger.

The latest out is a contradiction by the radicals that General Hancock is a descendant of John Hancock of revolutionary fame. What next?

THE Republican district convention at Auburn last Friday nominated Judge R. S. Taylor of Fort Wayne for Congress. H. C. Peterson, of Auburn, was nominated for Circuit Prosecutor at a convention held on the same day.

CARL Schurz takes the correct measurement of General Hancock when he lauds him as a brave and honored soldier, and a citizen of irreproachable character. The Chicago Tribune and Cincinnati Gazette will please take notice.

THE Democrats of Ohio assembled in convention at Cleveland Thursday, 22d inst. and nominated a state ticket. The Democracy of the Buckeye state go into the field with a forcible ticket and a ringing platform of principles. There is harmony and enthusiasm all along the lines and every reason to believe that the state will be added to the victorious Democratic column.

GARFIELD has pledged the patronage of Ohio to Conkling, the hero of the Sprague shot-gun episode, in case of election. Likewise the official patronage of Pennsylvania to Don Cameron. These gentlemen are no longer "sick and indisposed" but will now take the stump for Garfield.

According to the Clyde (O.) Enterprise Barney Kline, a wealthy farmer residing in that vicinity, offers to bet $7,000 that Garfield will be the next President. Barney can find a ready investment for his ducats if he means what he says, but we are inclined to think that he is simply playing a game of bluff through the newspapers.

—Flattery has made Hank Bicknell so proud that he now wears his good clothes every day. He needn't be so stuck up if he is good looking.

—Our friend J. W. Wagner had a narrow escape during the late hot spell. He was so overcome with heat as to fall on the floor, and it was several hours before he recovered fully.

—The mill, school house, hotel and King & Keyser buildings, all received a coat of Stewart's patent Asphalt roofing paint last week. It makes them shine and is said to be very durable.

—About once a week the report is started, nobody knows where, that the Baltimore & Ohio fast trains are withdrawn, when the case is quite the contrary. No change has been made since they were first put on, May 23, and if any is made it will be to shorten instead of lengthen the time. PUBLIC OPINION.
The two so-called medical colleges in this city are unmitigated humbugs, and that is all there is about it. They are nothing but a curse to the community and ought to be suppressed.—[Fort Wayne Sentinel.

THERE is no way to end the sectional issue but to smash the Republican party. If it is kept in power it will keep on rattling the bones of the war to the third and fourth generations.

"GAEFIELD rang the bells at Hiram" is the latest Republican war song. It is not said whether he gave them a District of Columbia Ring or a Credit Mobillier Ring.—(New York World.)

THE only defection from the Democrats of any note in Ohio is Albert Allen, ex-Governor Bishop's executive clerk. Leaving aside consideration of the perfidy of a man who has been so well taken care of by the highest Democratic authority in the state, we feel sorry for Mr. Allen; he has shown himself not only a traitor but a fool. — [Steubenville Gazette.]

The Kendallville Standard says:

The Republicans in Allen county are in good spirits, and in first-class fighting trim. They promise to cut down the Boss majority in that county at least one-half, in the coming election. If they keep their word good, the republicans can elect a number of congress in this district.

This is valuable information, and will be especially surprising to the republicans of Allen county. There isn't one of them of any intelligence who expects Hancock and Landers to get less than four thousand majority in this county.—[Fort Wayne Sentinel.

The Cross of the Order Credit Mobilier.

COLONEL James Chapman, of Clyde, Ohio, who commanded a company from Seneca county during the Mexican war and who was also a Colonel in the Union army during the late rebellion has declared for Hancock.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

We have had the pleasure of Colonel Chapman's acquaintance for several years. Heretofore he has been an uncompromising Stalwart Republican, and he is a man of considerable influence in that section.

Prostitution in Chicago.

(Chicago Times.)

In a late issue of this journal appeared an article which gave a number of statistics in regard to the extent of prostitution in the city of Chicago. From these figures it is learned that the sum total of open prostitutes in Chicago is 1,200, and which is at the rate of one to every sixty of the adult male population. Considering this sum total with reference to our entire population, it is at the rate of one of these women to each 420 residents. Estimated with reference to our voting strength, there is one scarlet woman to about every fifty of the others. It is probably not far from the truth to place the ratio of this class to the adult male element at about one to sixty or seventy. As stated in the article referred to, there is, in London, one prostitute to every sixty men; in Paris, one to fifteen; and in large cities, as a rule, one to fifty-two. This would seem to make an excellent showing for Chicago; but unfortunately, a closer analysis of the facts as to the condition of the Garden city will show a quite different state of things, and will warrant conclusions which are not so complimentary to our morality in this direction.

In London, there is no such thing as a system of what may be termed depots of prostitution such as may be found in this country, as it is the case here in Chicago. In the English metropolis, the women who are engaged in this business do not occupy a house in common. Each, as a rule, has her own apartment; and the same is true to a very great extent in Paris. Here we have a mixed form of domicile, in which a portion of this class is gathered in groups in a house owned or rented by some one woman; and another class who are distributed as units in single rooms. Now, anyone who is at all observant must be aware that the majority of women who follow prostitution as a means of livelihood is made of those who are found in apartments by themselves; and, hence, if it be the case that there are 1,200 who are in what are termed bagnios, the entire number of professional prostitutes in the city is more than double this figure—or, some 2,400,—and which will reduce the ratio to at least one of these women to thirty or thirty-five of our adult population of the stronger sex.

But even this total of 2,400 does not by any means include all those women in Chicago who are defiled by connection or contact with the profession of courtesanship. Between the creatures who live in Bagnios and those who, singly or in pairs, occupy apartments and the virtuous element there is a broad territory which is thronged with another class, who are harlots in everything except the name, and the open practice of the profession of courtesanship. This class is made up of women from every grade of society, and who resort to prostitution from the pressure of an almost inconceivable number of motives. There are sewing girls, clerks, servants, and others with whom harlotry is episodic, and who resort to it, in the main, to add to their slender earnings. They live at home, as a rule, or in reputable boarding-houses; but they have an arrangement with some proprietress of an assignment house, and are sent for when they are wanted. Above this class in social standing, but infinitely below it in morals, is another which is made up of women who occupy good positions in society, and who have lovers apart from their own husbands. The motives of this class in resorting to prostitution are, in some cases, the outgrowth of vanity; in others, of a desire to make more money than they receive from their legitimate earnings. It is, for instance, a well-known fact that a woman who has lately been before the public in a most unenviable role, was in the habit, although receiving a comfortable support from her husband, of borrowing considerable sums from her gentleman friends, and of doing it in a way that forced the conclusion that she was willing, not to repay the loan kind, but in such favors as can be accorded by a woman to a man.

In endeavoring to arrive at a conclusion as to the extent of prostitution in Chicago, there should be estimated not merely those abandoned women who occupy bagnios, but all those women who carry on their business in rooms which they occupy; and the classes which have just been detailed. The latter are just as much prostitutes as the woman who have no concealment of their profession; and they are three as degraded and vastly more dangerous and demoralizing to society. Counting all these in, it would be found to be the case that the sum total of the women who are, in whole, or in part, engaged in courtesanship in Chicago, runs up to the thousands. One who is at all familiar with the extent of this ill, in this city, and who knows it in its public and its secret character, would not hesitate to assert that there is one lewd woman to every ten or fifteen of our adult male population. This conclusion is one which will be likely to meet with disbelief by the majority of virtuous people; nevertheless it is a truth which cannot be successfully refuted.

The statistics referred to, and which have been collected by policemen at 13 times, are really of little or no value in a moral sense. Nobody needed to be informed that open prostitution abounds in Chicago to a very great extent. Anyone knows this who walks the streets with open eyes, or who attends any of the matinee performances at the places of amusement. It was not known that there are about 1,200 harlots living in houses devoted to sexual commerce; nor is the exact figure of any consequence. All our people—men, women, and even children,—have known that there is a vast number of harlots on our streets; and to such there is no information in the announcement that this vast number means exactly 1,200. What would have been of consequence to know are the causes which led these women into this life; their nationality; their early life as to religious and other educational privileges, and other things of a like character. There is no good in knowing how many cases of cholera in a city, unless the information is accompanied by some facts which will show how the epidemic may be arrested. What people wish to know in regard to the social evil is, not just how many women are in the business, but how the thing can be remedied.

Some of the data referred to above are already approximately known. It is known, for instance, that not less than 75 per cent. of the professional courtesans in Chicago are furnished by a single nationality; and that among that class who may be termed secret harlots, scarcely 1 per cent. is supplied by the nationality referred to. It is also well known that the causes which lead women to this life of shame are very far from being, in a majority of cases, of a sentimental character—as is so often alleged—but are no higher than any other transaction in which money is given in exchange for some commodity. In nine cases out of ten, or in ninety-nine of each hundred, women go into prostitution for the sole reason that it offers them an opportunity to make more money than they can make at some other business. The vast majority of them are ignorant, and unlettered to an almost inconceivable degree—a fact which goes far to prove that the cause of their downfall has no connection with a refined nature or cultivated, sensitive faculties.

The evil which prostitution inflicts on society is beyond computation; and yet it must be conceded that the burden of the evil does not originate with those who openly practice the profession. The greatest harm comes from those who are secret members of the nefarious guild. When the character of a disease is known, when its symptoms are plainly developed, its treatment is far less difficult than where it is hidden; and it produces all its malignant consequences without its location, or even its nature, being suspected. One woman who is carrying on the trade of a harlot in secret will do more harm to society in one week than an open courtesan will in months. The courtesan who occupies an apparently respectable social position, who has a standing in the church, and among the friends of her acquaintance, is an agency which inflicts an immense evil on all with whom she comes in contact. She is infected with a contagious disease which disseminates its poison in every direction, without there being a suspicion as to its origin. It is for this reason that this journal has so often urged that all prostitutes should be compelled to register, the same as when a horse has the fever, or the malleus, it is required to put out a sign announcing the defect. If every woman in the city who is a prostitute could be branded as such, the number would doubtless be reduced to a small fraction.

A just report of the discussion of the "evil" would properly include a consideration of those sharers in it who are of the male sex. If the statistics are correct, their numbers could be given it would be found to be the same as they are about as numerous as the women who are of the same profession. It would be only justice that they should be compelled to register their names, and to go on record as being guilty of an infamous profession. Were this done, it would have the effect of taking from the background of society a class who have the tendency to offend, and who, in every respect, are disreputable. Those women who occupy respectable social positions and whose names have just been mentioned.

Great Democratic Ratification in New York—25,000 Democrats in Attendance.

NEW YORK, July 28.—Twenty-five thousand and Democratic voters of the city of New York assembled last evening in the Academy of Music, Irving Hall and Nilson Hall and on Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and Irving Place, to ratify the nomination of Winfield Scott Hancock for President and William H. English for Vice President. Every seat in the Academy of Music was occupied and nearly one thousand men sat on its spacious stage. Irving and Nilson Halls were filled to their utmost capacity. Irving place from Fourteenth to Fifteenth street was densely crowded. The Academy of Music was elaborately decorated.

Over the front stage were life size portraits of Hancock and English surmounted by the national colors. Other portraits of the candidates hung on the wall at the back of the stage. Under General Hancock's portrait was the inscription: "Nothing can intimidate me from doing what I believe to be honest and right."—W. S. Hancock. And under the portrait of William H. English was a strip of bunting on which was printed: "A pure, economical, constitutional government that will protect the liberty and prosperity of the people—that the Democracy propose to stand by."—W. H. English.

National flags were suspended from the proscenium and mezzanine boxes, and stripes of red, white and blue bunting hung in festoons from the box tier and from the gallery. The balconies were mounted with flags and Chinese lanterns hung over Fourteenth street and Irving Place.

Soon after eight o'clock Samuel J. Tilden stepped from behind the flies on the right of the stage and escorted by John McKeon and Mayor Cooper walked toward the speaker's stand. He was followed by General Thomas Ewing, of Ohio, Congressman Randolph Tucker, of Virginia, Senator C. W. Jones, of Florida, and the other speakers of the evening. As Mr. Tilden withdrew his arm from that of John McKeon he was seen by the audience. Instantly 6,000 people were on their feet, cheering and shouting, and making other his brain: Nebraska, special of the 34 says there was important developments in the Bender matter to-day. Mrs. Bender made a full confession of all the horrible murders committed on the John Bender farm during 1872 and 1873. She was a widow when she married McGregor alias Bender, who was a widower with four children. They migrated from Missouri to La Bete county, Kansas, where under the leadership of Kate, old John's daughter, the murders and robberies began. Mrs. Bender declares that she had no personal hand in these crimes. The first man killed by them was a man named Brown. Very soon after the first murder two strangers were killed. The woman was asked whether she remembered a man was asked whether she remembered about a whole family being killed and she said: "Yes, I do. There was a man and wife and two little girls who drove up to the house one afternoon and wanted to spend the night. That night while the man and his wife were at supper, they were dropped through the holes. Kate and the old man were below. The man fought pretty hard but they fixed him next day. The two children were buried alive. Old John, Kate and Kate the other. They holed up and Kate and Kate came in and said, finally stopped and Kate came in and said, 'the damned brats are all right now.' Soon after this, according to the woman's story, they became frightened and joined the Cherokee or Choctaw nation. Many further details were obtained from the woman and if these are not the original Benders, the fact can be easily established.

HERE IT IS.

A Noble, Grand Honest Letter Accepting the Nomination for the Presidency.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Following is
Gen. Hancock's letter of acceptance:

Governor's Island, N. Y. City,
July 29th, 1880.

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 13, 1880, apprising me formally of my nomination to the office of president of the United States, by the national democratic convention lately assembled at Cincinnati. I accept the nomination with grateful appreciation of the confidence reposed in me. The principles enunciated by the convention are those I have cherished in the past, and shall endeavor to maintain in the future.

The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war for the Union are inviolable. If called to the presidency I should deem it my duty to resist, with all my power, any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the constitution which, in every article, section and amendment is the supreme law of the land. The constitution forms the basis of the government of the United States. The powers granted by it to the legislative, executive and judicial departments define and limit the authority of the general government. The powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, belong to the states respectively, or to the people. The general and state governments, each acting in its own sphere without the lawful jurisdiction of each other, constitute the union. This union, comprising a general government, with general powers, for purposes local to states, is a political, the foundations of which were laid in the profoundest wisdom. This is the union our fathers made, and which has been so respected abroad and so beneficent at home. Tried by blood and fire, it stands to-day a model form of free popular government—a political system which, rightly administered, has been and will continue to be the admiration of the world. May we not say, nearly in the words of Washington, that the unity of the government which constitutes us one people is justly dear to us? It is the main pillar and an edifice of our real independence; the support of our peace and safety, and the prosperity of that liberty we so highly prize and intend, at every hazard, to preserve. But no form of government, however sound, will protect the rights of the people unless their administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. When fraud, violence or incompetence controls the noblest constitution, the wisest laws are useless. The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen. It is only by a full vote, a free ballot and a fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our government. Take this foundation away and the whole structure falls.

Public office is a trust, not a bounty bestowed upon the holder. No incompetent or dishonest persons should ever be entrusted with it, or if appointed they should promptly be ejected. Our material interests, varied and progressive, demand our constant and united efforts to preserve them.

A zealous and scrupulous care of the public credit, together with a wise and economical management of our government expenditures, should be maintained in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their rights to the fruits of their industry. The time has come for us to enjoy the substantial benefits of reconstruction as one people. We have common interests. Let us encourage harmony and a generous rivalry among our own industries, which will revive our languishing merchant marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, and assist our merchants, manufacturers and producers to develop our vast natural resources and increase the prosperity of our people.

If elected, I shall, with the Divine favor, labor with what ability I possess, to discharge my duties, with fidelity, according to my convictions, and shall take care to protect and defend the union, and to see that the laws are faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country alike. I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that, to administer rightly the functions of the government, is to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen. I am, very respectfully, yours, (Signed) W. S. HANCOCK.

To the Hon. Jas. W. Stephenson, president of the convention; the Hon. Joseph P. Stockton, chairman, and others of the committee of the national democratic convention.

—For our part we do not care to see a bull fight. There is a great deal more solid and edifying amusement to be found in noting the effect of General Hancock's letter on stalwart Republican editors.—M. Y. Star.

ruined by whiskey. Theophilus Jones married the daughter of his employer, at Clinton, Ohio twenty years ago. He was then an ambitious, spirited, and moral young man. For awhile he realized expectation by prospering in business and becoming a representative man in the place; but latterly he lapsed into drunkenness, robbed his father-in-law, and abused his wife. She obtained a divorce and lived by herself with her children, while he became an outcast. One day he presented himself at her house, ragged and hungry, and begged to be taken in. She refused to see him, and sent out her son to tell him that he must go away or she would set a dog on him. The boy delivered the message, and returned to the dinner table, where the family was eating a hearty meal. Jones sat down on the porch and wrote the following to his wife: "I have refrained from committing suicide as long as I could. I have done everything to obtain employment, but I have failed. I have no money, and am in a starving condition. I have now made up my mind to die. When this reaches you I will be in another world. Take care of my dear children. God bless you. Try and teach them to forget any faults I had, and when I am gone try and forgive all the wrongs I have done you. May God bless you." Then he fired a bullet through his heart.

THE GREAT INTER-OCEAN!

Largest Show Ever Organized.

It may be interesting for our readers to know that one of the largest and best shows ever pitched tents in the West, is to be exhibited in Butler, on Monday, Aug. 16th, and in Kendallville, on Thursday, Aug. 19th.

As this new enterprise has the finest electric lights in the world by which to lighten up all its colossal pavilions, this feature alone will be worth the whole price of admission to see. The Springfield, Illinois, Monitor, after seeing the Inter-Ocean, speaks of it as follows:

WHAT IT WAS WHEN THE BILL BOARDS HAD DONE DUTY, AND THE ADVERTISED SHOW CAME TO BE SEEN—THE GREAT INTER-OCEAN SHOW FILLED THE BILL, AND DREW THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE—THREE IMMENSELY CROWDED PERFORMANCES, AND A GRAND SUCCESS.

One of the largest crowds that ever attended a circus in Springfield witnessed the performances given by the Great Inter Ocean Circus and Menagerie on yesterday morning, afternoon and evening.

The street display made by this monster aggregation was the finest it has ever been our pleasure to witness, and the line of march was thronged by thousands of people eager to witness the magnificent procession. Especial mention is due to the fine condition of the stock and the brightness of the paraphernalia used, including cages, tableaux, cars, etc.; also to the quality of the music dispensed by the three large bands in the procession.

The tents were packed to their utmost capacity at each performance, and at night hundreds of people were unable to gain admittance although the seating capacity of the canvass is over 8,000.

The menagerie is unusually fine, and contains many rare zoological specimens, including the War Elephants, "Empress," the oldest and the largest in the world, two beautiful sea lions, tigers, two cages of lions, sacred cows, etc. In fact it is one of the finest collections in zoology we ever saw.

In regard to the ring performance we can only say it must be seen to be appreciated. We do not hesitate to pronounce it vastly superior to any ever witnessed in the city. Many new and excellent features were introduced, which relieved the usual monotony of a circus performance and certainly gave the best of satisfaction.

Among the many attractions the bare-back riding of Miss Mollie Brown deserves especial praise, and she is entitled, without doubt, to the leading place in her profession. She completely captivated her audience by the graceful ease with which she did some of the most thrilling acts of equestrianism we ever saw attempted; while the world-renowned Siegrist children carried the house by storm by their phenomenal gymnastic performances.

Romeo Sebastian is the most graceful rider we have ever seen, and his execution of the different equestrian feats allotted to him were all heartily applauded.

Want of space will not permit of any extended notice of the different acts given. Suffice it to say that nothing superior was ever seen here. We must say one word, however, concerning Mr. Arthur Johnson, the German dialect clown. His sayings were not only witty, but they were new, and kept the audience in one continuous uproar.

Everything about this show seems to be conducted in the very best manner, the concert and side exhibitions being way above the average. But the best test of the merit of the performance was to hear the remarks of the people as they passed out of the tent at the conclusion of the show.

This company are deserving of the large patronage they receive. They do everything they advertise, fulfill all their contracts, and deal squarely with all their patrons.

The electric light was used to illuminate the different tents, and it worked admirably and to the satisfaction of all.

We wish the managers every success in their great enterprise.

—Over a month of the Presidential campaign has now passed, and it has not yet been charged that the Republican candidate ever stole a horse or ever robbed a hen-roost.

Are Democratic editors doing their full duty? —Sunjay Voice.

Garfield never stole a horse nor is it intimated that he robbed a hen-roost, but there was a "big hen on" when he got that $3,000 DeGoyler fee! —Plain Dealer.

—Mr. Garfield got $5,000 from the DeGoyler ring. The fact is not denied. He says it was for services. Very well; now what were these services? Mr. Garfield has not thrown much light on that point, and it is an important one. It would be a great deal of satisfaction to the public if some one of Mr. Garfield's organs would stop howling about rebels long enough to answer this very important question: what did Mr. Garfield do to earn that $5,000 he got from the DeGoyler ring.

SUNDAY.....AUG. 15, 1880.

MANY Democratic stumpers have the impudence to tell their audiences that half the soldiers that fought in the Union armies were Democrats—Democrats who have stuck to their party and vote with it yet. While such a claim is absurdly and ludicrously false, yet it is calculated to deceive the electors of the States passed laws allowing their soldiers in the field to vote and send home the ballots and returns, and have them counted in the State elections. The soldiers that considered themselves Democrats naturally voted that ticket. Each party sent canvassers to the camps to collect and return the votes. (Here follows a statement of the votes polled by the soldiers in the field at the various elections during the war.—ED. HEAD LIGHT.) The total vote for the Republican candidates, according to the above figures, was 226,437, and 41,800 for the Democratic candidates. This is the best proof that can be furnished of the politics of the soldiers in the Union armies.—(Chicago Tribune.)

The above statement is no proof whatever of such a difference in political opinion of soldiers engaged in the Union armies, when we consider the means employed to secure the representation. Does any person acquainted with the facts entertain for a moment the idea that there were 184,634 more Republicans in the army than Democrats which, according to the Tribune's method of counting noses, is the result? The "machine" was at work in the army and Republican returning boards fixed the soldier vote to suit themselves, and the count was all on one side, and the claim that the Republican party had a great preponderance of soldiers in the field who voted with them from choice, is simply nonsense. It is a well known fact, and there are thousands of democratic veterans to bear testimony, that they were in a measure debarred from the privilege of voting their political sentiments. The "pressure" was too great. The Democratic side of the house was not "popular," and moreover in many instances there was but one ticket in the canvass, and that was Republican. They were given to understand that there was "but one side to the question" and that it was "disloyal" to vote other than the Republican ticket. Only one out of every ten Democratic votes were recorded or returned to the proper authorities for counting the vote. Is it any wonder therefore that the radical Tribune editor is enabled to show 184,634 more Republican than Democratic votes in the Union armies? It was the same way with the circulation of northern Democratic newspapers within the lines. None bearing that stamp were permitted to find their way into the hands of the soldier; in the absence of Democratic literature he was taught to regard such journals as giving aid and comfort to the rebels, and as abusing the soldier. Under this system of proscription they were deceived and misled. But the Democratic soldier of the war for the Union, and their name is legion, is a Democrat yet, and he will renew his allegiance to the grand old party this fall, by voting for his eminent commander General Hancock.

The Republicans still cling to the bloody shirt and wave it as an argument in this campaign. The speakers and press of that party would have the people believe that Republicans fought the battles of the rebellion, saved the Union, while Democrats remained idle spectators of the strife. The Republican party assumes to be the guardian of the American people and all should bow in submission to its mandates.

Mr. Colerick will visit a portion of the district in company with his opponent, Judge Taylor, they having mutually agreed upon a joint discussion.

SUNDAY.....AUG. 15, 1880.

THE letter of General Hancock accepting the nomination of the Presidency, in response to the formal notification of the national committee, has been made public and will be found on page 10 of this paper.

The letter is brief but it contains a volume of wisdom in a few well pointed paragraphs.

That it is a clear, candid and able paper, in which the statesmanship of its author is made manifest, none, not even his opponents, will deny.

He says the amendments to the constitution are inviolable, and if elected he pledges himself to resist any attempt to overthrow the constitution, the supreme law of the land.

Maintains that the civil government is paramount to the military and points to the danger of bayonet interference at elections.

Discourteous incompetency in public office and recommends prompt dismissal of untrustworthy officials.

Recommends an economical management of governmental expenditures and encourages home industry as a tendency to increase the prosperity of the people.

General Hancock has clearly defined his policy and duty in a few words, and no grander thoughts ever emanated from an American statesman.

Taking the constitution for his guide when he drew his sword to maintain on the field of battle, he will administer the affairs of this government with equality and exact justice to all.

American beef and live stock have found their way into the markets of Switzerland.

The movements of the filibusters styled the "Army of Occupation," in Texas, are being closely watched by General Ord.

The first stone in the work of completing the shaft of the Washington national monument was laid Saturday.

It is estimated that it will take three years to complete the entire compilation of the census.

Six deaths from the effects of heat were reported in New York Tuesday and two prostrations.

The supposed Benders had a preliminary examination at Oswego, Kansas, on the 10th, and were discharged.

Dr. Tanner ate and drank quite freely during Tuesday. His weight at night was one hundred and forty pounds.

Armstrong Chumley, the Cincinnati policeman shot by Thomas E. Snellbaker last Saturday night, died Tuesday forenoon from his wounds.

The Guy Hospital (London) nurse who caused the death of a patient by cruel treatment has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment without hard labor.

A fire at Bettsville, Seneca county, Ohio, Saturday morning last destroyed nine business houses and one dwelling. Loss about $20,000.

A Cincinnati Gazette's Fort Wayne, Ind., special says Alexander Rush, a prominent farmer of Steuben county, last night fatally shot his wife. Cause, jealousy.

At New Albany, on the morning of the 10, Daniel McKelvy, aged thirty-five years, was sent to the bank in that city by M. Gillee, a cattle dealer, with about $2,000. He did not deposit the money and is still missing.

John Bail, who murdered his wife in May, 1879, was taken from Athens, Alabama, on the night of the 7th by a mob of horsemen and hanged. Four previous attempts had been made to mob him. He had been twice sentenced to death and was each time granted a new trial.

The body of Patrick Corcoran, aged twenty-four years, was found Monday morning last on the third pier of the Tenth street bridge, Pittsburgh, with the skull fractured and several other wounds on the head, evidently delivered with a blunt instrument. It is supposed he was murdered in a house near by and carried to this point. The detectives have not as yet obtained any clue to the murderers.

TANNER has completed his fast and is now filling up with provender.

ALL hail Alabama. That state has recorded her vote for Hancock and English.

JOHN KELLY offers to wager $1,000 that Hancock and English will carry New York by 50,000 majority.

A colored Democratic speaker was mobbed by Republicans a few days ago in the southern part of the state while attempting to address a colored Democratic meeting.

JAY Gould says the 'jig is up,' Hancock will be elected, and he don't propose to risk any money on a hopeless cause. The railway king is a level-headed cuss in politics as well as in finance.

W. G. COLERICK, our next congressman, is making a thorough canvass of the district. He is well received at every point. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted him at Kendallville on the evening of the 6th inst.

HON. S. S. SHUTT, of this county, ex-representative to the legislature, was nominated for Joint Representative at the Democratic convention held at Kendallville on the 6th. Mr. Shutt has proven himself to be a wise and able legislator and the convention could have made no better selection. The nomination will add strength to the ticket and Mr. Shutt's election is assured by a handsome majority.

—Lathrop J. Miller is 'on his taps' again after a severe wrestle with old billions.

—It takes four days for the Cleveland morning Plain Dealer to reach this postoffice, and the distance is about 215 miles. But then the Plain Dealer is a Democratic paper, which accounts for its tardiness in a political campaign at a time when the radicals overhaul the mail bags.

—The change in policy on the Baltimore and Ohio road has been attended by results which cannot but tend to still greater progression. The inauguration of the fast train contest was a grand move, as it proved the old road the model fast line of the country. Rural lines attempted for a time to compete but some how or other, one after another fell back in their old ruts and the Baltimore and Ohio still flies the proud banner, "Seven Hours Ahead." The increase of its passenger traffic has been great, it not being by any means an uncommon thing to run its regular train in two sections. Extra sleepers have been added, and, where once dining halls were sent of consumers and provender alike, there are now numerous partakers, and a plenty at once delicious and soul satisfying. The improvement in the eating stations has been no more marked than in all branches of passenger accommodation. Very many new coaches have been added to the equipment, bright and luxuriously appointed vehicles of railway traveling, the satisfaction they produce is worth millions to the company. Ten upon ten of new steel rail has been laid and this good work still goes bravely on though it take all summer and into the fall. There is no room for improvement in the motive power of the road, the Baltimore and Ohio, having for years been noted for its build and running the finest locomotives in the world. Not long since an engine on the Chicago Division ran 98 miles in 88 minutes and this too without any special preparation. The monster new transfer boat taking the New York trains of the Baltimore and Ohio across the bay at Baltimore has proved a most unequivocal success, doing away as it does with the old transfer through the streets, or by tunnel under the city.

WEDNESDAY..... AUG. 15, 1880.

There was a conference of the Republican bosses in New York last week. The object of the meeting was for the purpose of devising means to raise a campaign fund. The party haven't the old Grant ring to draw upon now and consequently it is hard up for funds.

THE Republican circus started on a tour a few days since to exhibit Garfield and pulled up at the Fifth Avenue conference of the bosses. As a last resort when threatened with defeat the Presidential candidate starts on a junketing tour in the hope of rallying the broken and demoralized columns. Garfield should have taken warning by the fate of other presidential aspirants, who have been stranded while drifting on that dark and dangerous current.

THE Republican campaign committee has been appealed to for more aid in Maine. Congressman Frye writes that the result is in great doubt and the need of more money and more speakers is urgent. The Democratic organization is represented to be very thorough and that they are making the greatest exertions to carry the state. It is difficult to arouse the enthusiasm of the Republicans for Garfield as they still feel sore because Blaine was not nominated and they look upon the fight for Garfield as a hopeless one. The committee is urgently asked to send all the aid it can to Maine.

THE demand upon the Republican office-holder is "give or git."

GREENBACK LABOR CONVENTION.—A mass convention of the Greenback Labor Party of DeKalb county will assemble at the Court House in Auburn, on Saturday, August 14th, 1880, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of nominating a county ticket to be voted for at the election in October next.

By order of Central Committee.

A. BYRON DAREY, Chairman.
There will also be held on the same day and at the same place conventions for the purpose of nominating a candidate for State Senator for the counties of DeKalb and Steuben.

Also a candidate for Prosecutor for the 35th Judicial Circuit.

An able speaker is expected to be present who will address the convention.

—Get your shotguns in order. The lighting-rod fiend is again in the land.

—The campaign will "open" red-hot on the 14th in this state.

—Forepaugh's show will exhibit at Auburn to-day.

—Mrs. McKage, an aged lady and an old resident of the county, died at her home near Green's Corners last week.

—The daily arrivals at this market of the new wheat crop is evidence that fall business in all branches of trade will soon open.

—The political outlook in this county was never more encouraging for the Democracy. Put old DeKalb down for 300 majority.

—The Ninth Annual Fair of the North-Eastern Agricultural Society promises to be one of more than ordinary attraction. $5,000 in premiums are offered and many new features will be presented. The Fair will be held at Waterloo on the 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th of October next.

—Messrs. J. J. Van Auker, John W. Baxter, D. D. Moody and Adam Foltz, Democratic candidates, and Theo. Reed, ex-editor and proprietor of the Auburn Courier, stopped over at Corunna for refreshments Wednesday evening on their return home from Garrett where they had been participating at a Democratic pole-raising. They are a good looking party to say the least.

LANDERS will proceed to demolish the dandy candidate of the Republican party for Governor, in a joint discussion as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

HENRY Hostetter of Ligonier, a Justice of the Peace and a local politician, received the Republican nomination for State Senator at Kendallville on Tuesday last.

THE Republican Joint convention on Tuesday nominated Capt. Hiram Iddings as their candidate for Joint Representative. Mr. Iddings lately is a farmer by occupation, having formerly filled the office of Government Pension Agent for this district, and resides on his farm near Kendallville. He acquired the title of "Captain" by appointment of provost marshal during the late war under Governor Morton. Personally Mr. Iddings is a large hearted, social gentleman, and immensely popular with "the boys," but with such an opponent as Sam Shutt he will have to go to the wall and share the fate of his political brethren everywhere.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

A sister of Dr. F. Snider from New York state is visiting with the Doctor and his family.

The Courier contains the sad announcement of the death of Mrs. S. W. Spratt at the family residence in Auburn on Thursday. The demise of this estimable lady was not unexpected as a dangerous and protracted illness had banished all hopes of her recovery. We tender our sympathy to the bereaved family.

A proposition to ratify the Democratic nomination for Clerk of Noble county by the Republican convention and have but one candidate for that office in the field, was connected by a squad of attorneys and soreheads. The editor of the Standard did not relish the idea of abandoning the party organization and determined to bust the thing. Myers went into the convention with his war paint on and his tomahawk freshly ground and killed the amalgamation cat on the spot. Sam Alvord is able to walk away with that prize on a square deal.

For the last twenty years the Republican organ has regularly appeared upon the carpet at each successive political campaign with charges of official extravagance and a "lavish expenditure" of the county funds under Democratic administrations. And now comes the organ with the same old tune set to new music. The Democratic candidate for Commissioner in the south-west district is duly arraigned before the bar of public opinion charged with the responsibility of having involved the county in a debt of $64,595.68, which it claims was the total debt at the close of the year, June 1, 1880.

And there is no "bill of particulars" accompanying the indictment, but simply a sweeping allegation without any proofs of a "lavish expenditure." According to the logic of the Press the various public improvements in the county have been a useless outlay of money and there is no reason why the county should not be out of debt and a large balance in the treasury. These Republicans are an economical set of fellows. They never squander the public money, oh no!

Let us overhaul the books and see where the Democrats have squandered the funds. We join with the Press and cordially agree that "a free and open discussion of this matter will add to the information as well as satisfaction of the public generally."

[From the Garrett Edition.]

Mr. Thos. Coyle the efficient agent of the B. & O. at this place has gone to Chicago Junction to act in the same capacity there.

Messrs. McNechy, of Columbia City, J. Q. Stratton, of Fort Wayne and D. D. Moody, of Auburn Democratic candidate for Representative, entertained the citizens of Garrett on the political topics of the day on Saturday evening, August 7th. There was a large number in attendance and the speakers were well received.

The first attempt to raise the Democratic pole last Saturday was a failure, owing to its extreme length and bulk. By a little skillful engineering the task was accomplished at a second trial. A friend at our elbow very truthfully remarks that there are no votes on the last 30 or 60 feet of a pole.

SUNDAY.....AUG. 15, 1880.

A gentleman who has been in different parts of several Northern states in the last two weeks remarked to a Cleveland Plain Dealer correspondent not long ago, that every where he had been the Republicans seem to be possessed with the idea they were already defeated and that it will be a hopeless battle they will have to fight from now until the day of election. "It is strange," remarked the gentleman, "how this impression manifests itself in every political campaign in one or the other of the political parties. Whatever mental process it is the result of, whether reason or intuition, I do not know but just as in an army a panicky feeling often prevails among the men without any assignable reason, so it seems to be in this political campaign. It is 'in the air,' as is sometimes said, that the Republicans are going to be beaten this fall and this feeling among the rank and file of the party is noticeable everywhere."

"How do the Democrats feel?"

"Every where confident. In 1876 and 1872 it was just the other way. In those years I was in almost every state and the feeling of despondency prevailed among the Democrats just as it does now on the other side. 'We don't give up the fight and we hope we'll succeed,' was the common expression, 'but I am afraid we won't.' It is so with the Republicans now. They are fighting hard but it is with the hope and not the expectation of victory."

TRIENNIAL CONCLAVE KNIGHT TEMPLARS.—CHICAGO, AUG. 15TH, 16TH, 17TH AND 18TH INCLUSIVE—EXCURSION OVER BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD.

The greatest assemblage of Knight Templars ever known, will be in Chicago on this occasion. 55,000 Knights, with 15,000 ladies, representing 325 encampments, will attend, and fully 150,000 strangers will be present.

The festivities and exercises will continue for four days, and be on a grand and imposing scale, worthy of the great brotherhood. On Tuesday, August 17th, at 10 o'clock a. m., will occur the Grand Parade, which for brilliancy of uniform, music, precision of drill, etc., will surpass anything ever before seen on this continent. On Wednesday, Aug. 18th, the Grand Competitive Drill will take place, and on Thursday, August 19th, a variety of entertainments have been devised for the pleasure and amusement of those who remain in the city.

On the above dates the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will sell Cheap Excursion Tickets, good on all regular trains.

The fast trains running through without change of cars, makes it the most desirable of all routes. All passengers are landed at Exposition Building, and within a few minutes walk of the principal hotels.

Purchase your tickets via B. & O., and thereby save time and money. Tickets for sale by all agents at the very lowest rates.

PUBLIC OPINION.

GENERAL Hancock is said to be the handsomest officer in the army; he has a florid complexion, gray eyes, light hair, fine features, a superb figure, carrying weight, and a noble bearing. His manners are very polished. Mrs. Hancock's manners, also, are of the captivating sort; her acquaintance is very extensive, and so is her popularity. She has still much beauty and great charm. — [Tribune and Farmer.

Mr. John A. Joyce, who was a prominent member of the St. Louis whisky ring and who very narrowly escaped the penitentiary through the vicarious sacrifice of McDonald is to the front again and writing campaign songs for Garfield; and "addition, division and silence," Kemble, who was sent to the Pennsylvania penitentiary for bribery but was pardoned out by a Republican governor because he gave ten thousand dollars to the campaign fund is on the stump for Garfield and howling about the "solid South." This is the sweet old crowd into whose hands Garfield has surrendered himself, and who will control the government if elected. — [Plain Dealer.

The fact that Hayes has rewarded the presidential thieves and plotters, of high and low degree, who placed him in office, is as familiar to people as household words. They know that the Welles, the Andersons, the Kenners, the Casanaves and nearly all the other members of the unholy alliance have been rewarded by Hayes with fat offices as a return for their infamy. That these charges are true redounds to the lasting disgrace of Hayes. They have been iterated and reiterated by the Democratic press for the last three years until the whole world knows of the rottenness of the administration. The New York speakers do not mention these things because the Great Fraud is too well known too need comment from them. The Democratic party is not fighting Hayes in this canvass. His course is nearly run. Let him sink into the oblivion that awaits him. — [Rome Sentinel.

and up and never growled if his luck was hard, and on every card he'd stack the limits up in blue. Take it altogether, his luck was hard—sometimes the hardest, I think, I ever saw. I've known him to lose at a single deal seven double shots.

"Business for me, of course; but somehow it almost seemed too bad. I couldn't say a word, though, and yet I liked the boy. He had lots of the filth. I think from the day he began he must have dropped a cool $100,000 on the game, and he never growled.

"We both quit gambling the same night; he, poor lad, for sufficient reasons, and I, because I loathed the game. It was in this wise:

"His coin gave out in a deal or two, and he put up a diamond ring just to see his ill luck out, you know.. The chips soon went. He had a pin, a flaming stone in massive metal. He passed that in without a word and drew $500 cold." So help me God! I wished him luck as heartily as any prayer there; but no, his last stack went my way on a losing ace. He drew $300 more, I think on his watch and chain, and tried his line of bets again, but his luck was gone. My God! I'll never forget the pale, haggard look that crossed his face, but he was game. He never uttered a word, and kept his chair like a pillar of stone. For a moment he seemed dazed at his reverses, but suddenly his eye caught the thin, worn circlet of dull gold on his little finger. He looked at it a little while, and a dark wave of hot, crimson blood passed over his face, for this circlet seemed to cling even faster than the flashing gem he had passed in before. He at last stripped it off his finger and handed it to me. It came reluctantly, this worn, old ring. "What can I have on this?" he asked. "I don't know what it's value is, but I'll redeem it first of all." It might have cost five dollars when new, but it was worthless then. Still I passed out a fifty stack in return, just to let him try again. He planked it down in the pot, and then low upon the table he laid his face upon his folded arms. Well, for a wonder, his luck changed and he won three times. He took no notice of me as I told him when the limit barred, and so we played two fifties on each card. Would you believe it? In the deal the pot won out and never lost! And still he lay with his face hid in his arms. The deal was out and I shook him up, but not a muscle moved, and, raising his face, I started back in horror at the glassy expression of his eyes, for the boy was dead!

I was wondering to myself where it was that the light went, but I thought I would wait and see how long it would be before he would lift his head and his face from our sight, what was of a latter life, regrets for a life he had thrown away with levity, and looking of his eyes. He came. Who can tell? We can guess at them, but may never feel. His face showed years of hell-endured and long years, but it was not until the coroner's jury sat that I learned all. Before them was developed the fact that the ring which had changed his life, was in fact his existence, was one which he had thrown out with levity. I never shall forget that day!

Mr. Bell, the inventor of the telephone, died at the age of thirty-two years. It is said that Mr. Bell created a large amount of money for his two children. He was in the company as an inventor, and he has a salary of $5,000 a year as an electrician. His father-in-law, Mr. Hubbard, of Boston, sold his property and embarked money in the telephone, and deserves the chief credit as the business spirit of the invention. He has made a million or two out of it, and is now in London where a number of prominent English associates will join in company for Egypt, India, China and Japan.

General Weaver no longer looms up. He is still flying his greenback shuttle through the states, although he is much warped. He is a good man.

Still Coming.

Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Republican party is continually glorying itself on account of its record and the great things it has done through its eminent members. It may be allowed that the roll of the Republican party does contain the names of some illustrious men and that it through them did do deeds which do it and them honor. But then it must be borne in mind that the men who made the Republican party and who achieved for it all its record that is honorable, were either forced out of the party by the adventurers who obtained control of it, or else abandoned it because no longer willing to act with an organization that had become hopelessly venal and corrupt. The great men of the Republican party, most of them died outside of its pale, and of those still living who were with it in its days of power and pride, three fourths are now Democrats. Since the nomination of Hancock, the departures have become more than ever numerous, and there will soon be nothing left of the party, but the corrupt and worthless element, which of late years has controlled it.

Among the prominent Republicans who decline to support General Garfield, and are working to secure the election of General Hancock, may be mentioned the following:

Leonard W. Jerome, Horatio King, General Patrick Jones and General Butterfield, all of New York City.

Hon. Eli Thayer and Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts.

Ex-Governor Andrew G. Curtin, of Pennsylvania.

W. B. Dinwiddie, President Adams Express Company.

John Hacy, Superintendent Adams Express Company.

Hon. John W. Forney, the editor of the Progress.

Edward Butler, editor of the New Haven Palladium, a recent staunch Republican organ.

Hinton Rowan Helper, author of "The Impending Crisis."

Hon. S. W. Moulton, recently a Republican member of Congress from Illinois.

Judge Messer, County Judge, Shelbyville.

Mr. A. Read, chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Sullivan county, New York.

John George R. Woodling of St. Louis is a member of the Republican and Executive of Congress. He will be considered as the Republican candidate for Governor of Missouri. He will carry the State for the Republican.

Thomas J. A. Wright, a member of the House of Representatives of Congress. He will carry the State for the Republican.

John T. Long, St. Louis, one of the most prominent Grant men of the West.

W. A. Guthrie, Fayette, North Carolina, a prominent gentleman in state politics.

E. D. Seldomridge of Terre Haute, Indiana. Mr. Seldomridge is attorney for the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad, and has been in the legislature several times as a Republican.

A. B. Felsenthal of Terre Haute, Indiana, who was secretary of the Republican county committee in 1876.

This is only the partial list. It only includes well known and prominent Republicans. Everywhere the same change is going on, and in every community any Democrat can add to the list from his own circle of acquaintances. With such a positive drift from the Republican to the Democratic party and none in the other direction, who can doubt that the Democratic nominee will be triumphantly elected?

—An old Lake county Democrat was in the city yesterday, and said:

"Personally I like Garfield. The meanest thing he ever done me, however, was to steal my vote in 1876." "How was that?" "Why I voted for Tilden and he was elected, but Garfield got on to the Electoral Commission and log rolled Hayes into Tilden's place. That's the way he stole my vote."

GRANDPA'S BARN.

On a jolly old place is grandpa's barn,
Where the doors stand open throughout the day
And the roosting doves fly in and out
And the air is sweet with the fragrant hay;

Where the grain lies over the slippery floor
And the hens are busy looking around
And the swallows flutter, now here, now there,
And the breeze blows through with a merry sound.

The swallows twitter and chirp all day,
With fluttering wings, in the old brown eaves,
And the robins sing in the trees which lean
To brush the roof with their rustling leaves.

Under the glad vacation time,
When grandpa's barn will echo the shout
Of merry children who romp and play
In the new-bath freedom of school let-out:

How strong of doves from their cozy nests,
How proud, how eager the life so brief
Full the frightened hens, with a cackle shrill,
From their hidden treasures are fain to fly.

So, the dear old barn, so cool so wide
Its doors will open again ere long
To the summer sunshine, the new mown hay
And the merry ring of the vacation song.

For grandpa's barn is the jolliest place
For frolic and fun on a summer's day;
And when old time, as the years slip by,
Its memory never can steal away.

He now hears the letters "Eureka Range No. 1," and, in revenge, has gone to St. Louis to swell the census.

Greenback County Convention.

Waterloo Press.

Immediately after the adjournment of the greenback district conventions, a county convention of the party was called to order in the court house. E. R. Shoemaker declined to serve as chairman, when Harmon Lydecker was elected, and J. S. Holly chosen secretary. The attendance was in marked contrast with the one held by the same party two years ago. Then their assembly was nearly as large as that of either of the old parties; this year, in a mass convention where all greenbackers voted, the highest ballot recorded but 37 votes.

Dr. Winslow offered a series of resolutions readily prepared, which he thought would answer the purpose and save time; but the argus-eyed guardians of the country's liberties who filled the secretary's chair would not have it so. After considerable sparring a committee composed of Messrs. E. R. Shoemaker, J. S. Holly, A. D. Goetschius, A. B. Darby, Ward Kennedy, C. F. Roberts and Shaffer was appointed to report a platform to the convention. An adjournment to one o'clock was then carried.

Upon re-assembling, the report of the committee on resolutions was read, and another lengthy discussion took place. Dr. Winslow, who had been ignored in the formation of the committee, insisted upon quoting correctly John Sherman, and also restoring the word "greenback," in speaking of currency. After some effort, the Doctor triumphed, and the resolutions as amended were adopted.

THE PLATFORM.

1. The National Greenback Labor party of Indiana, in convention assembled, reassert and reaffirm the unalterable purposes which first brought it into being, viz: That every United States bond, which now takes the place of the currency of the day of the rebellion, shall, as soon as possible, be refunded into greenback currency, full legal tender, and the whole public debt should be words in 1868. "The whole public debt should be made to assume such form as to be a part of the circulating capital of the country."

2. The policies opposed to us by the two old parties, jointly advocated, are the perpetuation of the national debt, as the basis for the permanent national banking system, with class legislation and class exemption from burdens; all of which we are determined to resist with the same spirit which swept the old slave and secession laws from the statute books.

3. The right of suffrage inheres to the citizen, irrespective of color or race, and should not be denied or abridged, except for crime.

4. And in laboring for the realization of all these principles, we will tolerate no coalition with either of the old parties, or make compromises, whereby principle is sacrificed for personal or temporary party gain.

On motion of C. M. Phillips a committee, composed of Dr. J. U. Winslow, William Wallace, L. S. Stoner, E. R. Shoemaker and A. D. Goetschius, was appointed on organization.

Mr. Phillips moved the adoption of a resolution, declaring that the convention would only nominate those who were present to accept, and give a pledge to support the greenback ticket. Dr. Darby thought the resolution covered a conspiracy to secure nominations for all those present, and he opposed it. After some more talk, the resolution was voted down.

On motion of Dr. Darby, the convention proceeded to the nomination of a county ticket.

For Representative the names of Henry Millman of Newville, and Dr. J. U. Winslow and J. S. Holly of Waterloo, were announced, and the first ballot resulted Winslow 19, Millman 6, Holly 5; whereupon Dr. J. U. Winslow was declared the unanimous nominee.

Dr. A. B. Darby was announced as a candidate for Clerk, but he preemptorily declined, and announced the name of Hamilton H. Keep, of Franklin. Keep was then declared the nominee for Clerk by acclamation.

For Sheriff the names of Robert N. Crooks of Waterloo, John N. Clark of Franklin, and Robert S. S. Reed of Auburn, were announced. An effort was made to nominate Crooks by acclamation, Phillips saying very plausibly that he was used to it, and that it would not hurt him to be defeated; but the friends of the other candidate insisted upon a ballot. Reed withdrew, and the vote resulted in giving Crooks 26, Clark 10, Reed 1, and Robert N. Crooks was declared the unanimous choice of the party for the office of Sheriff.

Orris Danks of Waterloo, and J. D. Beard of Franklin, were announced as candidates for Treasurer. Beard declined, and on motion Orris Danks was declared the unanimous nominee of the convention.

The only name presented to the convention for the office of Recorder, was that of I. B. Goldsmith, of Wilmington, and he was nominated by acclamation. G. W. Rowe of Fairfield, E. R. Shoemaker and John Campbell, of Smithfield, were anas candidates for Commissioner for Northern District. A ballot gave Shoen 20 votes, Campbell 4, and Rowe 4. E. Shoen was declared the candidate, after an effort to decline that was amusing in the extreme.

Daniel Zahner, of Waterloo, for Coroner, and Miles Chapman, of Newville, for Surveyor, the only aspirants named for these offices, and they were put through by acclamation, after which the convention adjourned without date.

The contemptible whiffet who sent the dispatch to the Chicago Tribune respecting the Democratic pole raising at Garrett, and in the same connection slandered a Democratic meeting by representing that the speakers were indecent in their language, and insulted the ladies in the audience, would do well to go into training as a first-class lair. Of course the dispatch is false from beginning to end, but what more could be expected from a radical pimp? The youth's ideas seem to run in the channel of vulgarity, and we venture to say that he is a fresh importation who has been fired at of limberger alley in Galootville, his refined (?) manners indicate that. The fertile brain of the young pelican, who in the interval of business employs his valuable time in sending hush to the Chicago and local radical papers, ought not to overdo the thing. We suggest that he take a rest. Considering however his personal slang of citizens, and disrespectful allusions to our young ladies, the best thing that could be done would be for the boys to effectually "lump" the imported youth and then kick him out of town.

The nomination of the Hon. S. S. Shutt for Joint Representative, has called forth a hearty and enthusiastic endorsement by the Democratic press and influential citizens of the district.

Every voter acquainted with his official conduct while a member of the legislature should rally to the support of the Democratic nominee of the Kendallville convention. Immediately after the nomination the following dispatch, from a prominent citizen of this county, appeared in the Indianapolis Sentinel:

Yesterday a large and enthusiastic democratic convention was held at Kendallville to nominate a candidate for the joint representative district composed of Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb counties. Hon. S. S. Shutt, the present representative from DeKalb, was nominated by acclamation, and his selection gives universal satisfaction, as it will add at least one hundred votes in each county to the general ticket. Mr. Shutt has lived almost his entire life in our county. His large executive and administrative qualifications, as well as his legislative experience, will make him more than an ordinary useful member, and the people of Northern Indiana will feel proud in having him their representative, and will feel secure that their interests will be protected. His election is conceded by the republicans.

The Kendallville News of the 12th, pays the following merited compliment to the nominee:

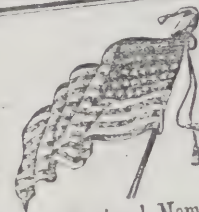

"The delegates of Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb, met in this place on last Friday and put in nomination the Hon. S. S. Shutt, of DeKalb, as a candidate for the position of Joint Representative. Mr. Shutt is well known to the people of these counties, having filled the position of representative in our legislature two or three terms. He is a farmer and a hard working man, but has always had time to inform himself upon the questions of the day both as to politics and the material interests of the country. His course while in the legislature was admirable and all members of that body commend him for faithfulness in watching the interests of the people. He held the important position of chairman in the committee on claims and we have no hesitation in saying that thousands of dollars were saved to the people of this state by his untiring energy and discrimination in detecting unjust and fraudulent claims which came before that important committee of the legislature. We shall have more to say as the election approaches in regard to the superior qualifications of Mr. Shutt for this place and will only add that he is honest, industrious, and commands the entire respect of his neighbors."

Hon. J. B. Stoll, the able editor of the Ligonier Banner, puts Noble county down for 300 majority, and gives the following pertinent reasons why Mr. Shutt should be triumphantly returned to the legislature:

"There is no more useful legislator in the state than S. S. Shutt. So say all those who touched the doings of the late legislature." "Sam Shutt, as he is familiarly called, ought to receive at least three hundred majority in Noble county. His own county, DeKalb, will give him that, and more too."

Every man who is desirous of seeing the interests of the state protected by an honest, upright and faithful guardian of the public treasury should give Hon. S. S. Shutt his cordial support. Mr. Shutt, as chairman of the committee on claims, earned the title of "watch-dog of the treasury," and in recognition of his valuable services ought to be returned to the legislature by 1,000 majority."

When such men as Mr. Shutt are chosen to legislate for the people there is no danger that their interests will be neglected for private speculations by joint compacts with rings, jobbers and lobbyists. He is the "noblest Roman of them all," and none more worthy of your support than our gallant standard bearer. His record is as spotless as a star. The people want wholesome laws and an economical administration of the affairs of state. Then why not return Hon. S. S. Shutt, a gentleman who has been tried and found faithful and efficient? Let it be borne in mind by our Democratic fellow citizens that the political character of the next legislature is of no secondary importance. The Republican party, having abandoned all hope of success in the presidential contest, are concentrating their forces on state legislatures and the national congress, with the determination of gaining control of them in the event of the election of a Democratic President, which they believe to be inevitable. Consider therefore the importance of the issue and be governed accordingly...

The Republican Meeting on Saturday Evening.

SPEECH BY CAPTAIN E. D. HARTMAN.

THE citizens of Corunna were favored with the first speech of the campaign from a Republican stand point on last Saturday evening. Capt. E. D. Hartman of Auburn, addressed a very thin crowd of Republicans and Democrats in front of Republican headquarters.

The speaker commenced by congratulating his audience upon the prosperous condition of the country in the present flush times when we are blessed with bountiful crops and active business under the bright skies of Republican rule. He did not think however that the Republican party alone is deserving of the credit for these good things, as such a claim would seem like blasphemy although theologians assert that divine providence always works through certain agencies or instrumentalities and he thought the party had something to do with it. The Republicans will next put in a claim as the original architects of the creation. He pointed to resumption and the reduction of the national debt as the means of increasing our national prosperity, and the Republican party did it with its little hatchet. Resumption, as far as it goes, came about through natural causes, and the Republican party are entitled to no credit for the present improved condition of the commercial affairs of the country which is just beginning to recover from the great financial wreck that followed Secretary Sherman's enforcement of the resumption act at a time when the country was not prepared to accept it. We presume the speaker thought "the least said the better" in regard to what they had accomplished in reducing the national debt, upon which there is not a shadow of curtailment and never will nor can be so long as the Republican party are at the helm, and all the showing that has been made in this direction is through a Democratic Congress, which after coming into power cut down the public expenditure $40,000,000 a year, an item our worthy speaker forgot to mention in connection with the public debt.

Mr. Hartman declared that there was no issue between the two parties, that their views were identical upon the questions of Finance and the Amendments, and he could not see the necessity of any change in the administration unless it was for the offices, and if such is the case he suggested that the Democrats come and swell the Republican majority and share the spoils. This is indeed a devilish fine scheme! In the light of passing events when prominent Republicans are deserting the party ranks day by day and joining the Democratic column, the proposition is amusing.

In eulogizing Hayes' administration there was a considerable display of cheek. It was held up as a model of purity. The speaker challenged anybody to show a single case of fraud by an official appointed under it. In reply we will take the case of Mr. Arthur, Republican candidate for vice president, who as collector of the port of New York was dismissed for fraudulent practices by Hayes in the following language, viz: "With a deep sense of my obligations under the Constitution, I regard it as my plain duty to suspend you in order that the office may be honestly administered." And yet Arthur is not so great a fraud as Hayes himself, who stole the presidency and will leave the White House with another man's salary.

Capt. Hartman spoke of the amendments as admitting of no controversy. They had been endorsed by General Hancock in his letter of acceptance, but he was afraid that when the Democrats came into power, the dreaded "solid south" would get control of the administration and repeal them. The speaker ought to have known, and no doubt he was not ignorant of the fact but hoped to work upon the credulity of his audience, that such an event is hardly possible under the provisions of the constitution, and even if it were possible no considerable number of citizens in the southern states have the least wish to interfere with the amendments.

In reference to General Hancock's order No. 40 the speaker had nothing to say objectionable. Respecting the principle involved the Republican candidate for President entertained the same views on military and civil law, and Mr. Garfield was the first man to put the principle of the supremacy of the civil over the military code into practice in a case before the Supreme Court of the United States. It is the first time we ever heard of a radical general taking such a departure, and it may or may not be true, however the Republican party as a body are strictly in favor of layonet rule and believe in collecting the free ballot under its authority.

The speaker finally drifted to the sunny south, and then unfurled the bloody shirt and kept its crimson, tattered and torn flaps going dippety-flop through the remainder of his speech. It was the burden of his song, the old, old story, revamped for the occasion, a repetition of southern outrages and southern ballot-box intimidation, using Weaver's henchmen as authority, the greenback allies of the Republicans who were sent down to Alabama and Mississippi prior to the election in the former state to work up a first-class southern outrage in the interest of Garfield, but failed to do so. He said that the "solid south" would send up 158 electoral votes and they wanted 47 more votes from the north to elect a Democratic president. He appealed frantically to his audience to withhold their aid in giving the south the required 17 votes. And then a dismal wail went up warning the people to beware of the solid south! SOLID SOUTH! HELL IN BLAZES, but the north will furnish the 47 all the same and more, too. The nonsensical riddle on this subject was of so little consequence that it is not necessary that we follow the speaker through all his utopian wanderings for campaign thunder, down upon the classic Snauc River, through the great Dismal Swamp and elsewhere. Waiving the bloody shirt, misrepresenting the southern people and appealing to the passions and prejudices that existed in time of civil war and vulgar abuse of the Democratic candidate, about the entire stock in trade with the Republican party in this campaign. But it won't win.

The speech was remarkable in one particular, and that was omission of the customary abuse generally fired at the Democratic candidate for President by the average radical speaker. Capt. Hartman like the Democratic nominee is also a soldier of the late war, which perhaps accounts for the omission; at any rate he was gentlemanly and courteous toward his opponents, and referred to General Hancock in the highest terms as a soldier and did not question his ability or statesmanship. They can't do otherwise if they would be fair and honest.

In concluding we remark that it was quite evident that the Captain on this occasion appeared at an unhappy disadvantage in the role assigned him by the Republican committee. The fire of enthusiasm and flow of spirit burned dimly in the speaker's breast. It was quite plain that his whole heart was not enlisted in the cause, as his effort—though we do not wish to belittle the ability of the speaker—was a tame affair, showing that he was pulling hard against the stream.

H. C. Peterson, Esq., Republican candidate for Prosecutor, was called upon at the conclusion of Capt. Hartman's remarks, but he declined to make a speech as the evening had already far advanced but promised to meet his friends at some future time.

—The largest rattlesnake probably that has ever been seen in Washington arrived at the Smithsonian Institution on Saturday from Florida, forwarded by Mr. James Bell, who is in that state on special duty for the interior department. The snake belongs to the Crotalus adamanteus, or diamond rattle family. It is about eight feet long, will measure twelve inches around the body and has twelve rattles and a button on the end of its tail. It came in a close woven canvass bag and was at once dropped into a large square wooden box with wirework sides and a sliding cover, prepared for the reception of venomous reptiles. Not having been fed for some time it is particularly ferocious and its rattle is constantly on the snake whenever any one approaches or there is any noise in the room where it is kept. This monstrous snake will be killed in a day or two for the purpose of taking a plaster cast of it. The manner of killing for this purpose is by putting the serpent in a close vessel and admitting a sponge saturated with chloroform. This preserves the form so that a life-like cast may be taken.

—Stories first learned at a mother's knee are never wholly forgotten.—[Ruskin. But rules of conduct enforced at the same place leave far more vivid impressions.

MONDAY.....AUG. 30, 1880.

THE Greenback District and County conventions assembled in Auburn on Saturday, 14th inst., according to appointment.

The Senatorial convention was first called to order and after an organization proceeded to nominate a candidate for Senator, which resulted in the choice of Jesse H. Carpenter of Steuben county by acclamation, after which the convention adjourned sine die.

A convention for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Prosecutor of the 35th Judicial Circuit was then called to order on motion of B. F. Dawson of Angola. With blood in his eye and hay on his horns, Mr. C. M. Phillips deliberately arose and fired a bomb-shell into the camp by proposing to adjourn without making a nomination, offering as a reason, that it would be impossible to find a suitable candidate in the party for the position. He followed the proposition with a motion to adjourn but it did not prevail. Mr. Dawson then announced the name of George B. Adams of Steuben county as a candidate and moved that his nomination be made unanimous. Mr. P. here interposed an objection on the grounds that the gentleman was not of the greenback faith. The reply of Mr. Dawson sustaining his motion called out some remarks reflecting upon the veracity of the disputants which threatened to terminate in a row, but the storm passed over and after a pretty free and general discussion the motion was lost by a vote of 10 nays to 4 ayes. This ended proceedings of the District convention. It was plain to be seen that Mr. Phillips came there for the purpose of running the convention in the interest of the Republican party by ratifying their nomination for Prosecutor but the scheme failed.

Following the adjournment a county convention was called, an official report of which copied from the Press, we publish on another page.

William F. Gallagher and Patrick McCann, injured in the May's Landing accident, died in a Philadelphia hospital Saturday.

A boy named Joseph Chenoweth was instantly killed by lightning near Green Lawn cemetery, Columbus, Ohio, during a thunder storm on last Sunday evening.

Three hundred thousand dollars in specie were shipped from Havre last week by the steamer Gellert from New York. One hundred and eighty thousand pounds were shipped on the steamer Herder for the United States.

A Denver Tribune's Santa Fe special says Charles Williams and Louis A. Gaines were hanged in Santa Fe on the 21st for murder. Both died without a struggle, their necks being broken.

It is not often that a death and a birth occur in the same family so close together as in that of Mr. Frank Peebles of Cudahoga Falls. One of his children died of diphtheria Friday night last and Saturday morning a child was born to his wife.

A fire in the depot at Red Hill, Col., Friday night, caused the explosion of about 1,000 pounds of powder, which blew the depot and every building of the place to atoms. Two men were killed and two badly wounded.

A young man named Patrick King was shot through the stomach in Des Moines, Iowa, on the night of the 21st as he was escorting two young women home. Several girls and a young man named Wallace were arrested. Wallace confesses to the deed. It is doubtful if King can recover.

We are raising more wheat in this world than we use. About 2,000,000,000 bushels are produced annually. It would require a daily consumption of 5,320,000 bushels to consume this enormous quantity, and people are not using that much every day. Every year more land is being put into wheat growing.

The Republicans are laboring under a heavy cloud on the Pacific coast and the leaders are very much disheartened by the reports that come from there. It is said that the Republican cause is almost hopeless in California and that a battle for the Republic is to be fought for carrying the state.

SPEAKING of the Democratic nominee for Joint Representative, the Press says that Mr. Stuart is an unimpeachable man personally, but it claims that he will carry the vote of the party and no more. The Press is a very good paper, but we all know, yet we were in the position that Mr. Stuart will greatly increase his majority in this county and the same result may reasonably be expected in Noble and Elkhart counties.

The Steuben Republican catches up with the published in a Chicago paper and claims that the Democratic pole is at Garrett alleging that J. Q. Cannon of Fort Wayne made use of a lie in his speech. There is not a particle of truth in the story and the falsehood has already been contradicted. We are surprised that a paper of the Republican's known reputation would give publicity to the story. The radical party is getting desperate and will resort to any means to manufacture campaign material, and it seems our Steuben cotemporary is no exception to the general rule. The voters of Keyser township will rebuke this slander at the polls by giving the Democratic ticket an overwhelming majority.

"THE bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of free men." — [General Hancock in his letter of acceptance.]

GENERAL Edward M. McCook, late governor of Colorado, and an ardent Grant man, has declared in favor of General Hancock.

THE abuse of Hancock is devoid of the sense of merit. No Republican paper pretends to criticize him. The vilest and lowest passions are appealed to against him.

THERE are 2,000,000 young men who this year will for the first time be old enough to participate in the election of a President, and most of them will vote for Hancock, whose illustrious career elicits the admiration of the young.

Now that the Republicans are attacking the census of the Southern States as being swollen by fraudulent enumerations, they should turn their attention to the immense cotton and other crops raised there, and insist that the cotton bales have been stuffed with sawdust.

CONKING will make one or two speeches in Ohio and Indiana for Arthur. Arthur, it will be remembered, is the man whom Hayes and Sherman threw out of the New York Custom House, and for whom Conking made positively the very greatest effort of his life.

If the American people were fools, as the average Garfield organ seems to assume that they are, they might be influenced by the bloody shirt howling; but being in the main intelligent and honest, they will rate such insane ravings at their proper value, which is nothing at all.

—A number of ladies and gents attended the Presbyterian sociable at Sheriff Leas' on 20th and had a pleasant time.

—Mrs. Teegarden and children who have been making a protracted visit to relatives and friends in the east have returned home.

—A splendid Democratic pole 120 feet high stands at the corner of Randolph and Quincy streets, from which floats a banner bearing the names of Hancock and English.

—Garrett is blessed with dogs. Last week some one had cold pizza for them, and it caught Andy Sanderson's dog, Farewell, "Gip," we shall miss you in your accustomed haunts.

—Conductor James Scofield, having finished his vacation, has returned to duty. During his absence Jim traveled extensively in the east and I visited the summer resorts and famous watering places like a nabob of the first rank.

—Garrett is to increase rapidly once again as of old. Judge Carpenter is going to build five houses, Mr. Cowen three, W. G. Pierce three, and Mr. Loar one. Several other parties also contemplate building. Parties wishing to invest in property here had better lose no time as an era of prosperity is at hand.

—So many of our people went to see Forepaugh's show on the 14th that the town seemed deserted, and many of them will long remember the ducking they got at the evening entertainment. Millinery and fine dresses were completely ruined, slippers lost in the mud, and ladies compelled to go home stockinged. The gentlemen spent most of Sunday forenoon brushing up their soft clothes and wishing they hadn't been there.

—On the evening of the 17th the local from the east ran into the rear end of No. 12, which had broken in two at the bridge east of Auburn. The caboose and three cars of the freight train were reduced to kindling wood, the engine of the local train was thrown down an embankment ten feet high, and the tank and a couple of cars thrown on top completely using the engine up. The engineer Tom Armstrong, and his fireman, saved themselves by jumping just in time.

—The B. & O. has been rather unfortunate of late in the way of accidents. On the evening of the 11th the fast train (No. 1) due at Garrett at 10 p. m. ran into a freight train which was switching on a side track at Albion and demolished seven cars completely, two of them were loaded with wheat which was scattered every way. The passenger engine had the front caved in, the smoke-stack and bell swept away, and sustained some other injuries. Fortunately no one was hurt. On the 12th freight train No. 12 coming west ran over a cow at Bloomfield. The engine was thrown about fifty feet from the track and remained upside down. It is badly broken up. A large hole was torn in her boiler and the escaping steam and hot water severely though not dangerously scalded the engineer, Charley Forner, who remained at his post till the last, when he crawled out of the wreck. Ten cars were piled in a heap and badly smashed. The head brakeman, Charles Uran, was slightly injured.

In a letter to the Des Moines (Iowa) State Register from responsible citizens of that state, Mr. S. A. James, of Sigourney, gives information on the authority of an eye witness, also a responsible man, that the notorious Bender family, four in number, were captured soon after the discovery of the murder of Col. York's brother. He says the four were stood up in a row facing nine riflemen; were told their fate; that they were pluck to the last and called upon their captors to shoot and be damned, and that the four bodies were buried at the corner of the four counties of LaBette, Wilson, Nesheo and Montgomery.

A fire in the rope-walk of Charlestown Navy Yard Saturday night caused a loss of $70,000 to the building and machinery.

MONDAY.....AUG. 30, 1880.

OUR Democratic congressional standard-bearer, Hon. W. G. Colerick, in his canvass of this county, and in fact of the entire district, is being enthusiastically greeted by the people on every hand.

The meeting at Corunna Thursday evening was a success. He was welcomed by a crowd of 1,500. A large delegation composed of the Hancock and English club of Kendallville came down and were met by the Cornet band at the outskirts of the village, where a torch-light procession was formed and marched into town.

Mr. Colerick's speech reviewing the history of the Republican party wherein the crimes and fallacies of the two Grant administrations were clearly exposed and proven by documentary evidence and citation of facts, was listened to with deep interest.

He was followed by General L. J. Blair, the old wheel-horse and manager of the Republican party in this county under whose leadership it has marched to victory in more than one encounter with the Democracy, in a ringing and forcible speech giving reasons why he abandoned the Republican party and came out in support of Hancock and English.

The meeting at Garrett on Friday evening, which was addressed by the same gentlemen, was still more demonstrative. Hancock club delegations from Kendallville and Avilla came in on the evening accommodation, and joined by the Butler township delegation, formed a torch-light procession and in the march through the principal streets with banners and transparencies, the display was an attractive feature of this interesting rally.

Mr. Colerick also received a splendid ovation at Waterloo Saturday evening, where he addressed a large and enthusiastic crowd.

All along the lines the camp fires are burning brightly, and there never before was such an outpouring of Democratic energy and enthusiasm as at the present time.

Old De Kalb is solid for the Democratic ticket.

Our cotemporary the Press continues to peg away indiscriminately at the matter of county expenditures. It has thus far signally failed to make out a case against the Democratic County Commissioners for official extravagance. Our Republican brother has a great faculty of dealing in sly innuendoes and sweeping wholesale charges. This kind of skirmishing won't answer the purpose nor have the desired effect. It is nothing but clap-trap and by such means the people cannot be humbugged. There is no evidence that the Democrats have knowingly or wilfully misappropriated a dollar of the public fund while making the many needful improvements in the county. On this subject the Press has run out of ammunition and the gun should be spiked.

D. D. Moody, Esq., the Democratic candidate for Representative is making a thorough canvass of the county. He will speak at Corunna next Saturday evening, Sept. 4. Turn out everybody and hear our next representative.

MONDAY.....AUG. 30, 1880.

We trust that every Democrat in the county will remain firm and vote an unscratched ticket. Our ticket is composed of efficient and worthy young men, all tried and true Democrats without a single exception. Let no past grievances or personal differences deter them from doing their duty in the present hour. The Republican party heretofore have succeeded in capturing some of the offices through a breach in our party ranks, and by the same means they hope to succeed at the coming election. DeKalb county is solidly Democratic and with an unbroken front every man on the ticket can be elected.

THE immortal Washington in his farewell address warned his countrymen to beware of sectional parties, parties founded on geographical distinctions endangered the perpetuity of the government if entrusted with its well being. Of such is the Republican party and a twenty years lease of power has verified the predictions and fulfilled the prophesies of the Father of his country. Capt. Hartman's Corunna speech which we hastily review elsewhere was an epitome of the late civil war and teemed with bitter sectional hatred toward a conquered and subdued portion of this republic whose people have asked to be forgiven for the mistake of a lifetime and received in common brotherhood, but the Republicans spurn them and keep up the strife. Then is it to be wondered at that there is a solid south?

General Ben Harrison the plumed knight and valiant forest knight, is announced in the last Blade to speak at Baltimore on Saturday, Sept. 1. It was Ben Harrison who declared that all the Democrats were liars, and now he is being so confidently confirmed in an opinion by the demagogues.

For a long Senator Hendricks is doing a noble work in the southern part of the state. His speeches are carefully chosen of such venerable arguments as will expunge the great crime of 1860 and proving by the record the fact that he is the infamous swindle by a Republican candidate for President. Everywhere Mr. Hendricks is received with grand ovations and popular cheering.

But Democratic candidate for Vice-President is reported to be a gentleman of a different stamp, which he argues by a fair and judicious management of the Federal government leeches and others, long accustomed to dishonest practices, finding that there is nothing so valuable as attack in the person of Mr. Richelieu about his private business affairs, and claiming court records, etc., to be paid for his money honestly. The Democrats are turning every stone in their path and hence this Paul is so busy. Their conduct is amusingly ridiculous, and will not in the least hurt Mr. English or the Democratic troops, which are growing larger every day in this state and throughout the entire Union.

The Head Light.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

MONDAY AUG. 20, 1880

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

(From the Corona Edition.)

—Mr. Nicholas Wierman returned yesterday from a flying business trip to Ohio.

—The Republicans are trying to organize a Garfield club in this place.

—A heavy rain storm fell in this county Sunday. We learn that a number of bridges and culverts have been washed away.

—Our old friend Dave Snyder has reopened a hardware store in the room recently vacated by Kiblinger & Co. Dave is well and favorably known to the people of the county, having for several years carried on the hardware and iron business at Auburn.

—There was a wreck on the Lake Shore Road at Kendallville on Friday morning last. One freight train ran into the rear end of another freight at the target. We did not learn the extent of damages sustained by the accident.

—At the Democratic District Convention in Waterloo last Friday George B. Adams was nominated for Circuit Prosecutor. For Senator the convention endorsed the Greenback candidate Jesse H. Carpenter, nominated at Auburn on the 14th. Both gentlemen are residents of Steuben county.

—The people, especially the Democrats, are inclined to our townsman Mr. Laf J. Miller, Democratic candidate for Treasurer, for his untiring efforts in behalf of political meetings in this part of the county. Mr. Miller is an energetic worker and a fine manager. He will make an excellent County Treasurer.

—Tom Corwin Mays is out in a new role. The versatile and nimble Tom has chartered special trains over the Baltimore & Ohio, Wabash, and Canada Southern Roads, and advertises an excursion to Niagara Falls to take place Aug. 31. Fare for the round trip $6.00. We can warrant all who avail themselves of Tom's genius and enterprise in this excursion a most enjoyable and profitable holiday.

—A sample of grapes of the Concord variety has been placed upon our table by Mr. J. E. McMillen of this place, that for beauty and flavor are equal to the celebrated Kalamazoo Island grapes.

—W. H. Kiblinger & Co. Auburn, are now established at their fine headquarters in the new Kiblinger block, where they will be happy to see their old customers from this part of the county.

—Godey's Lady's Book for September is a number full of attraction for everybody. Its pages are full of suggestive matter for a novel and becoming fall wardrobe, and the illustrations are accompanied by clear descriptions. There is a great variety of entertaining stories and poems, and every department is fully up to its usual standard of excellence.

—We were rejoiced the other day to meet our particular friend Jack Little, foreman of the Auburn Courier, fresh and rosy as a June morning, just home from a vacation visiting his uncle Ike who is in the mackerel trade off the banks of Newfoundland. The pumping process disclosed the fact that he had put in a high old time while down east, fishing, hunting and boating, and flirting with a Sarah Jane by moonlight on the white sands of the silver, sleeping sea. Welcome home, happy Jack!

—There were two exhibitions of radical rowdiness at the Democratic meeting Thursday evening. First, a clown from Smithfield township interrupted Mr. Calverick by getting off the rebel yell of "shotguns." He must have felt extremely comfortable over the bluster administered by the speaker. We noticed that he promptly folded his ears and sneaked out of the crowd immediately thereafter. The second interruption came from an active radical benchman of the town while General Blair was addressing the audience, but a Democrat at his elbow soon silenced his yelp. The respectable portion of the Republicans do not give countenance to such conduct, and we know that Democrats thus far have not interfered with Republican meetings, nor do they intend to. We charitably refrain from mentioning names in this instance but if the act is repeated we shall unhesitatingly expose the person or persons so offending, be they Republicans or Democrats.

A Boy, a Woman and a Cow.

[Detroit Free Press.]

It is now over one hundred years since an American philosopher propounded the query: "Why is a woman afraid of a cow?" and yet no one has yet succeeded in giving a satisfactory answer.

There is once in awhile a woman who doesn't seem to have the slightest fear, even when passing a cow with one horn all twisted out of shape; but follow that woman home and you will find that she kicks the dog, cuffs the children, jaws her husband, and knows how to sharpen a butcher-knife and use an axe. The real woman has a mortal terror of cows, and the real cow seems to have an antipathy for her.

Friday forenoon a lady was walking down Cass avenue, when she suddenly came upon a cow. The animal was feeding upon the other side of the street, and the boy sent out to watch her sat under a shade tree and played on a mouth organ.

The lady halted.

The cow looked up.

"Lost anything, ma'am?" asked the boy, as he removed the music from his mouth.

"I—I'm afraid of that cow," she replied.

"What fur? Cows don't bite nor lick, same as a horse. All they kin do is to run their horns through you and pin you to the ground."

"Oh! my—she's coming!"

"No, she hain't. She's making believe that she wants to get at ye and hook ye over the fence."

"Oh! but I dare not pass!"

"Yes you dare. Cows know when a woman is afraid just as quick as anybody. The nimit you give a cow to understand that you are able to catch 'em by the heels and mop the ground 'round 'em they go to hunting fur clover."

"Dear me, but I guess I'll go back?"

"I wouldn't. If ye'll only spit on her hands and shake yer fist at her she'll wilt right down. Cows know

"Well, my little brother he swears at 'em instead of spitting on his hands.
See if yer can do that."

"No—no—no! I'm going now!"

"If I was a woman and I couldn't swear or spit on my hands, I should carry a sword-cane to stab cows with," observed the boy, as he looked across the way.

"My soul! but there's another cow up there!" exclaimed the lady, as she looked up the street.

"Yes, lot's of cows around these days, but I never heard of two cows attacking a woman at once. I guess one generally hooks 'em all to pieces first, and then the other comes up and paws at the mangled remains. If you—

The lady uttered a first-class scream and made a jump for the nearest gate.
It opened hard, and after one pull she went over the fence and up the front steps of a strange house, there to remain until her husband could be summoned by telephone to come and act as a body-guard.

"I'd just like to be a woman," mused the boy as he sat down to punish his mouth-organ some more. "I'd carry a bowie-knife down the back of my neck, and the first cow that tried to hook me would feel that ere knife playing mumblety-pug around his vicious heart-strings."

A paper devoted especially to the interests of colored men, and edited by a colored man, is published at Montgomery, Alabama. It thus disposes of the Republican cry about intimadation and fraud:

"Fraud is the cry of the Republican papers of the North about the Democratic party of Alabama. Sing on, as much and as long as you please, we colored men aided the Democracy in rolling up the large majority; and don't you forget it, we are satisfied."

 Judge Black or Mr. Hendrich Democrats may century way of Mr. G. counts for nothing against the direct testimony of a congressional committee sworn to ascertain and declare the truth and a majority of that committee being Republicans. The Lancet may talk as long as it pleases about the less character of James A. Garfield and how it withstands and defies "the attacks of his partisan enemies," even "as the rock-ribbed mountain is defy and withstand the attacks of the storm king," but such frothy sentiment is unmeaning in the present emphatic and explicit charge.

Facts in regard to Garfield, as furnished by another, state that he agreed with Mrs. M. to take ten shares of Credit Mobilier stock, but did not pay for the same. Mr. M. has received the eighty per cent. dividend on and sold them for ninety-seven per cent. and also received the sixty per cent. dividend, which, together with the price of the stock and interest, left a balance of $20. This sum was paid over to Mr. Garfield by a check on the account of dividends. Mr. Garfield then understood this sum was a balance of dividends after paying for the stock.

That is not the attack of a "partisan enemy" we would have our Republican contemporaries to observe. It is not the condemnation of Mr. Garfield by irresponsible persons. It is a deliberate opinion of five of Mr. Garfield's congressional associates and three of them of his own party. When the organs of Garfield sound his praises and talk about the invincible integrity of his character, we point to that unimpeached and unanswerable document.

There may be and doubtless are a few persons silly enough to believe what the bloody shirt organs are daily putting forth in regard to the terrible things that will come to pass if Hancock is elected. There are no doubt a few idiots scattered around who believe in that event the Southern Confederacy will be re-established, slavery introduced and things go to smash generally. These are among people of limited brain substance and addled intelligence. The majority of the people have sense enough to know better, and know that there is no more danger of such things happening than there is that the country will be annexed to Mexico. These people will regard it of more importance that men of honesty and ability are chosen to office and they will think twice before they will vote for a man such as is described in the following article before they do so.

Persons have been regularly paid by you who have rendered little or no service; the expenses of your office have increased, while its receipts have diminished. Bribes, or gratuities in the shape of bribes, have been received by your subordinates in general branches of the honey, and you have in no case supported the effort to correct these abuses.

That such a man as that should be made Vice-President of the United States is preposterous, and yet the man there described is, Chester A. Arthur, the republican candidate for that office and the man who describes him is John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury.

SENATOR Wade Hampton has written to Mr. Stilson Hutchins in despairing tones about the conspiracy of the truth-loving organs to break him down by attributing to him sentiments he never uttered, and backing them by forged extracts from his speeches.

"What good," he asks, "to deny this story to instantly be confronted with a more desperate fabrication? Is my whole record since the close of the war and all my efforts for a better understanding between the sections—a broad and down-reaching love for the Union—to be tritter away by the forgeries of an obscure newspaper writer? I neither used the words attributed to me, nor anything approaching to them in meaning. I am perplexed and almost discouraged." The outrageous falsehoods circulated by an unscrupulous press are indeed perplexing to men who expect half-way decent treatment from political opponents, but Senator Hampton should console himself with the reflection that utter desperation has driven republican organs to this extremity. Intelligent men understand by this time that falsehood and forgery are the main weapons of the republican press, and that nobody is deceived by its ravings except those who naturally rather believe a lie than the truth.

—There are few villages in the land where so little tobacco is used as in Oberlin, Ohio. It is doubted if twelve habitual smokers can be found among the 1,500 of the two leading churches, but public sentiment was recently called to the increase there in the sale of tobacco and a meeting was called to take counsel in the matter. A candid and temperate talk on the evils of the habits of smoking and chewing was held and several persons confessed in one or the other habits were led to abandon it and the proprietors of two of the five or six stores that sold tobacco gave up the further sale of it cheerfully and without urging.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Set California down for Winfield Scott Hancock without a doubt say the Democrats of that State.

Fifty-three out of fifty-seven young men, who will vote in Cairo, Illinois, for the first time next November, will support Hancock.

Ex-Senator Ross, who as a Republican Senator voted for the acquittal of President Johnson in the impeachment trial, is the Democratic candidate for Governor of Kansas.

The Hancock Legion of New Haven, composed of soldiers of the late war, now has a membership of 412, which includes eighty-two men formerly connected with the Republican party.

Hiram Buswell, Postmaster at Warren, New Hampshire, for sixteen years, and a life-long republican, has announced his intention to vote for Hancock and English. He says he cannot swallow the Credit Mobilier and DeGolyer scandals.

The Mt. Pleasant (Pa.) Times and Mining Journal, a former republican paper, published in the interest of the mining community and having a large circulation, on Thursday announced itself for Hancock and English and the whole Democratic ticket.

The New York Herald says the advices received by the Democratic National Committee indicate that the enthusiasm over General Hancock is by no means decreasing. Reports from different sections of New York State show that a number of Republicans have decided to support the Democratic nominee.

Charles I. Neibras, of the New York German American Independent Citizens' Association, says that the association, which numbers over 6,000 persons, has always "split" on national nominations, but that this year, with few exceptions, every member of the organization will support Hancock and English.

No man who wears a white necktie, yellow kid gloves and a corset can ever be made President of this country. —[Albany Journal.] No man who is a bribe taker and forger can be President of this nation, and J. A. Garfield can prepare to disgrace Ohio as Senator. —[Boston Post.]

A Chapter on Bald Heads.

A bald headed man is refined and he always shows his skull-shure.

It has never been decided what causes bald heads, but most people think it is dan'd rough.

"A good novel for bald heads to read — 'The Lost Hair.'"

What does a bald headed man say to his comb? We meet to part no more. Motto for a bald head—Bare and furbare.

However high position a bald headed man holds, he will never comb-down in the world.

The bald headed man never dies. Advice to bald headers—Join the Indians, who are the only successful hair-raisers.

What does every bald headed man put on his head? His hat.

You never saw a bald headed man with a low forehead.

Shakespeare says: There is a divinity that shapes our ends.

Bald men are the coolest headed men in the world.

Some bald head men have heirs. —[Boston Transcript.]

The Democrats are fired with enthusiasm and the republicans paralyzed with fear.

Senator Wallace reports that as the prospect now appears in Pennsylvania Hancock's success in that State is assured, unless the Republicans succeed in repeating their old time frauds in the City of Philadelphia.

If Hancock's election depends, as Garfield admits, upon gaining New York State, he will be the next President of the United States in all human probability. The State is naturally Democratic. When such men as the peerless hero of Gettysburg is at the head of the ticket it is doubly sure. —[Utica Observer.]

Frank W. Jones, President of the Hancock Club of the Third Ward of Lynn, Massachusetts says: "This ward in 1876 gave the republicans ninety-five plurality; this year we estimate that the Democratic ticket will carry the ward by from 200 to 300 plurality. The city is sure for Hancock by from 600 to 800, while in 1876 it gave Hayes 400."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor addressed a large meeting at Auburn on last Saturday evening. Thousands from the north and south were banded down to the scene who came to hear the eloquent and brave P. Gray shake up the big bones of Democracy.

The Advertiser of last night says: "It would not be a bad idea to send General Garfield to the front in the public service, fishing from the bank through Credit Mobilia and Debt, to give the money his constituents sent him to collect, and with the other intemperate to get the star of honor from the breast of the patriotic soldier."

The public are again startled by another appalling steamboat disaster. The steamer St. Augustine, carrying a list of seventy passengers, was wrecked during a terrible storm on Sunday morning last, forty miles off the Florida coast and in the vicinity of St. Augustine. Only thirteen are reported to have survived the wreck and reached land in safety.

Hon. John W. Forney says: "If I desire to give reasons for my preference for Win. H. Hamrick, I have only to turn to the columns of the Republican papers of America in 1863; if I desire to prove distrust of James A. Garfield, I have only to turn to the Republican Journals of February, 1873. I have no prejudice. I want to defeat Garfield, and I regard him to-day as a snail, a slug, an impostor."

The joint debate between the two candidates for Governor, viz: Messrs. Landers and Porter, is attracting great attention. Landers is making it unpleasantly warm for the other man Porter and his race the entire evening. Porter will have his hold stretched on the floor. Landers tried to get Porter down for twenty-six speeches but, notwithstanding all the blowing and bragging by the republicans, the latter "squandered" and he would consent to only thirteen.

The New York Sun says: "Mr. Garfield's course in Congress has caused many of the most intelligent Republicans to concede that he is not honest. As to his capability, the more he possesses, so long as he is dishonest, the more dangerous he is. A man who will virtually take a bribe, as he has proved to have done, as a legislator, has no respect for the Constitution, and can possess but little principle."

Porter is a dandy lawyer without a brief and has no record on which to run or nothing to recommend him for the responsible position of Governor of a great State. Landers, the Democratic candidate, is a merchant, a manufacturer and a farmer, who for many years has been identified with the growth and industrial interests of the State. For whom then should the people cast their ballots next October? For Mr. Landers, the people's candidate, who possesses every qualification for the office.

The long-haired wild-eyed genius of the Press is still on the war path, and in the last issue of the organ points his skeleton finger cruelly at columns of figures intended to annihilate the Democratic Commissioners. If the greater part of this display was not as fictitious and false as the make-up of the editor of the press, the case might admit of argument. Finally, we are inclined to believe that the 250 readers of that concern are not quite so venal and gullible as to swallow windy Charley's Munchausen yarns.

A number of cases of bull-dozing of colored men are now in the courts of Alabama. They probably will not receive much attention at the hands of Republican journals, for the reason that the men bull-dozed are colored Democrats, and the assailants men of their own race, who do not accord to others the privileges they claim themselves. A dispatch to the New York Herald of Wednesday says that at Montgomery Tuesday morning a "dreadful" attempt was made to murder Lafayette Thomas, by Horace Edwards, a colored Republican, because Thomas voted the Democratic ticket at the recent elections. Thomas only saved his life by flight."

WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 15, 1880.

If Mr. Garfield acted as an honest man should have acted Mr. Tilden would now, in all probability, be occupying the seat in the White House to which he was elected, and Mr. Hayes would still be enjoying the bacchic pleasure of his Ohio home. The American people could not more effectively rebuke the great fraud than by striking down the man who was chiefly responsible for its success. — Baldwin Gazette.

Very naturally the Garrett Herald, being a partisan sheet, can see nothing to commend in Mr. Colerick's style of dealing. Fair and impartial critics will differ with the editor, for while Mr. Colerick may lack the spread eagle style of Ben Harrison and other republican orators, he is an able and eloquent speaker, and the forcible manner in which he demolishes his opponents by dealing in facts and sound logic, have a tendency to batter down around the ears of our republican brethren the frail fabric known as the republican party.

D. P. BALDWIN is the high-toned republican candidate for Attorney General, who it will be remembered got off his squirt-gun at Waterloo some time during last month. In one of his speeches, we do not remember just where it occurred, he was connected to the common level of a blatherskite and cast slurs at Democratic ladies by reference to their style of dress, saying that he could invariably tell a Democratic woman by the slovenly appearance of her dress. Baldwin is a ripe specimen of the kid-gloved fraternity now bugling the republican cause throughout the land. In lieu of argument they must needs resort to slang and blather, attack the poor laborer, even the defenseless women. The Democratic women largely belong to the working-class, and cannot afford to dress in fine clothes like the wives of republican office-holders who are supported from the revenue office.

Well, a Logan'sport lady the other day picked up this political hyena and finished his hide through the columns of the Pharos. Exit Baldwin.

Garfield wants a stronger Government. He said in his serene speech in New York that he would administer the laws of the Government in accordance with the political principles taught by the great leader of the federal party. Alexander Hamilton, which was that the President and Senators should hold their offices for life unless removed upon impeachment. He endorsed the Hamiltonian plan in a speech in Congress March 20th, 1865. Mr. Garfield made the following declaration:

"I believe that the fame of Jefferson is waning and the fame of Hamilton waxing in the estimation of the American people, and that we are gravitating towards a stronger government. I am glad we are."

In order to more clearly understand what form of Government Garfield alludes to when he speaks of a "stronger government" we herewith submit the Hamiltonian plan:

1. The Executive to hold his office during life.

2. A Senator to hold for life, or during good behavior.

3. The Senate to have the sole power of declaring war.

4. The general government to appoint the Governors of States.

5. The Governor of each state to have an absolute negative on all laws proposed to be passed by the Legislature.

6. No state to have any forces, land or navy. The military of all the states to be under the sole and exclusive direction of the United States, which was to appoint and commission their officers.

Hamilton thought the British government was the best in the world and he doubted whether anything short of it would do in America. The republican party are drifting toward imperialism. Let the people choose between Imperialism and Democracy. The duty of the hour is made intelligible to every voter who desires the perpetuation of our free Government. A vote for the Republican candidates is a vote to establish a limited monarchy on the ruins of Democracy!

Ben Ingersoll is one of the missionaries sent out in behalf of radicalism, and in his speeches arraigns the Democratic party as guilty of every crime in the history of the country. The infidel Ingersoll, who reviles Christianity, discards the Bible, denies the existence of the Savior of mankind and scoffs at virtue and morality, is a fit subject to sit in judgment upon the Democratic party. A man of Ben Ingersoll's moral professions will exert about as much influence as would the devil himself on a similar mission.

The New York Tribune in an article on the situation and referring to the compromise of the Democratic factions in the Empire State, virtually surrenders in the following significant language: "The adjustment is a shrewd one for the Democracy, even to the date of the Convention, which postpones the gathering until such a late day that all danger of a fresh quarrel will probably have subsided. It will not do for republicans to underestimate the strength of the coalition. It means a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull of the Democracy altogether to carry the State."

The Louisville Courier-Journal has received a letter from South Union, Kentucky, the writer being personally known to the publishers of the paper as one of the best men in the State. He says: "Nearly all our hired darkeys have gone to Indiana and Ohio to vote. Where they got traveling funds from I know not, as most of them lived here close up with their wages." There is no doubt whatever that all the Republican hopes of carrying Indiana are really based upon the expectation that a great deal of fraudulent colonization can be done without detection. The Indiana Democratic Committee are keeping a sharp eye on this Republican game, and will make strenuous efforts to block it. The Democrats want a free vote and a fair count, and will do their best to have both.

The Head Light.

WEDNESDAY ..... SEPT. 15, 1880

The Kendallville Liberty pole was cut down, at Corunna, Tuesday night, by the Democrats, and we understand that they held a grand jubilation and danced over the event. (Kendallville Standard.)

There is no justice or fairness in charging the Democrats with the matter alluded to in the above paragraph. The Standard's informant knew that there had been no "jubilation and carousal over the event." The pole, a small sapling, was the property of the juvenile rejoicers of the village and had been put up by them. It was probably cut down in a spirit of cussedness by some boy or boy. No Democratic citizen would engage in such contemptible business and the editor knows it. It seems the republicans are trying to make political capital out of this juvenile scrape, but they are welcome to all that is in it.

The Corunna Hancock and English Club has elected a new band attended the Democratic meeting at Kendallville Wednesday to hear Lieut. I. P. Gray and Colonel Messmore of Michigan. The demonstration completely silenced the republican meeting of Saturday last, although that was a day meeting at a favorable part of the week and a huge effort made to get out a crowd. This was one of Colonel Gray's most happy efforts and he did make the fur fly and no mistake. The distinguished gentleman's home thrusts at the radical vandals and vampires ought to have been heard by every doubting and hesitating honest republican in the State who is favorable to honest government, such as the Democracy today invite them to share by voting that ticket.

D. D. Moore's speech last Monday evening at Corunna was a ten striker. Owing to the appointment of Colonel Gray at Auburn on the same evening that Mr. Moody was advertised to be here (Saturday) the notice of postponement did not get very extensively circulated and consequently the attendance was not so large as it would have been had the original arrangements been carried out. It was the first time that we had ever heard him before a political audience and we must confess that on this occasion he did great credit to himself and left a favorable impression upon his audience. Mr. Moody is making a gallant fight, and taking his Corunna speech as a sample, he no doubt will take honorable rank with anyone who has visited this part of the State since the campaign opened, and he will render a good account of himself as a member of the next legislature. Hon. S. S. Shutt, candidate for Joint Representative, was present and at the conclusion of a few introductory remarks hoped to meet his friends here before election.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—The Hancock and English Guards will meet in the Conrad building on Thursday evening next. A general attendance is requested.

By Order of the President.

—W. B. Adams informs us that he has made seventy-five gross of fruit cans since the canning season commenced.

—A wagon load of Garrett republicans were in attendance at the Garfield blow-out last Saturday evening, and among the number we noticed H. M. Rickard, Dr. Sherman and W. H. Lear.

—Hinchman Dan proclaims us to be "a consummate liar" but admits that he interrupted the Democratic meeting all the same, and won't confess that he was expelled out of the crowd, like any other cowardly fellow, by a stalwart Democrat.

—Whoo-per-Up-Ian solemnly vowed after having been slaughtered by his own party, while making the race for township Assessor a few years ago, that he would "never vote another republican ticket, begawd, sah." A little flattery and pay has fixed the tuncful Daniel, and now he is as happy as a ducky at a clam-bake.

—Dancheilonte "be-gawd sah," writing to the Waterloo Press says the Hancock crowd at the Colerick meeting was composed principally of boys and that they were howling drunk. Now, Dan knows that he lies, and we venture to say that he was a little "dud" himself that night or he would not have interrupted the speaker.

—The Corunna Garfield Club came out on parade with their torches last Friday evening for the first time since the organization and they made a very fine appearance. Mr. Hubbel of Butler was billed for the evening, but he failed to put in an appearance, owing to sickness we believe. The republican candidate for Representative, Mr. Hopkins of Garrett, came to the relief and entertained the boys in a short speech, so that the meeting was not altogether a failure, although republican manager Chilcote said it was a fizzle in his letter to the Press.

—On Sunday evening Jim Ross got into a squabble with three railroad men and had them arrested. They were fined eight dollars and costs each.

—During Sunday night or early Monday morning the windows in Charley Travis' grocery front that smashed in and it was the men who were found that dashed in, as Travis is the constable and made the arrests.

—The Corunna correspondent of the Press says: "Friday night might be termed a fizzle, at least as far as speakers' is concerned." This is rather rough on the republican candidate for Representative, who no doubt filled the place made vacant by the absence of Mr. Hubbel very acceptably.

—Hinchman Dancheilonte "which was" school-master, is in clover. The campaign furnishes the hapucousness with employment and an opportunity to display his ponderous intellectual genius in cross-road penny-linger for the organ. The self-constituted wet-nurse for the Richland republicans is a while and don't you forget it. In fact Hell's to pay when the slumbering volcano, Whoo-per-Up-Ian, puts on his war paint!

—The Democrats of Corunna and vicinity had a meeting last Thursday evening for the purpose of organizing a Hancock and English Club, and the following permanent officers were chosen: President, T. F. Jordan; Secretary, J. C. Loveland; Treasurer, Edward Orr; Captain, Clark Griffith. Seventy-seven names have already been enrolled and it is expected that the club will number 150 members before the election.

—On last Sunday evening (5th) at ten o'clock a peach and oyster train was wrecked by a cow on the track. The accident occurred about two miles east of Holgate. The engine was thrown off the track and turned upside down and the cars piled up on one another. The engineer, Andy Sanderson, remained on his engine and had his arm pierced by the lever of the throttle valve, his thigh by the reverse lever, and one foot crushed by the boiler head, besides other injuries. He lived in intense agony for several hours, but bore it with unflinching fortitude, even directing the work of releasing him from his terrible situation. The fireman and brakemen escaped with only slight injuries. The conductor, James Blakesley, is uninjured. Andy Sanderson is dead. Brave, generous, whole-souled Andy. He was faithful in the discharge of his duty and was one of the most trusted engineers on the road. "He always had a smile and a pleasant word for his friends which meant everybody, for all liked him. His death cast a gloom over the community such as it never before felt. Other accidents have been as horrible, but Andy was so well known and liked that every one feels as though he had lost a dear friend. The relatives were telegraphed to and came in time to accompany the remains to Millbrook, Ont.

—For bird cages call on Isaac Loeb the Kendallville grocer and provision merchant. He has a large variety and will dispose of them at a bargain.

—For Queensware and Glassware, a large line, and a fresh stock of Tolocoe, just received at the well known grocery house of Isaac Loeb Kendallville.

us. Salt $1.75 per barrel at Gettel's Altona, Ind.

—Daniel McIntyre, one of the oldest turfmen in the state, died Monday at Paris, Ky.

—There were thirty-two deaths from yellow fever and five from small pox in Havana during the week ending Saturday last.

—Thomas Cathern, an extensive grocer of Montreal, died Tuesday of an overdose of morphine. He has lately been involved in financial difficulties.

—General Longstreet, in company with Postmaster General Maynard, called at the State Department Tuesday and had an interview with Secretary Evarts.

IF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO PREVAIL, IT WOULD HAVE BLISS PETER FOR ITS THAT REBEL-LION HAD TRIUMPHED, AND THAT SECESSION HAD SUCCEEDED. (New York Tribune, July, 1880.)

If the above does not verify what we have always claimed, that the Republican party is determined to rule or ruin, then we cannot understand the meaning of words. An exchange takes up this avowal of the bigoted organ and sets it off to good advantage:

Rebellion preferred to the Republican party—"us"—to loss of power in the government!

Secession to be advocated in the event of the election of General Hancock!

The republican party which controls a majority of the Northern States, to plunge the country into another war of rebellion unless allowed to rule!

The principal organ of the party in the country openly advocating a destruction of the Union if not permitted to control its government!

The New York Tribune, while lying about Wade Hampton, fostering the spirit of secession among its readers!

The New York Tribune, an acknowledged leader of sentiment in the republican party, threatening the people with another war if they do not vote for Garfield!

These are the meanings of that sentence, or the English language is incapable of conveying any meaning!

JROR R. W. McClure always a prominent republican of Akron, Ohio, declares that he will not support Jim Garfield for President.

Returning to the letter of one Jewett, published in to-day's Journal, denying the charge made against General Garfield in connection with the Louisiana Returning Board, the Governor read from the sworn testimony of Jewett, showing conclusively that his relations with Garfield were such as to entirely destroy the force of his statement. The Governor, by Garfield's own evidence, then verified his assertion that, in one of the inner rooms of Packard's, Custom House, he did his work of examining affidavits, and when they were not sufficiently full he prepared additional interrogations to bring them within the rules adopted by the Returning Board. The evidence of Emily Mitchell was also quoted in substantiation of the Governor's charge regarding the manner and privacy of Garfield's movements while at New Orleans. The testimony of Garfield before the Congressional Committee was freely quoted from, showing how he had deceived

BY J. C. LOWLAND.

Entered at the Post Office in Corvuna, Indiana, as Second-class matter.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30, 1880.

Among the recent recruits to the Hancock ranks in this state, is Hon. John R. Buchtel, a prominent coal and iron man of Nelsonville, and a Grant elector in 1872.—Plain Dealer.

The Garfield men claim that their candidate was the hero of Chickamauga. Let us see. It strikes us that General Thomas was also present on that occasion.—Albany (N.
Y.) Times.

The Republicans do not claim a great deal of brain power for Judge Porter, the Republican nominee for Governor of Indiana; but they say he is a polished man. He will not even have polish when Landers gets through with him.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

They are all having a good time at—the people's expense. The Government is now literally running itself. The "President" and nearly all the Cabinet are "out of town"— some for pleasure, others for politics—and all drawing their salaries in full. It is no wonder they don't want a change.—Baltimore Gazette.

An exchange says there is no use disputing these points, viz.: that a few years since every prominent republican paper pronounced General Garfield a dishonest man, who traded for money his official influence in Congress, and for which a Republican Convention in his own home district called upon him to resign.

CINCINNATI Enquirer: Harper's Weekly for March 3, 1873, had a cartoon representing Garfield and other Credit Mobilier Congressmen, with the following placard above their heads:

"Dispersed in the arms of the public for using Credit Mobilier stock, which was in fact and intent a fraud upon the Government. Also for deceiving and swindling."

witnesses, enlarging their evidence, or taking from it as the necessities of the occasion required. Reference was then made to the testimony of Garfield, where he admitted that if every vote cast in Louisiana was a legal one, Tilden was ahead.

"This is the man, Republicans, that you propose the American people shall place in the chair that Washington occupied. It will never be done. No man with a record like that ever did take that chair; and in the kind providence of an eternal God it will never occur. [Applause.] What do you think of a man who, as he comes to Washington to try a case on his return from New Orleans, is very anxious in his mind of the result until he reaches Ohio and the dispatch comes: 'The work is done.' There was no anxiety from then on; the perjury and fraud is done. The people of the United States have been beaten in their might and majority and in their glorious sovereignty at the ballot box. The great people of the United States are beaten, and a part of that work was done in the dark, and from this time infamous room of that Custom House.

"To-morrow morning let him who wrote that article this morning get down upon his knees and pray God's pardon. 'If these charges are proved,' says the Journal, 'Garfield is disgraced.' How stands he now? How is it between you and him—between your intelligence and conscience and mine? Is he disgraced? [Cries of 'Yes! Yes!'] 'Unless Hendricks can substantiate the charge, he is disgraced.' I have accepted the issue without a fear. As I stand here in the presence of my friends and neighbors [repeated cheers], I thank God and your intelligence that I am not disgraced. The Journal says I have offered no proof worthy of belief. The evidence is Garfield himself. That is harder upon Garfield than anything I ever said."

The inconsistency of Garfield advocating one course as a lawyer, and then directly opposing it under party lash as a member of the Electoral Commission, was dwelt upon with telling effect. "They say he is a preacher. I don't pretend to be anything but a wicked lawyer, but there is not wealth enough in all Indiana to get me, in my place in the House or Senate of the United States, to say that if you pass the law I shall hold that it opens the door to investigation, and we can go down to New Orleans and ascertain how the vote was in fact cast; and then, if I got upon the Commission, to turn around and say that the Returning Board and its finding is conclusive upon us, and we cannot investigate at all. I wouldn't do it for a thousand years of the tenure of the great office for which he is a candidate. He will never be elected President. He is a man of that kind who possesses the worst itch for the office."

"I have appealed to no witnesses except Garfield himself, and by him is Garfield this night disgraced. I appeal to fair minded Republicans, to gentlemen who love their country better than they love the Journal or Garfield, or all the combinations of party possible, whether I have not sustained myself. I will furnish that paper with a short-hand report of my speech, and if it does not appear in the morning then it is an admission, as if written in the brightest capitals, 'we cannot stand upon the issue we made yesterday morning.' If they don't publish what I have said to-night, then you may know that Hendricks is not disgraced, but Garfield is disgraced."

The Journal for prudential reasons did not publish Mr. Hendricks' powerful speech.

THE PARTIES AND THE TICKETS.

That sterling exponent of Democracy, the Cincinnati Enquirer, has the following able article under the above caption in a late issue, which we commend to the careful consideration of our readers:

There are many voters in the country on whom party ties rest lightly. We ask those voters to candidly, dispassionately, without prejudice, take a full, long look at the two parties and the two tickets in order to determine impartially which party and which ticket is more deserving of their support in this election. It is reported that the illustrious soldier who was almost nominated for the Presidency at Chicago said of the nomination of General Hancock at Cincinnati that the nomination was excellent, but that he did not like the party that had nominated Hancock. Whatever be the truth concerning the report, that sentiment is the burden of Republican arguments in this canvass. Unable to attack the Democratic candidate, the Republican managers attack the Democratic

In any city on the globe that has stood for many years, the people that pass along its streets will notice here and there the sign of a mercantile or banking-house containing the statement: "Established in the year——" is regarded as a claim to public confidence. In banking or commercial house can point to the fact that it has existed and enjoyed the confidence for a long term of years. Old wines become valuable with age, like old wines and some books. May not the antiquity of a political party be as important and emphatic an argument as the antiquity of a bank or a commercial firm? Is not the fact that either has been engaged in business a long time, in some sense, a title to the confidence of the public?

The Democratic party is the ancient party of the Republic. It began with the century of the Republic consisted of a few Atlantic States. It was during the reign of the Democratic party that the Republic passed from the position of a Coast Republic to that of a Continental Republic. Who shall say that the National domain does not add to the national glory? But all of it, save Alaska, that eighty years have added—and these additions form the greater part of it—has been added under Democratic auspices. It is the Democratic party that has made the power and glory of the Republic among the Nations of men.

WONDERFUL! WONDERFUL! Is the Universal Expression

The one is the ancient party of the Republic, old as the century, tested by time; the other is a brief and accidental party. The one is the party of the majority; the other is the minority party. The one is a party that began its career as an advocate of free speech, a free press and by opening its arms to the alien; the ancestors of the other made free speech sedition and denounced the immigrant as a foe. The one is the advocate of the rights of laboring men; the other is the advocate of monopolies. The one is the historic friend of the people; the other the friend of privileged classes, of corporations. The one is the party whose fundamental principle is to exalt the individual; the cardinal doctrine of the other is to suppress the individual and exalt the Government. The one is the party of the Government simple and small and gentle as the atmosphere about us, strong in the affections of the people; the other is the party of a "strong Government" made strong by force against the will and the laws of the people. The one is the party of the Constitution; the other is the party whose greatest leader boasted that its legislation had been for years wholly outside of the Constitution, and which in twenty years has been guilty of more infractions of the Constitution than the previous three-score years had known. The one is the party of local self-government, close and dear to the homes of the people; and the other is the party of a Government central, powerful, distant, unrepresentative. The one is the party of the farmer Republic; the other the party that has given three hundred millions of acres of the public lands to corporations and monopolies. The one to-day is the party of peace and one country; the other the party of sectional hate. The one is the party whose legislation for six years has been followed by prosperity; the other the party whose latest legislation was followed by the panic of 1873. The one is the party that had a large majority of the popular and the Electoral vote of 1876: the other the party that stole the Presidency, trampling the sacred right of suffrage under foot, electing Hayes and Nichols, of Louisiana, by the same vote, just as the ancestors of the Republican party, at the very opening of the century, tried to steal a Presidency. The one is the party of economy: the other is the party of extravagance. The one is the party of home law, a free, un-intimidated ballot and a fair count in peaceful elections: the other the party of Deputy Marshals, bayonets, Federal force and Returning Boards. (One party today says:

Let us have peace with its accompanying blessings of closer commerce and more abundant prosperity;" the managers of the other party say: "Let us have war and hate if we can also have the spoils." These are some of the contrasts between the parties.

What of the tickets? The candidate of one party for the Presidency has a record and a name as white as the driven snow: the candidate of the other has been culpably involved in every National scandal for fifteen years. The candidate of one party is the Union candidate. His life has been wrapped up in the Union. He volunteered in the service of the Union in his boyhood, and has remained in the service of the Union till this hour. Among living men there are only two or three who have rendered such illustrious services on behalf of the Union as has he. There is no other such splendid example of heroic devotion to one country, to the Constitution, to the noiseless glory of civil law as General Hancock furnishes. General Garfield is the sectional candidate, the candidate of separation, of distance, of enmity, of malice and bitterness. Mr. English is a gentleman of honor and business. He is a man of great method and attention to his affairs. He is a man of the highest business integrity. He is a man of public experience. Hancock and English mean public virtue. Does the ticket of Garfield and Arthur mean public virtue? Has it any such odor about it when the whole country is talking of Credit Mobilier, and the trolley payments, and Sanborn contracts, &c., and since Arthur was expelled from the public service and the constitutional execution of the laws? For which ticket can un-union men vote with most self-respect, remembering that we ourselves are measured by the men we honor, by the statues we erect, by the men we crown? Can a great people in a great Republic afford to lightly regard public virtue? Can they afford to laurel the men who have a plentiful lack to it?

CHICAGO EXPOSITION—EXCURSIONS VIA BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILWAY.—The great Interstate Industrial Exposition of Chicago, opens September 8th and continues until October 23d, 1880. It is the established American exhibition of the Products of science, industry and art, from all parts of the world. No person can afford to lose this opportunity, for practical study and observation. All departments are full and complete. In addition to this a rare chance is offered to every one to visit the Great City of Chicago with its many and beautiful attractions at a small expense. During the continuance of the Exposition the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. will sell cheap excursion tickets from all stations on Trans-Ohio Divisions to Chicago and return, as follows: on Central Ohio and Straitsville Divisions, Tuesday of each week, Lake Erie Division, Monday and Wednesday of each week; and on Chicago Division, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday of each week, tickets good returning five days from sale. Through Cars and Pullman Sleepers without change. For tickets and general information, apply to Agents Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS has furnished one of the texts of the campaign: "I have no sort of sympathy with the Republican party because of that act, and because it justified and sustained it. After such an act, I have no desire to sustain the Republican party in any way. I would not vote for a party that would carry through such a fraud. I think Mr. Hayes was elected by a fraud, and I do not mean to have it said that at the next election I had forgotten it. I do not say that Mr. Hayes committed the fraud, but it was committed by his party. I have no enmity to Mr. Hayes, but after the fraud by which he became President I could not vote for any person put up for President on the Republican side who did not disavow the fraud committed. I would not support any member of that party, who had any sort of mixture with that fraud. I feel that the counting out is just as much a fraud now as at the time it was perpetrated."

Cincinnati Enquirer: The Republicans did not carry Indiana in the State election of 1870. They did not carry Indiana in the State election of 1872. They did not carry Indiana in 1874. They didn't carry Indiana in 1876, and they didn't carry Indiana in 1878. What has happened on which they can build a sensible hope, even, of carrying the State in 1880? They should show some reason for the faith that is in them.

The one hundredth and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Baltimore will be celebrated on the 11th of October.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30, 1880.

ADVICES received at Washington by the Democratic congressional committee from Indiana and Ohio are of a far more encouraging character than any previously obtained. It is certain that the tide of public sentiment is running much more strongly in favor of the Democrats in Indiana now than at any time since the campaign begun. Mr. Barnum's superior management is making itself felt. The Republicans are beginning to realize the fact that they are going to have trouble in Ohio as well as in Indiana.

THE Laporte Argus has the following account of a recent transaction which did not occur at the South. Says the Argus:

"The circus negroes sent by the Republicans from here to Michigan City joined with a mob of exodus negroes and roughs Saturday night, and surrounded the residence of Senator Winterbotham and demanded that the Hancock flag in his door-yard be pulled down. There was no one at home except the ladies of the household, and the mob shouted and yelled and indulged in all kinds of ribald and obscene remarks, and then stormed the house with rotten apples, melon rinds and brick-bats, until they were frightened away by respectable citizens, who interfered. The mob then marched to a saloon kept by a German Democrat, and, because he refused to treat them, they smashed the doors and windows in with clubs and brick-bats. Chas. Young, a friend of the saloon-keeper, who was with him, was dangerously wounded in the head by being hit with a brick-bat, thrown by one of the mob."

THERE was a rousing meeting at Sedan last Saturday evening to receive Mr. D. D. Moody our next Representative. The Corunna Hancock and English Guards, led by the Cornet band, were in attendance and made a fine display.

THE result of the election in Maine is still in doubt. While there is no question of the election of the Union candidate for Governor, General Plaisted, the Republican robbers are at work on the backwoods counties trying to manipulate the vote and count him out. The Republican managers are at their old tricks, and will if possible commit another rape upon the ballot-box.

In reply to the telegrams which are hourly coming in from all parts of the country asking for the latest from Maine the Democratic National Committee are sending the following dispatch:

NEW YORK, September 16, 1880.

Latest information is to the effect that Plaisted has a clear majority of somewhere from 600 to 1,500. No amount of cheating, which is apparent the Republicans are trying to do, can effect this result. Everything is being done to watch them and defeat fraud on their part.

W. H. BARNUM, Chairman.

Judge Taylor visited Corunna on Thursday evening last according to appointment and addressed his Republican friends on the situation. Whether the controversy with Hon. W. G. Colerick at Auburn in the afternoon of the same day, in which the young Democratic Napoleon held the winning cards and "scouted" his adversary, or whether the news of the Republican Waterloo in Maine had a depressing effect upon the speaker, we are unable to say, but we are of the opinion that he failed to astonish the natives, and were the honorable gentleman inclined to reconnoitre this part of the county he would find his "fences" in a deplorable condition. The speech was simply a rehearsal of Republican campaign oratory in the futile effort to whitewash the party in power and defend its candidate for President, General James A. Garfield, charged with official dishonesty and corruption, for which he is now on trial before the American people. The speaker did not even mention the name of Arthur during his address, for the reason we presume that McGoyler Jim was about loud enough for an ordinary man to dispose of. In closing his remarks the Judge feebly waved the bloody shirt, and with an appeal to the young men to vote the Republican ticket and thereby give him a "lift" on the road to Congress, he gracefully retired without having caused a single ripple upon the political current.

—The Northwestern Indiana Fair will open on Waterloo on the 4th of next month and continue until the 8th. The managers have taken great pains to make the approaching exhibition unusually attractive, and those who attend will enjoy a pleasant and profitable holiday.

—A special from Columbus to the Cincinnati Enquirer of the 10th says: The Baltimore and Ohio Company to-day received the first two sleeping-cars of its new line, which is to take the place of the Pullman cars on the 1st of October. The cars were brought in on the Dayton Short Line, and are from the Barney and Smith shops. They are numbered 600 and 601, and are the first installment of twenty ordered of the same manufacturers. The cars are splendidly finished, both inside and out, and will compare well in every respect with the Pullman or Wagner cars.

—Kendallville Standard: "We would call the attention of our readers to Engel & Co's new stock of clothing, hats and caps, and gent's furnishing goods. They deal exclusively in these lines, and have by far the largest store of this kind in Noble or adjoining counties, and are therefore enabled to give customers the best goods for the lowest possible prices. Their merchant tailoring department is replete with all the latest styles of coatings, pantings and suitings, and they keep none but first-class tailors, and will guarantee satisfaction in every respect. It will pay all to visit this mammoth store and examine the new stock."

The Workmen of San Francisco have renominated Kulloch for Mayor.

Symptoms of Siberian plague have appeared amongst the people of a village near Odesa, Russia.

The effort of our Republican cotemporaries to handle the returns of the Maine election so as to keep the hearts of their constituents from breaking was a doleful performance.

And all their lies about a "Solid South," and "payment of the rebel claims," and "rebel Brigadiers" went for nought in Maine. It is sad.

The "Solid North" that Republicans have been boasting about is broken. Sectional politics will receive a death blow next November. Instead of a "Solid North" and a "Solid South" we will have a solid country.

An Enquirer special from Chicago says: The Republican leaders here are invisible to-night, and this city looks like a deserted camp. Dorsey looks very blue, and is awaiting the result in Indiana with fear and trembling.

At Detroit on the morning of the 14th John Kelly, an old resident, aged sixty-eight, committed suicide by shooting himself in the brain. Cause, depression of spirits on account of throat trouble, which at times prevented him from swallowing.

Calvin Phipps, who lived about five miles from Bedford, Ind., died the other day from the effects of excessive drinking. Four months before his death he drank one gallon of strong corn whisky every twenty-four hours, and used this quantity only the day before he died.

Patrick Gleason, a coal-miner, and Wm. L. Nicholson, a farmer, on the 10th, while intoxicated, became involved in a quarrel which grew out of a political discussion at a saloon in Millersburg, Ind., which finally resulted in blows, Gleason receiving wounds which proved fatal.

The Republican majority in Vermont has been daily melting away since the first claim was made by Republicans that it would reach twenty-seven thousand. That claim was made for effect in Maine, and if it had any at all it was a bad one. It is doubtful if the official figures will show twenty-two thousand.

There was a horrible murder in Milwaukee on the 12th. Mr. Fred Lief upon returning from a ball of the Cigar Maker's Union on Sunday morning found his wife dead, she having been strangled during his absence. The crime is shrouded in mystery there being no evidence of robbery as an incentive to the deed.

It sounds strangely to hear men, right in this county, proclaiming that their party put down the rebellion, when it is known belonged to Lodges of Sons of Liberty, organized to resist the prosecution of the war. The impudence and assurance these men show, in this regard, fully equals their pretense that they favor "honest voting."
Waterloo Press.

"The impudence and assurance" of the Press as shown in the above paragraph is not remarkable when we consider the source. There was no organization in this county for the purpose of resisting the prosecution of the war. Having been vanquished in a discussion of the county finances, the organ naturally falls back on the bloody shirt argument and starts up the rebel yell.

DR. J. U. Winslow of Watroo, "lifted the veil" at this place on last Saturday evening (11). The speech was a fair exposition of Greenback principles and the subject logically and ably disposed of. In referring to the Democratic candidate for President the Doctor either intended to indulge in a little irony or meant to adopt the warfare of the radical mud-slingers. If the latter version is true, we assure our respected Greenback friend that by repeating the malicious slander respecting General Hancock's alleged treatment of his soldiers while fording a certain stream, a lie concocted and set afloat by an irresponsible scallawag for campaign purposes, by a man who was not in the army or who never saw the General in his life—we say that in retailing Republican slander of a brave soldier and an honest man he does not reflect the sentiment of his party in this section of country at least.

despair and gloom enveloped the nation the very hour the Republicans came into power, and the prophetic warnings of great and clear visioned statesmen of the past have been fulfilled: We affirm that the Republican party never made a creditable record on the finances. Its policy has ever been vacillating and trimmed to meet the wishes of a favored class. Its entire system of legislation has been in the direct interest of monopolies and against the whole people. The Republican party is a party of centralization and the object for which it labors gives the lie to its name.

On the subject of tariff the Judge was silent and did not venture an opinion. In this respect the party happens to be in a quibble. While Garfield is an avowed free trader the leading organs of the party profess to be in favor of protection tariff and the party are trying to get up protection tariff demonstrations in places where it will do the most good. Garfield not only votes with that class to destroy American industry, but he is a member of the Free Trade Club of Great Britain, and at a recent meeting of the club was endorsed in the following terms: "Mr. Garfield, the Republican nominee for the Presidency, is a honorable member of this club, and is therefore pledged to the advancement of its principles." Any amount of British gold will be sent here to aid Garfield's election. He has voted for sixteen years in the interest of British manufacturers: he voted every time to reduce the tariff on iron and thus starve on the American laborer; he voted to reduce the duty on wool ten per cent. to take the duty off foreign coal entirely but to retain the duty on tea and coffee. What do the workmen think of the man who is trying to cut down their wages and throw them out of employment, by bringing American labor on a par with British labor? Can they vote for such an anti American man for President? We think not.

MAINE IS ALL RIGHT!

The French Districts Healed From.

And Give the State to Plaid by Two Hundred Majority.

The Situation and the Duty of Democrats Everywhere.

Despite the infamy of Blaine and his enclaves to thwart the will of the people by manipulating the vote in the interior counties of Maine, General Plaid has a clear majority of 200, and will be inaugurated Governor.

Let Democrats rejoice.

Now for Victory?

The result in Maine is decisive of Democracy; disheartened and doomed republicans.

It is the guarantee of good government, because it is the guarantee of Democratic success.

Every Democrat can feel that his name, money and endeavors are devoted to a useful cause.

He can work with the assurance of victory.

There can be no doubt in the Democratic ranks.

It is now proved that the way to beat the Republicans is for every voter opposed to them to go to the polls.

Nothing save apathy can beat the Democracy.

We invite Democrats everywhere to enter upon the campaign with the assurance which well founded hope lends.

The country will be nearly good Democratic.

Hancock will be the next President. No man of sense doubts that now.

The tide is turning everywhere. Republicanism is dead.

Senator J. R. Doolittle and Hon. Chas. E. Rogers, the prominent statesmen and orators of national fame will address a grand Democratic rally at Auburn on next Saturday; also at Garrett, Saturday, October 9th, in the evening.

The disgust of the Republicans with their own calculations about the majorities in Maine reminds the New York World of the deacon who first started the hymn, "O for a thousand tongues to sing," and broke down. "Better start in at five hundred brother," was the suggestion of a sympathetic soul.

The Indianapolis Sentinel keeps standing at the head of its editorial columns an offer made by a responsible party to bet $1,000 to $400, $500 to $400 or $100 to $300 that the Democrats will carry Indiana. It has stood there a week, and there have been no takers. This tells the tale of Republican hopelessness.

THURSDAY, . . . . . SEPT. 30, 1880.

The Democratic rally at Kendallville on Monday proved a magnificent demonstration. There were between four and five thousand in attendance. No such monster meeting has been witnessed in this congressional district since the campaign opened.

Almost every building and public place in the town was patriotically decorated with flags and banners in welcome to the Democracy and in honor of their noble standard-bearers, Hancock and English.

A torchlight procession numbering nearly one thousand strong paraded the streets in the evening, about six hundred coming from Fort Wayne, and the town was brilliantly illuminated and shone in a blaze of glory.

The failure of General Sigel to meet his engagement, being unavoidably detained at Indianapolis, occasioned some disappointment but was mitigated by the splendid oration from General Cameron of Chicago, who made a two hour's eloquent and logical plea for the maintenance of Democratic principles.

The people are moving and will close up the ranks on the second Tuesday of October driving the Bourbons from the throne.

THURSDAY,.....SEPT. 30, 1863

The following extract is taken from a speech delivered by Hon. William S. Groesbeck, of Cincinnati, at Clifton Hall in that city on last Thursday evening. Referring to Garfield's connection with the infamous presidential steal, Mr. Groesbeck said:

"How unfortunate that General Garfield went to Louisiana! His mere presence was a participation in the contest, and by his mere presence, without referring to what he did, he encouraged and helped to arrange a case for his party; and, having done this, he returned to Washington and sat as one of the Judges to decide it. The majority on every vote of the Electoral Commission was just one. He was that vote, and all the responsibility of deciding a case which he helped to prepare rests upon him."

The great Democratic rally at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 18th was the grandest event of the campaign. The meeting was addressed by General Butler and Col. J. W. Forney. There were one hundred vice-presidents named, all of whom had formerly voted with the Republican party. The chairman read the following telegram from General Hancock:

New York, September 18.
General A. L. Pearson, Pittsburgh:

I have not had time to answer by mail your letter of the 11th inst. The occasion you write about will be of special interest; the composition of your meeting will indicate that the remains of sectionalism and bitterness are to be buried; that living issues are to be grappled with and that we have a growing party covering all sections and embodying harmony, freedom of opinion and a fair expression through the ballot box.

W. S. HARC (K).

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE Enquirer says the Republican papers affect hilarity because their loss in Maine, after the manipulation of the returns, is only about 15,000, instead of 17,000, as at first indicated by the returns. The laugh is a very solemn one, however.

THE Cleveland Plain Dealer of Monday makes the following proposal: "Any responsible parties who want to bet $5,000 or any part of that sum that James A. Garfield will be elected President of the United States can be accommodated by applying at the Plain Dealer office."

CINCINNATI Enquirer: Blaine blubbered to Garfield and said the Democrats had overwhelmed Maine with money—in other words, induced fifteen or twenty thousand purchasable Republicans of that State to vote the Fusion ticket. This was a serious charge against the masses of the Republicans. But it was made under desperate circumstances—just before Blaine's plan to steal the State.

A special dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer from Hicksville, of the 17th, says: "The great inter-State meeting of the Democracy of Ohio and Indiana was participated in here today by three thousand people. Gov. Hendricks and Senator Thurman made two of the ablest speeches ever heard in this section of the country. A torch-light procession one thousand strong, several brass bands and two glee clubs, furnished music and enthusiasm at the evening meeting."

THE Republicans have persistently charged that in the event of General Hancock's election rebel claims would be allowed. Mr. Hancock has lately submitted his views upon that subject in a manly and dignified letter which ought to forever silence his traducers. We quote a couple of paragraphs from the letter:

"The government can never pay a debt, or grant a pension or reward of any sort for waging war upon its own existence, nor could I be induced to approve or encourage payment of such debt, pension or reward."

Where he would exercise the veto power:

"If I were President I would veto all legislation which might come before me providing for the consideration or payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in rebellion, whether pardoned or not."

PUBLIC OPINION.

The great Democratic meeting in New York
Thursday night, Sept. 24th, was the most magnificent demonstration ever witnessed.
Eminent statesmen from all sections of the country were present and the speeches therefore of a high and intellectual character. Senator Bayard and August Belmont were the principal speakers. We herewith append a few extracts from the Enquirer's report of the meeting.

Mr. Belmont thus addressed himself to the attempt to excite business in panic against Hancock's election:

"This same game was attempted in 1876, when, after the October elections in Indiana, a leading Republican evening paper published a telegram from Washington, stating that the Treasury Department had received advice from England to the effect that the probability of Mr. Tilden's election had stopped the sale of our Federal bonds in London, and put a virtual end to the progress of the funding operations of our Government. I at once declared this a base fabrication, and denounced the reckless partisan spirit which could trifle with the nation's credit for selfish party purposes; and I stated then, what I repeat here now, that the success of the Republican or Democratic candidate would not any more effect the admission or market value of our bonds than the admission of a Conservative or Liberal Ministry in England would jeopardize the security and quotation of English consols. For making this assertion, and for proving that no such information had been received by the Treasury Department from the Syndicate which had the sale of our bonds in England in charge,
I was honored by the attacks of two distinguished Republican leaders, who tried in vain to belittle the unshaken good faith and credit of our country—the one since holding the first place in the Cabinet of the present Administration, and the other rewarded for his services in Louisiana by the mission to Russia."

Mr. Belmont then sketched John Sherman showing up his financial fallacies, and proving conclusively that the Republican party are responsible for the panic of 1873.

Belmont's assaults upon Republican extravagance as a cause of the panic was not less interesting than his statement of our prospective business condition. The balance of trade has been so large and so steadily in our favor for the last two years that we not only could and did pay by our exports for over $400,000,000 of Federal and other seccurities which we brought home from Europe, thus decreasing by over $20,000,000 the yearly interest to be sent there; but we also imported $96,000,000 gold, and are likely to import $20,000,000 more before the end of this year. In the following rigorous language the American correspondent of the Rot-Childs told the aggressive:

"I will tell you my friends what we owe to the Republicans, so far as commerce and industry are concerned. We owe to them our present navigation laws, which have driven the American merchant far more effectively from the ocean than ever did the Alabama, Florida and other rebel cruisers, so that at this moment our immense carrying trade is almost entirely done on foreign bottoms. Has the United States (Union) any more? The new, the nation's national General Hays? Has the probability of Texas fair success increased the business of our article a bit? Has the energy and spirit of our people shown at the prospect of this dreaded event? No, a thousand times no. The American voters recognize in General Hays the great and successful hero in the darkest hour of our struggle; the honest and upright citizen, without a blemish of suspicion, and the patriot whose acts and utterances place him among the foremost statesmen of our country. They know that he will surround himself with the tried champions of sound principles on peace and constitutional liberty, who will give a bold and vigorous impulse to our onward march toward greatness and prosperity, fostered by true union and fraternal love between all the sections of our common country."

Ben Hill, by one of those happy provocations which sometimes makes him of great usefulness, raised the meeting to its feet when he spoke as follows:

"There was a South of secession and slavery; that South is dead. There is a South Union and I re-join, that South is living, doing, protesting every hour. I concede that this wonderful change has been accompanied by a great revolution, and I am not one of those who think that the revolution of 1861 wrought no great results, for I think it wrought very great results—some of the greatest in history. There have been three great revolutions in our country. The first was the difference between George the III and the Americans, which ended in the independence of the Colonies; the second, that which began to the movement to amend the Articles of Confederation, which ended in the adoption of the Constitution; and the third, which began with the difference of opinion on the subject of slavery, and ended in its destruction. In my honest judgment the third revolution will take place in history with the other two."

"Long after that war began the Republican party almost unanimously affirmed in the most solemn manner that they had no purpose to exterminate slavery in the States; but the truth is that in the revolution of 1861, as in many other revolutions, there was a decision that shaped our ends, rough to them as we wanted; and we are indebted for the abolition of slavery, not to the Republican party, but to that brave jersey which directs human events contrary to human will. And, looking at the result and effect of this last revolution, I, a Southern man and a born slaveholder, lift my voice to him and say, 'And I thank thee, O God, that the Southern people have been the most benefited and the most benefited with the abolition of slavery. I have seen the time when I would have given my life to have prevented the abolition of slavery; now I would give my life a thousand times to prevent its Governor Carroll, of Maryland, happily began his speech thus:

"I come from a State which for many years has been entirely subject to Democratic rule; and yet it may somewhat surprise our Republican friends when I say that I have no apologies to offer in her behalf. In peace and in war, from the foundation of the Government to the present time, she has most faithfully borne her part, and today she stands with her credit high, her people prosperous, and the promise of a majority of from twenty to twenty-five thousand votes for the Democratic ticket on the 3d of November next."

Pinkney Whyte, of Maryland, was equally shrewd, saying that there were but 25,000 Republican votes cast for Lincoln in 1860 in Maryland, Delaware, West Virginia, Kentucky and Missouri, while the same States furnished 280,000 Union volunteers. What Republicanism could make 25,000 Republicans grow to 280,000 soldiers? He said it was to the interest of the South to keep down agitation and disunion tendencies, and pledged the Southern soldiers who fought so bravely for the secession to rally to arms against it if it showed its head anywhere again. He called attention to Tilden's open letter in October, 1876, when a candidate, in which he pledged himself to veto any slave or to pay a rebel debt, for the loss of a slave or the refunding of the cotton tax. Senator Whyte then said that, after the promulgation of this letter all over the South, Mr. Tilden secured the popular majority in every Southern State.

A German, Dr. Beckman, made this happy point:

"But, as Wellenstein said, night it must be when my star shall shine. So it will dawn upon us like a new star when the victor of Gettysburg takes the head of the State. The French Republic, after nine years of life, sends its ships to bring back its sons who fought against its existence. But here the claim between the North and the South shall be kept open by night."

Bayard, in opposition to the Tilden campaign, here avowed his joy in the electoral work of 1876:

"The South, in the great crisis of 1876-77, was solid in favor of the completion of the Electoral count under the law, and opposed to throwing the country into confusion and the hands of a military conspiracy. Was that solidly injurious to Northern security? In 1880 the South is solid in favor of the election to the Presidency of one of the most distinguished captains in command of the armed hosts that put an end to all hope of separate and independent government of the Southern States. [Loud cheering.] So this is a cause of apprehension to the North? But the South is also solid against a political party that has never ceased to hold its people up as ruffians and murderers and repudiators, that has sympathized only with those who ruled and beggared it, and refused to tolerate that manly independence which is the birth-right of American freemen, and without which they would be unworthy of respect."

An Astonisher in the Shape of a Red-Hot Acoville.

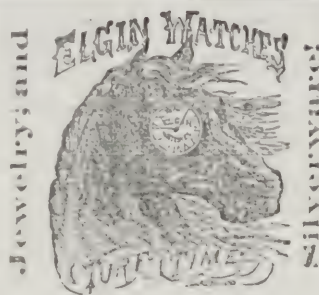

Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer.

NEW YORK, September 25.—N. E. Mead, of 24 Fourth avenue, received to-day, from Marcus E. Granger, who is in charge of Mr. Mead's Lake Side Cottage, on Schroon Lake, in the Adirondacks, a letter dated September 23d, in which is the following:

"Last night I sat here alone, writing to my brother-in-law. The children were in bed. My sister had just gone upstairs to bed. I was sitting in the kitchen. Outside it was dark. Clouds black and heavy were rolling over the sky. You could not see your hand before you. All at once it became as light as noonday. I jumped to the window and could see the barn, one hundred and sixty feet distant, as plain as though it was broad daylight. I had not time to draw a long breath when the house trembled from cellar to garret. I ran out of doors, and my sister came down stairs nearly frightened out of her senses. When we looked around we saw a red-hot substance about twenty feet from the house. I afterward threw some kerosene on it, and the fluid blazed up. Then I cast some sulphur on it, and that burned readily. You can imagine that I was astonished. I got up all right and looked for more, but I saw nothing else. In the gray of the morning we went to examine the phenomenon. There lay a clear white rock, weighing 125 pounds. It had plowed six inches into the ground. From the cracks of the ground, I should judge that it came from the north-east. Seventeen people came here to-day to see it.

Hayes and various component parts of his administration returned home Tuesday. The event excites no remark, however. It is general Republican sentiment that if Mr. Hayes had never come back the country wouldn't have noticed any difference.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer.]

The "business peril" dodge is not a new one with the Republicans. It is almost as old, in fact, as the bloody shirt, but has not been so constantly in use. In 1872, it may be well enough to remember, it was constantly urged against Mr. Greeley that his election would imperil the business interests of the country. Day after day was it declared that the business of the country would be ruined unless the Republican party were kept in power. The very same arguments now being used against the election of General Hancock were used against the election of Mr. Greeley, and the very same means were employed to frighten business men into the support of Grant. "If you want the country to be prosperous," was the cry, "keep the Republican party in power." What happened? Mr. Greeley was not elected; but Grant was, and the Republican party in full possession of all departments of the government, a panic struck the country, produced untold disaster and suffering, and a period of financial depression that only ended when the Democratic party came into power in Congress. Since this business peril discussion has been started, we propose to give the Republicans all they want of it.

—Cincinnati Enquirer: Colonel Bob Ingersoll is a versatile genius. One day he will take a whack at the Democracy, and another day he will slap some religious denomination in the face. At one meeting he will tell "why I am a Republican," and at another he will tell "why I am an Infidel." The other day, at Chicago, he had a word to say about Baptists. He declared "they as much deserved to be rooted out as the worst pest and nuisance of the earth." And then he betook himself to Indiana and made about the same remark respecting Democrats. We reckon both Baptists and Democrats will survive the shock.

—Blaine gives it up.

STARTLING

Schemes of Desperate Republicans.

The Meaning of the Conference at Mentor.

The Cincinnati Enquirer's Washington special dispatch says: There is a profound sentiment growing here that the visit of General Grant, Senator Conkling, Ex-Senator Cameron and other distinguished Grant leaders to General Garfield at Mentor has a hidden purpose which as yet has not been disclosed. Those who know these distinguished leaders know that the social relations existing between them and the Republican Presidential candidate are not of such a character as would induce any one of them to go around the corner to call upon him.

The statement is made here that old Simon Cameron has been with Garfield for three days at least, and that the Winnebago Chief named the meeting at Mentor, and that its object means a good deal more than any desire to patronize a candidate whose inevitable defeat is as clearly written upon the wall as was the warning to Bolshazar.

The theory advanced by a Republican of prominence is that the purpose is, in a certain emergency, to induce Garfield to withdraw from the ticket. The contingency is Republican defeat in Indiana. While the Republicans have no hopes that they can carry Indiana according to the present outlook, the intention is to use money without stint or scruple.

If the State can be bought, well and good for Garfield, for in that event the leaders understand the tide will turn, and that there will be left a chance to carry even a bad cause through. Should Indiana be lost, however, defeat, under the ordinary form of election, is conceded in advance by the best Republican politicians, and the next thing to do will be to make the best of a desperate game.

Without any intention to be an alarmist, or even create a sensation, I repeat, as nearly as memory can serve me, the views of a Republican of good sense, communicated to me Friday, and without any desire to believe that party ends will be subserved through any such desperate recourse. Said he:

The defeat of the Republicans in Indiana appears clearly to my mind the defeat of General Garfield in November. His candidacy has not turned out to be a strong one. There is no reason, though, why the Republicans should lose their election. The Constitution provides that each State shall appoint, in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a number of Electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress, &c. Now, every Northern State but two has a Republican Governor and Legislature. The Legislature of every other Northern State could be convened, and prescribe either that the Electors be chosen by the Legislature or by Congressional Districts. This would give the Republican candidate over two hundred Electoral votes."

"But would not this be a dangerous blow at the liberties of the people?" quoth your correspondent.

"I am giving no opinion as to that. I am only saying that the Republican party has it in its power under the form of the highest law—the Constitution—to elect its candidate. Governor Morton in a speech delivered in the United States Senate on the 17th of January, 1873, upon a pending resolution instructing the Committee on Privileges and Elections to examine and report at the next session of Congress the best and most practicable mode of electing the President and Vice-President. He said:

"The appointment of Electors is placed absolutely and wholly with the Legislatures of the several States. They may be chosen by the Legislature, or the Legislature may provide that they shall be elected by the people of the State at large, or in districts, as are Members of Congress, which was the case formerly in many States; and it is, no doubt, competent for the Legislature to authorize the Governor or the Supreme Court of the State, or any other agent of its will, to appoint these Electors. This power is conferred upon the Legislatures of the States by the Constitution of the United States, and can not be taken from them or modified by their State Constitutions, any more than can their power to elect Senators of the United States. Whatever provisions may be made by statute or by the State Constitution to choose Electors by the people, there is no doubt of the right of the Legislature to resume the power at any time, for it can neither be taken away or abdicated. In the early Presidential elections the Electors were chosen in many States by the Legislatures, and as late as 1824 in Delaware, Georgia, South Carolina, Louisiana, New York and Vermont, they were chosen by the Legislatures, and South Carolina continued this practice up to the war of the rebellion. You will thus see that there is ample power and ample time after the Indiana verdict to carry out such a plan if it be decided upon. I do not say it will be done, but it can be done, and its legality cannot be questioned."

A very clever theory is that if such a "dernier ressort" is to come, that Grant, and not Garfield, will be wanted at the helm. Garfield has not the moral courage to meet the storm which such a proceeding would bring about. A victory thus snatched from the Democrats would not be tamely acquiesced in, and a leader would be wanted with nerve, courage and decision of character. That such a scheme is in contemplation of course would not be admitted now. On the contrary, it would be ridiculed even by Republicans themselves: but the pressure of such leaders as have just visited Garfield is not believed to have been for social intercourse only. These leaders are not hypocrites, and Garfield knows they have no desire to call on him to either patronize him or ask favors. They mean business every time.

The visit, at all events, has caused a great deal of comment, and suggested numerous reflections that the Republicans are planning a way to save themselves from utter ruin. If Garfield should be withdrawn, Grant could be placed at the head of the ticket by the action of the National Republican Committee, and a majority of that Committee wish he were now leading the battle.

Facts.

Those contemplating a trip westward will certainly do well to carefully consult the time tables of the Baltimore and Ohio road. Its celebrated fast trains, its sure connections, and rates always as low as the lowest, make it beyond all controversy the best line west. Colonists are carried in first-class cars on fast trains, and every possible care is taken to insure comfort and convenience. Trains run through without change of cars to Chicago, where direct connection is made with all leading lines to the west, northwest and southwest, making but a single change of cars to Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, Minnesota, etc. No other line can offer such advantages as the Baltimore and Ohio. It costs but a very little time and trouble to learn this, and in the end may lead to the saving of much of both as well as money. Above all things do not purchase tickets before having a talk or receiving a letter from one of the B. & O. Agents. A letter addressed to W. E. Reppert, Columbus, Ohio; to J. T. Lane, Wheeling, W. Va.; to J. A. Webb, Fostoria, Ohio; to T. A. Lee, Zanesville, O., or a call upon either of these gentlemen will lend to thorough information as to all necessary details of time, connections, fares, baggage, etc., etc.

All the lies about the rebel claims, rebel pensions, rebel debt, compensation for emancipated slaves, &c., were told in Maine, and the people of Maine deposited their opinions about the falsehoods in the ballot-boxes. Maine answered, and General Hancock has answered. We don't clearly see what the Republican manipulators are to do since those lies are become flat, stale and unprofitable.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An Elephant's Revenge.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The account of the death of poor John King, the trainer of the animals in John Robinson's Circus, appeared in our dispatches a day or two since. The sad affair happened at Charlotte, North Carolina. King was superintending the unloading of the beasts, and stood along side the heavy foot-bridge which leads from the car to the ground, when Chief, the vicious elephant which has caused so much trouble, stepped upon the bridge, and, as he came along side King, struck him with his trunk, hurling him against the side of the car. Poor King had only time to call out, "Bring Mary!" meaning the big female elephant, and the animal that has acted as a sort of police officer for the show, when Chief was again on him, jamming his head up against the car crushing his skull as easily as a man crushes a pea-nut shell between his thumb and finger. And now ensued a scene which, when the motive is considered, was probably never equalled in this country, if in any other. An eye-witness related to Uncle John Robinson last night that so soon as Mary heard her beloved keeper call her name, she started on a run toward him, and arrived just as Chief was about to tramp upon all that was left of the hapless King. Then with the frenzy of a mother at the sight of her slain child, the infuriated female assailed her vicious companion. She rolled her ponderous trunk under her lower jaw, making the upper part of it form a projectile as formidable as an old Roman battering ram, and then approaching within a few yards of Chief, reared slightly on her hind legs and plunged forward, striking the vicious brute with such terrific force as to send him rolling on the ground. Chief recovered his feet and sought to flee from his enraged assailant, but Mary quickly followed up her advantage, and again and again sent him rolling over on the ground as her weight was furiously hurled against him. The punishment was kept up for several minutes, and it was only with extreme difficulty that she was induced to desist and allow the ugly "Chief" to be chained. It was thought that she would succeed in killing him, and had she been left alone she probably would. In thus avenging the death of her beloved keeper, who shall say that this elephant, uniformly gentle to all men, was governed by instinct alone?

—A man asleep at the top of a telegraph pole was a recent spectacle in Boston. He was a drunken repairer, who had grown drowsy at his work. A great crowd gathered, but nothing was done to arouse him, and he finally awoke in safety.

—While making a call at a neighbor's, a young lady of Madison, Ohio, said to a cat that came into the room, "Why, pussy, I haven't seen your babies yet; are they pretty?" The cat immediately went out, and returned with a kitten in her mouth, which she laid at the feet of her questioner.

—An impassable snow-drift was met by a party of travelers recently on the road from Jamison City to Gibsonville, California. After shoveling five hours to break a roadway for their wagon they abandoned the route, and their wagon was lowered with ropes over the perpendicular rocks into a valley below.

—While Edward Buckley and Lee Hall were watering their horses in Syracuse Creek, near Brackett, Texas, a roaring was heard, and a great volume of water was seen rushing toward them, crushing down trees and everything in front of it. They barely reached a hill, when, on looking back, a river forty feet broad was sweeping past, where only a few moments before their horses had been drinking.

—While John Eller, of Alden, Iowa, was riding horseback he saw descending from the sky a ball of fire apparently about the size of a flour-barrel. He was paralyzed with fright, and saw the globe strike the head of the animal he rode, when he became unconscious. Upon coming to his senses he found that the horse was dead, the head of the animal being scarred as if by a red-hot iron.

I do not say it of my own knowledge, but I am assured that British free trade ideas are being pushed in this land with all the might of British gold.—JIM BLANE.

ELECTION, TUESDAY, OCT.

Let every Democrat in the country go to the polls and vote a clean ticket. Do your whole duty and be in this hour that calls for manly and decisive action.

Negroes by the car load and men in unlimited quantities are being poured into Indiana and Ohio by the Republican managers for fraudulent purposes. Can honest men vote with a party that will resort to such means to carry an election?

The Republican lines are broken and the advance guard wavering and mounting. The Republican party is doomed. Democrats, improve the golden opportunity, go to the polls solid and strike a blow for the supremacy of Democratic principles and the preservation of individual liberty.

REMEMBER! A vote for Landers is a vote for our noble Hancock, the national standard-bearer of the great and glorious Democratic party. Indiana shall speak next Tuesday and will she pronounce in November. This is the decisive blow of the campaign. On to victory!

British gold is being distributed in this country without stint to corrupt the ballot-box in the interest of the Republican candidate for President. Garfield is a member of the free-trade Golden Club of London and has voted for the last sixteen years with the free-trade interest; he voted to reduce the tariff on coal and iron and thus cut down the wages of American laborers to starvation prices. A vote for Landers is a vote against Garfield, the tool of British aristocracy and a vote to protect home industry and the rights of workingmen. Then vote the Democratic ticket.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

"Cap. Iddings" dropped down upon this rural retreat last Friday. "Cap." is the Republican candidate for Joint Representative, and his mission we presume was to look after his political interests in Richland and shake hands with the boys. Learning that our old time friend was in town we called upon him at the Union hotel. After the usual greetings we concluded to get an opinion from the veteran Republican manager on the situation in this State, knowing him to be one of the shrewdest politicians in the district.

"Mr. Iddings you are no doubt pretty well informed and can give us something reliable from a Republican stand point. What is the outlook in Indiana?"

"Well, I think Porter will be elected but the balance of the ticket will be defeated. All that we confidently claim is the Governor and he will go in on the strength of his personal popularity backed by the financial record of the Republican party, upon which Porter is in perfect harmony with his party. Landers is not only personally unpopular with the business men of the Democratic party, but this fact coupled with his green-back heresies will load him down. Hancock will undoubtedly carry the State in November by a small majority."

"Do you believe the result in Indiana at the October election is decisive of the Presidential contest?"

"Not necessarily, but possibly. There have been several instances where the November election went directly contrary to the October verdict, and I do not think that the loss of this State to either party will be fatal to the one or the other; but should both Indiana and Ohio go Democratic, which is not at all probable with the latter State—then the jig is up and the battle virtually at an end."

It looks as though Republican chances for victory in Indiana were very slim when so well an informed politician as Cap. Iddings bases his entire faith upon capturing the Governor only, and turns the State over to the Democrats in November.

Mr. Iddings was accompanied by his estimable wife and we were favored with a pleasant call from both during the day.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

The Auburn Courier of last week contains the sad intelligence of the death of Mr. Robert J. Lowry, editor and proprietor of that paper, which occurred at his parental home in Fort Wayne on Monday, 27th ult. Mr. Lowry had been in ill health with a complication of diseases for some time and a fatal termination was not unexpected by his immediate friends. Our personal acquaintance with Mr. Lowry was rather limited but we had learned to esteem him as an affable gentleman. In his death the profession have lost an honored and brilliant cotemporary. We clip the following biographical sketch of the deceased from the Courier's obituary:

Robert Jason Lowry, only son of Judge Robert Lowry, was born in Goshen, Indiana, February 22, 1834. He died Monday, September 27, about twelve o'clock, after the most intense suffering from an obstruction of the bowels. He was past his 46th year. When he was quite young the family moved to Chicago where they lived but a short time, and moved to Fort Wayne where they have ever since resided, and where he was reared. It was there that he received his first lessons in the printing business, in every department of which he had gained great proficiency, and his correctness in all details was wonderful. After a two years' sojourn in the south, where he was known as a brilliant writer and a young journalist of more than ordinary promise, he returned home, and on April 1, 1859, purchased a half interest in this paper from Mr. Theodore Reed, and was associated with that gentleman as one of its editors and publishers. Mr. Reed retiring the 20th of last July, the junior partner became sole editor and proprietor, which position, with its many arduous duties, he ably and faithfully filled up to the time of his death. He loved his chosen profession, and had he been permitted to live, would without doubt, have obtained a high position in journalistic ranks.

Our Republican cotemporaries are still harping upon the County finances. They are trying to divert the attention of the people from the blackened record of their party on general principles by trumped up charges of corruption and extravagance against the Democratic Commissioners—which have been successfully met with a refutation in every instance—and thus hope to secure votes. But the people are not all fools and the bloody shirt "organs" will discover the fact on next Wednesday. DeKalb county will endorse the economical administration of her Commissioners by a rousing majority.

The Head Fight.

OCT. 15, 1880.

—A startling exposure of treachery in the Greenback organization has just been made public in a statement by one high in authority in its councils. Dyer D. Lum, Assistant Secretary of the National Greenback Labor Party created a sensation by the publication addressed to the National Chairman in which he openly avows that he has abundant proof of General Weaver's treachery. He openly charges the Greenback standard-bearer with hickering with the Republicans and using the party exclusively in their interest; that his tour through the South was made on their money, and in accordance with the terms of the bargain he is doing all that he can to injure the Democracy. The writer distinctly makes the charge that the National canvass as now conducted is manipulated in the interest of the Republican party, and General Weaver's expenses borne in a large measure from the Republican campaign fund. The Weaver "plan" is thus ventilated in the Secretary's letter:

"General Weaver's plan of the campaign was formed before his nomination. His position has been to throw the election into the House. Last May, when reasoning with him on the improbability of success in that case, he said he was confident that it could be brought about through an alliance with the Republicans, who held nineteen States in Congress. At the time I laughed at the idea of Republican sympathy; but the progress of the campaign has demonstrated that every move made by our standard-bearer has been to win the confidence of the Republican party. In case the October election should go heavily Democratic, General Weaver's friends are hopeful of inducing the Republicans to withdraw their Electoral votes in West Virginia, Missouri, Texas and Mississippi, and perhaps secure through their support enough votes to enable the election to be thrown into Congress."

Mr. Lum withdraws from the business in the following language:

"Drawn into the scheme by degrees, I am now brought to the point where, in honor to myself and to the Committee I am compelled to withdraw. Sick and disgusted with the treachery of our leaders, knowing from personal knowledge and correspondence that several of our State organizations—notably Indiana and New York—are managed in the interests of the Republican party, against whose robber legislation we organized, and the fact that the men who essay to lead our party to-day are duped and made the tools of crafty and scheming time-servers, renders my connection with the Committee, as at present managed, no longer possible."

And concludes by saying: "I have not touched upon the relations existing between General Weaver's advisers in Washington, in the Post-office and Treasury Department; nor do I desire to, unless an effort is made on their part to impeach this statement."

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—Charley Mercer is wrestling with sugar packages in the Fort Wayne Fruit House.

—Henry Long has purchased the Kendallville Standard newspaper and job establishment and will take possession November 1st. Hank has been foreman in the office for the past ten years.

—Let every Democratic voter in Richland turn out to the polls on Tuesday, October 12th. Lay aside business and devote the entire day to the cause of Democracy and your common country. The loss of a single vote may prove fatal. Freemen, rally at the polls!

—Wait until the day after election and if the Radicals should happen to capture one or two of the county offices, by approaching the editor of the Press while loafing on the streets you can see a jackass laugh and wave his ears.

—G. H. Yesbarn's new fall styles of piece goods are now being received and opened for inspection at his store in Auburn. Mr. Yesbarn is the leading merchant tailor in the county and those wanting business or dress suits should call early and make selections from the many nobby patterns in stock. See new advertisement on another page.

—A respectable delegation of our citizens attended the Democratic rally at Auburn on last Saturday and all came home well pleased with the speech of Senator Doolittle. The last rally in the county before the October election will be held at Garrett this (Saturday) evening, on which occasion the above named great orator will address the meeting. Everybody should attend.

—The Cincinnati Enquirer's New York special of the 1st says: The betting upon election results is an indication of public sentiment that is rarely incorrect. The way of betting to-day is decidedly to the advantage of the Democratic candidates. Thus, the betting men offer the odds of $100 to $70 that Hancock will be elected President, $100 to $80 that Indiana goes Democratic, and even bets that Ohio goes Democratic. The odds on New York are Democratic $100 to $80. They claim that with offering these odds they find it difficult to get bets, and that the Republican politicians and betters are shy at accepting the odds.

OCT. 15, 1880.

Now for victory!

The two great contending political armies are concentrating their forces for decisive action.

But a few days more and the American people will have declared their verdict in the ballot-box, a decision that involves the dearth of hopes of humanity.

Watchman, what of the night?

On the one hand we have arrayed a party of passion, of centralization, of caution, of practical professions, of deceit, of fraud, of crime, sympathizing exclusively with the common people. This is the Republican party that asks you to continue its power for another four year's lease of obdurate iniquity.

On the other hand stands the party opposed to class legislation, to centralization, to bribery and fraud, the worst enemy of a monied monopoly and a titled aristocracy, with a history as old as the Republic and whose proud escutcheon remains undimmed and untarnished by time, though dented and scarred in many a hard fought battle—the party of the government of the people, and with clean skirts and untarnished record asks that it be restored to power, where for upwards of sixty years ruled and the country prospered. Which party will you choose?

The farmer,
The workman,
The mechanic,
The tradesman,
Will naturally choose the latter.

We appeal to the young man who is about to take the initiatory step in the exercise of the elective franchise—the great event of his life—to carefully and seriously consider the importance of the step he is taking before he shall cast his first vote with a party that has forfeited all claim to further respect and confidence, and that should no longer be trusted with the liberties of the people. By casting your ballot with the Republican party you will have made the great mistake of a lifetime and one that you will forever regret. Adopt the motto of the immortal Dary Crockett: "Be sure you're right, then go ahead." Start in with the winning side to-day and follow the banner that heads this article to victory and a glorious future.

Vote with the time honored Democracy!

Vote for Landers and thus strike a signal blow for the success of our noble standard-bearer, Winfield Scott Hancock, who first planted the stars and stripes on the halls of the Montezumas and the bold hero of Gettysburg.

To our fellow Democrats who have lately been acting with the Greenback party through mistaken and misguided views of principle, we remark: why should you longer desert the party flag, now in its hour of triumph, for a cause that must prove as fallacious to you as the song which the sea-nymph sings on the crest of the sounding sea is to the mariner on the trackless ocean without chart or compass? You have not forgotten the past, when as a Democrat you were persecuted for opinion's sake, and that it was at the risk of your life that you dared exercise the rights of a freeman at the ballot-box. Revenge the outrage by rallying to the Democratic standard and overthrowing the Jacobins on Tuesday, October 12th.

Democrats of DeKalb and of Richland in particular, we admonish you to stand firm.

Keep your optics on the gun,

And hell will be to pay with the other fellows.

The bugles are sounding, the hosts are gathering.

COLORN FORWARD!

The Head Light.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

FRIDAY, OCT. 15, 1880.

The Enquirer of yesterday contains the following warning: There is a most desperate and audacious and outrageous Republican scheme on foot to defeat the will of the people in Indiana. Suffrage is to be corrupted and intimidated in that State as it has never been intimidated and corrupted before. Entire organizations are bought by Republicans. Laboring men are bought, not at retail, but by factories. Employers are paid to intimidate and vote their employees. Weaver, the Greenback candidate, is bought. The Republican campaign of lies, which had failed, is to end as a campaign of unparalleled corruption and fraud. Negroes have been imported by the thousand, and will be voted early in the morning, that the will of the people of the State may be defeated before the people of the State reach the ballot-boxes. Our Indiana dispatches this morning show, and have previously shown, many of the details of their plans for the wholesale villainous slaughter of the rights of suffrage.

If the men who stole the Presidency four years ago are to be permitted to take it in 1880 by these methods, the Republic is at an end.

—A canvass of every precinct in the State give the Democrats fifteen thousand majority on an honest vote. Nothing but FRAUD can overcome that majority for Landers.

—The small-fry Radical newspapers, such as the Waterloo Press, are sounding their fog-horns on the eve of election on the sectional issue and attacking the loyalty of Hon. W. Colerick. Their cussedness will be rebuked at the ballot-box.

—The Enquirer calls upon the Democrats of Indiana to scan well their tickets on the day of election. Already slips of tissue-paper licked with mucilage on the one side and labeled Albert G. Porter on the other are being circulated. They are designed for use in covering up the name of Frank Landers. Watch 'em.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

- Election Tuesday, October 12th.
- Vote early.
- Don't scratch.
- The Radicals are wriggling on the anxious-seat.
- The epizootic among the horses is prevailing to a great extent throughout the country.
- If elected Mr. Hopkins will exert his influence as a member of the Legislature in the interest of railroad corporations. Vote for Moody.
- Blair Grant has been telling pretty lies on the gallant Hancock and now his friends acknowledge that Ulysses has put his foot in it.
- Another flopper. General Sickles has seceded from the Republican ranks and declared for Hancock.
- No Democratic voter should allow any circumstance short of death to prevent him from depositing his ballot in the ballot-box next Tuesday.
- Accounts from the Georgia election place Colquitt's majority over Norwood for Governor at over fifty thousand. The regular Democratic nominees for state offices are elected by seventy thousand majority.
- There's victory in the air.
- John Bolinger is on the sick list.
- The Reds are looking for a soft place to fall.
- The fences in southern Indiana are lined with Republicans ready to stop immediately after the October election.
- Honorable Brewer all the way from the Michigan pinneries entertained a squad of nearly fifty Republican voters one evening last week.
- The crowd in attendance at the Fair, which closed yesterday, (8th) was about as large as last year, and the exhibition equally as attractive. We shall have more to say respecting the exhibition in a future issue.
- On Tuesday night twelve Federal officers and employes of Baltimore, including a trained band of repenters, left for Indiana by the St. Louis express, to act as repenters at the coming election. The Republicans are constantly importing ballot-box stuffers.
- We invite attention to the article on another page descriptive of the arrangements for the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth birthday of the city of Baltimore to take place this month, commencing on the 11th and continuing to the 19th. The Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with its customary liberality, announces that it will sell half-fare round trip tickets, so that those who would like to attend this magnificent entertainment can do so at a very small outlay of money.

FRIDAY, ..... OCT. 15, 1890.

—Democrats be on your guard, as the Republicans will flood the country with bogus tickets.

—After election the Radical ward as will flee unto the mountains of Hetsadam and knaw a file.

There never was a time in the history of the Democratic party when the prospects of victory looked brighter than to-day.

—Fellow Democrats, do not permit the Radicals to get control of the next Election. Vote for D. D. Moody, Not, the Democratic candidate for Representative.

—John C. New, proprietor of the Indianapolis Journal, gave his private opinion upon the political prospects the other day, and very piously and pointedly remarked that he "wouldn't give three hurrahs in hell for Porter's chances." Just so.

—Indiana and Ohio are two States upon which the Presidency hinges. It behooves every Democrat in De Kalb county to exercise vigilance and to work earnestly and faithfully from now until the closing of the polls on election day. Don't forget it.

—The Rebel claims issue has failed. The depression of Government bonds issue has failed.

—The business alarm issue has failed. The tariff issue has failed.

—The "County expenditure" issue has failed.

—The rebel yell issue has failed.

—The proofs of General Weaver's treachery to the Greenback party and his complicity with the Republican organization ever since his nomination for the Presidency, are as strong as proofs of holy writ. Hon. F. P. Dewees National Greenback Labor nominee for Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, on the 5th sent to Chairman Watson, of the State Committee, a letter declining the nomination, on the ground that he does not propose to be sold out to the Republicans by General Weaver. Mr. Dewees left Columbus, Ohio, on the 7th to take the stump for Hancock in Ohio. His reasons for taking the step are given in the following extracts from his letter to Chairman Watson:

"I have recently come to the conclusion that the original purposes of the organization have been perverted by General Weaver and other National leaders who by their policy are reducing their party to the position of a dispersed ally of the Republicans. Its open and vindictive enemy, and that in many instances the attempt is now being made to locally use the party as an instrument of barter to subserve personal ambition alone."

"His acts are in the direction of the election of General Garfield, the leader of the opposition to the Weaver resolutions on the Presidency."

"I don't concur in the present policy adopted by the leaders of the party, and I would not, therefore, be justified in remaining its candidate. The Democratic candidate has a large following throughout the North as well as in the South; and in common with the National Greenback Labor party is earnest in the desire to establish fraternal feeling between the several sections of a common country. Not only that—a Republic united by love as well as by law they guarantee; but I believe, also, that the business interests of the whole country will be advanced by fostering commercial relations and encouraging generous rivalry between the sections. For the purpose of dividing the Solid South, the National Greenback Labor party might justly and properly oppose the Democratic party on either issue; but, by becoming an ally of the Republican party, it disorganizes its ranks and abandons one of the great objects of its existence."

PUBLIC OPINION.

"No party," said Colonel Ingersoll in his speech at Batavia, Ohio, "has a mortgage on my manhood." Possibly, remarks an exchange, nobody wants security of that kind.

If Conkling had been given command of the Republican ship, say in June last, the craft might have been in better shape now.
But it is too late.—Cin. Enquirer.

The impression appears to be gaining ground throughout the country and is seriously discussed by the newspapers that strenuous efforts are being made in the Republican party to force Garfield to withdraw from the ticket.
What a commentary this is! 329.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In the "raquet," a new dance, you "grab your partner around the waist and glue her to your manly bosom," and the dance contains more hugging than the waltz. And yet some idiots are asking: "Is life worth living?" It is worth living all over again as long as such dances are popular.—Norristown Herald.

MEN of practical talent are now sought for in country and city. They are wanted everywhere and will be called for hereafter more than ever. Where are these men to come from, these thousands of major generals in commerce. Now is the time to train young men for business pursuits, for the great avenues to wealth, and distinction and power which wealth confers. We are preparing young men for the army at West Point, for the navy at Newport, for the learned professions at the various universities. This is well. But where one is wanted as a graduate of these institutions a thousand are wanted in the great army of business. Parents, as you value the happiness of your sons, give this matter careful consideration, a thorough business education will ever be a blessing to your children.—Tribune and Farmer.

AN AGE OF GOLD.

THE STORY OF ITS DISCOVERY IN CALIFORNIA—HARD LUCK OF THE FRONTIERS—THEIR IMMENSE FINDS—FORTY DOLLARS A DAY—NO TEMPTATION TO WORK—PERSONAL OBSERVATIONS.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

It was in the month of January, 1848, in a small stream in the rather desolate little corner of Yerba Buena, on the bay of San Francisco, that two young men from the States, having just printed on a hand-press one hundred and fifty copies of their paper, sat down upon stools, weary, and discouraged, to talk over the prospects of the country and bemoan the fate that had cast them where misery and money were so scarce. They were Americans; but the kind of their birth was no remnant to them on St. Petersburg to a peasant of the poor Valley. They longed to return, but never expected to be rich enough. The Mexican war was just ended a few months before. The treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo gave California to the United States. The California gold fields included the present State of that name, Nevada and most of Utah. It was an empire larger than France and England. Divided by a range of mountains almost as high as the Alps and longer than the Carpathians, running from north to south, eastern half was a "terra incognita" of an desert buttes and mountain spurs, rising throughout its whole extent but little settlement of whites, known as mines. Unknown savages of the lowest and type dominated in all the rest. Western half, as it then appeared, was great valley, covered with light flowers, everywhere clumps of majestic oaks, woodlands, sloping from the coast range on the south to the Sierras on the east, hills, plains, valleys alive with herds of deer, elk, antelope, and cattle and horses as wild as the forest; the charming panorama enlivened and perfected by sparkling rivers whose waters were as clear as the cloudless sky above, and their banks fringed with a dense growth of fish, maple, alder, willow, hazel, cottonwood, cypress, wild grapes, and, to the west, their confluence with the bay, saving of the darkest green, resembling at first the great corn-fields on the lowlands of the Ohio. In all this vast valley region there was no white settlement. It was known as the "Sierra de los Angeles."

SITTING OFF.

was located near the confluence of the Sacramento with the Sacramento. Far south, beyond the sources of the Sacramento River, and far from the Pacific coast, stood the "Ciudad de Los Angeles."

Wayne Willis, Alex. Stephens, James Brown, Esch Parsons, Henry Bigler, Israel Smith, William Johnson, George Evans, Charles Bennett and William Scott. The conference resulted in a rejection of the idea that it was gold. Mrs. Wimmer tested it by boiling it in strong lye. Marshall afterward tested it with nitric acid. It was gold, sure enough, and the discoverer found its like in all the surrounding gulches wherever he dug for it. The secret could not be long kept. It was known at Yerba Buena three months after its discovery, and the two printers above mentioned put this slight notice of it in their weekly paper, The Californian, on the 12th of April:

NEW GOLD MINE.—It is stated that a new gold mine has been discovered on the American Fork of the Sacramento, supposed to be it was not on the land of William A. Leitch, Esq., of this place. So much of the gold has been exhibited and is supposed to be very pure.

May opened with accounts of new discoveries. The Californian of May 3 said: "Several men, with picks and spades, gathered $20 worth in fifteen days." That was a little more than $16 per day per man. On the 11th of May the same paper said: "Many persons have already left the coast for the interior. Considerable excitement exists here. Merchants and mechanics are closing their doors. Lawyers and clerks are leaving their offices. Farmers are neglecting their crops, and whole families are forsaking their homes to go to the diggings. By May 24th gold dust had become an article of merchandise, the price being $14 to $16 per ounce. The Californian of that date had these advertisements:

GOLD! GOLD! GOLD!
Good gold for California gold by Watchmaker and Jeweler, San Francisco.
GOLD! GOLD! GOLD!
Messrs. Dickson & Hay are purchasers of Sacramento gold. A liberal price given.
BEAR HIVE.

On the 20th of May the Californian issued a statement that its further publication, for the present, would cease, because nearly all its patrons had

GO TO THE MINES.
A month later there were but five persons—women and children—left in Yerba Buena. The first rush was for Sutter's Mill, since returned Coloma, or Colima, after a tribe of persons who lived in that region. From there they scattered in all directions. A stream of them went over to Weber, that empties into the American some four or twelve miles below Coloma. Others went up or down the river. Some, more adventurous, crossed the ridge over to the high and middle forks of the American. By the close of June the discoveries had extended to all the forks of the American, Weber Creek, Hangtown Creek, the Cosumnes (known then as the Mokosume), the Mokelumne, Tuolumne, the Yuba (from uvas, or yuvas—grape), called in 1848 the Yuba, or Ajuba, and Feather River. On July 15th the editor of the Californian returned and issued the first number of his paper after its suspension. It contained a description of the mines from personal observation. He said:

The country from the Ajuba (Yuba) to the San Joaquin, a distance of about 120 miles and from the base toward the summit of the mountains, as far as snow Hill (meaning Nevada), about seventy miles, has been explored and gold found on every part. There are now probably 3,000 people including Indians, engaged in collecting gold. The amount collected by each man ranges from $10 to $350 PER DAY.

The publisher of this paper collected with the aid of a shovel, pick and a tin pan from $44 to $128 dollars per day—averaging $100. The gross amount collected may exceed $600,000, of which amount our merchants have received about $250,000, all for goods, and in eight weeks. The largest piece known to be found weighs eight pounds.

On the 14th of August the number of white miners was estimated at 4,000. Many of them were of Stephenson's Regiment and the disbanded Mormon Battalion. The Californian remarked on that day that "when a man with his pan or basket does not average

$30 to $40 PER DAY

He moves to another place." Four thousand ounces per day was the estimated production of the mines five months after the secret leaked out. In April the price of flour here was $4 per hundred. In August it had risen to $16. All other subsistence supplies rose in the same proportion. Here is a part of a letter from Sonoma to the Californian, August 14th:

I have heard from one of our citizens who has been at the placers only a few weeks, and collected $1,500, still averaging $100 a day. Another, who shut up hotel here some six weeks since, has returned with $2,200, collected with a grade, pick and Italian basket. A man and his wife and boy collected $400 in one day.

Sam Brannan laid exclusive claim to Mormon Island, in the American, about twenty-eight miles above its mouth, and levied a royalty of about 30 per cent. on all the gold taken there by the Mormons, who paid it for a while, but refused after they came to a better understanding of the rules of the mines. By September the news had spread to Oregon and the Southern coast, and on the 2d of that month the Californian notes that one hundred and twenty-five persons had arrived in town "by ship" since August 26th. In the "Dry Diggings"—near Auburn—during the month of August, one man got $16,000 out of five cart-loads of dirt. In the same diggings a good many were collecting from $800 to $1,500 a day. In the fall of 1848 John Murphy, now of San Jose, discovered Murphy's Camp Diggings in Calaveras, and

He Obtained a Situation.

[Akron (Ohio) Cor. Cleveland Leader.]

An amusing experience was told me yesterday by one of the most prominent railroad managers of the Western States, which on my promise not to divulge the names of the parties, I am permitted to give to the public. Said the manager:

A few years ago I took charge of the — railroad in Texas, which at that time was in bad condition. For several months I was kept very busy in trying to bring order out of chaos, and all my time had to be devoted to the affairs of the road. During certain hours I had given orders that I was to be disturbed under no circumstances, and my clerk had instructions to admit no one. One day during these hours the following incident occurred: I was busy at my desk when the door burst open, and a long, lank, uncouth, cadaverous-looking Texan stood before me. His home-spun pants were tucked inside his dusty cowhide boots, his rough face looked as though as it had never seen a razor, and his long, uncombed hair streamed out from under a large sombrero down on his broad, wiry shoulders. He marched straight up to my desk, and without taking off his hat, said in a gruff, quick tone:

"Is Smith in?"

I looked up in amazement and replied: "Yes, sir, that's my name."

"Well, then, cast your eye on that," said he, slapping a letter down before me.

I picked it up and read it, and found it to be a letter of introduction saying the bearer was a trustworthy man who wanted work and asking that it be given him.

As I finished the letter he again broke out,

"Well, Smith, what d'ye say? Can you give me a posish?"

I waited a moment and then said: "You appear to be quite a forward young man, and appear to want a position. Now, sir, don't you think you would have stood a better chance of getting a position if you were more polite in your manners? If you had knocked at the door, and on being invited to enter, had come in quietly, taken off your hat and asked if Mr. Smith was in, and had offered this letter, asking with a polite bow, 'Will you have the kindness to look over this letter?' If you had done so, young man, don't you think your proposition would have been more favorably received than your present action?"

The young man looked at me a second, and then turned and left. A moment after I heard a knock at the door. I said, "Come in." Again the same young man entered. Stepping softly he came to the desk, made a most elaborate bow, and said: "Have I the honor of addressing Mr. Smith, the Manager of the — and — Railroad?" I bowed and said, "Yes, sir."

He again bowed and handed me the letter, asking me if I had leisure to look over it.

I took it, and again read it, and then looked up, saying: "This is a very complimentary letter, Mr. —. What can I do for you?"

Quick as a flash came the response: "You may go to —!"

He then turned and left with a laugh.

I saw there was something in the man. I followed him and called him back and gave him a position. He did his work well, and has since been promoted, until he now occupies one of the most responsible and best-paying positions in my employ.

Some soldiers of Stephenson's regiment discovered Rich Gulch, at Mokelumne Hill That winter one miner at Murphy's realized $50,000. It was common report that John Murphy, who mined a number of Indians on wages, had collected over $1,500,000 in gold just before the close of the wet season of 1848. A Frenchman fishing in a prospect hole for frogs for his breakfast, at Mokelumne Hill, in November, 1848, discovered

A PECK OF GOLD

On the side of the excavation, which he dug out with his pocket-knife and sold for $2,150. Three sailors who had deserted took out $100,000 in five days on Weber Creek. Such strokes of good fortune turned all classes into miners, including the lawyers, doctors and preachers. The exports of gold dust in exchange for produce and merchandise amounted to $500,000 by the 25th of September. The ruling price of gold dust was $15 per ounce, though its intrinsic value was from $19 to $20. A meeting of citizens presided over by T. M. Levensworth and addressed by Samuel Brannan, passed resolutions in September not to patronize merchants who refused to take gold dust at $16 per ounce. A memorial was also sent from San Francisco to Congress in that month for a French mint here. It stated, among other things, the opinion that by July 1, 1849, $10,000,000 worth of dust at $16 per ounce would be taken out of the mines. The figures were millions to low. Real estate in San Francisco took a sudden rise. A lot on Montgomery street, near Washington, sold in July for $10,000, and was resold in November with a shanty on it for $27,000. Lots in Sacramento, or New Helvetia, also came up to fabulous prices that winter. By the month of October the rush from Oregon caused the Oregon city papers to stop publication. In December the Kanakas and Sonoreans came in swarms. A Honolulu letter, November 11th, said:

"Such another excitement as the news from the discovery of gold in California, never again. I think that more than five hundred persons will leave before January 1st, and if the news continues good the whole foreign population except missionaries will go."

The news did continue good, and they came, some missionaries included. Soon there came up from the mines complaints of outrage and lawlessness, mostly against Kanakas and other foreigners. How well they were founded, to what they led and how they were suddenly and summarily silenced, is a story that covers a very interesting part of the history of California and the progress of civilization in America.

A Curious Affection.

When a young robin about a year old was domesticated at New Meadows, Mrs. Smith. Some of the family had a robin in a nest abandoned by the parents and the rest of the brood. Of course it was fed when it was in the nest, and then it was cared for. The robin is now a domesticated bird and flies about the house and shoulders of the family. In fact, it is so tame as to sit on the table under foot; it has been known to sit on the table when the family were eating. The robin had her kittens killed, and she had a desire to adopt the robin, and was very busy being around it, lapping it, &c., and the robin, while showing no attachment to the cat, does not appear to be the least afraid of her. So the cat and the robin lie down together in unity. (Me.) Telegraph.

After Many Years.

CORVUS, IND., October 6.—A very old lady named Mrs. Coons, of Corvus, received a visit from an old man of Michigan, aged eighty years, last week. Imagine her joy when he told her that his name was Ephraim Allen, her own name, and that he had not heard of her for fifty years, and supposed long dead. He had learned by some means that his sister was living in this country and came to visit her, and thus two old people were reunited after a separation of more than half a century.

Charles Miller, pastor of a Methodist church, asked him, "I don't know what a fac' what you mean, dat a man and his wife am?" "Dat ar am Gospel troof." "Well, parson, ef you will come down dark on Abenoo L. when Brud-er P. nes an' his wife am drunk and an' one anoder, an' listen to de Gospel, wif be willin' to wear dey n or fifteen."

Philadelphia is likely to have in the course of a month or two a new corporation by the introduction of 1,000 horse coaches of light and novel construction owned by one company, each carrying eight persons, and running to all parts of the city at a charge of six tickets for a quarter of a dollar, and inside more than four cents for one mile. In commenting upon the enterprise the Philadelphia North American remarks that it was originated from a fixed determination on the part of men of enlarged public spirit to get off the trammels that have so long fettered the energies and cramped the efforts of the community for better accommodations and lower fares. It says: "A single line of vehicles, embracing less than one hundred coaches, would have answered no great public purpose. But one thousand coaches, owned by one company, running all over the city, and selling six tickets for a quarter, will obviously strike the public fancy as a genuine, first class innovation." The first route announced under the new system will cover the whole length of Board street, and the same journal states that, "If this be intended as a trunk line, with branches diverging in all directions, the result may be the sudden transformation of the spacious thoroughfare from what it now is to that grand metropolitan avenue of which Philadelphia has so often and vainly dreamed."

John Hamilton's wife obtained a divorce from him at Rock Island, Ill., and went back to her parents, while he migrated to Sacramento. They soon began a correspondence, and before a year was over she went to Sacramento, where they were remarried. Mrs. Hamilton was not long in getting jealous, and with good reason; but she mother rival, and for a while the connubial sky was clear. The wounded woman disappeared, and the husband was not punished for the assault. Mrs. Hamilton gave cause for jealousy. She was once informed that he could not possibly be returned. She set down to the fact that she knew his work, and in a moment's time, drew a pistol with the scabbard hand, pinned it close to his head, and fired, killing him instantly.

Come, Let Us Conquer!

For this edition a late number of the Cincinnati Enquirer has the following excellent thoughts relating to the October discomfiture of Democrats to rally once more and conquer which we adopt as expressing our own views:

Democrats! Have you less spirit and courage than have Republicans? Have you not things to fight for? Is the great Democratic party, with three millions of North-Americans, with a popular majority of more than a million votes in the United States, a party to which a willing, happy, prosperous people are attached? Is this Government, after twenty years, almost without interruption, the party of the people, of civil liberties, of this ancient party of the Republic, a stupendous weakness, a huge cowardice and idiotic organization? Will it permit the men who stole the Presidency four years ago after election to steal it away this time before or, during?

Republicans met a defeat in Maine that was great and significant as that the Democrats sustained in October. The Republicans had more occasion for discouragement in Maine than have Democrats after Indiana. The Republicans rallied and robbed a State. Two skirmishes have fought. The Democratic defeat in one State was as emphatic as the Republican victory in the other. The great battle was fought. Shall Democrats be quailed by a defeat while the final battle is just ahead? The great victory is within our grasp. We take it for granted we deserve it. We have proved since the October election that we have been true in which to follow the people. Let Democrats be discouraged. What has been lost? We have never had Ohio in loss. The Democratic party has always carried Ohio in every election and the majority there year is not essentially increased with all the frauds. It is only what it was last year and only slightly larger than it was four years ago. We have nothing to whine about in Ohio, save the loss of that we never had.

We lost Indiana. How? By the importation of negroes; by intimidation; by bribery; by falsehoods; by repeaters; by frauds the most outrageous in our history. We owe only the one friend by which these same repeaters of the ballot-box elected Hayes and Nicholls by the same votes four years ago. These facts are notorious; and do Democrats sit down and say "We can't help it?" The Democratic vote was not brought out in Indiana. Why we need not now discuss. The Republicans cast an illegal vote of unprecedented size in that State. The facts are startling. We have gone partially over the list of the counties and their votes, and we find that in thirteen Republican counties the beautiful Republican gain is shown, four thousand one hundred and ninety-six more votes were cast than the counties are entitled to by the census reports! In Delaware County this lawless excess was 435; in Gibson County, 829, a significant number; in Marion, 689; in Montgomery, 638! This is the kind of victory in which Republicans exult. Is it a victory at which Democrats spirited enough to defend their own should be discouraged? Democrats surrendered a Presidency which belonged to them four years ago for the sake of peace. How long, O Lord, how long!

The States of New York and New Jersey are movelessly Democratic. Even if the Republicans should double their Indiana gains in those States they could still carry neither of them. Why should Indiana be abandoned to the Republicans? Let the Englishman have been honest and to say that October was not his month. But his month is at hand. He should take a lesson from the Englishman that his name and efforts will carry his own State when he himself is to be elected for. And Hancock is stronger in Indiana, as in most of the States, than the State ticket. The Democrats deserve to win. The Democratic party represents the permanent pacification of the country, which all business men and all sobering men desire; civil liberty; the punishment of those who raped the Presidency and trod suffrage under foot four years ago; the defense of labor, whose historic friend it is; and the salvation of the Republic from centralization and Empire. These are real issues. What are some of the fatal issues? Lies about Rebel Claims and all manner of sectionalism; lies about Government bonds, told by those who own none; lies about business, when pacification is the chief desire of business; lies about tariff, when an enormous tariff is absolutely demanded for revenue. And while Garfield is a member of the English Cobden Club. The lie about the Common Schools has not yet been introduced in this canvass, but it may come. On these and other falsehoods the Republican managers ask for votes.

Democrats, and men of Ohio and of the Union! The Democracy in this contest are fighting for the existence of the Republic. Garfield is no longer the candidate. Conkling, Camet and Logan went to Mentor, Republicans alleged at Chicago that they meant Empire. The Republican press of Ohio told Ohio's people that their success was the end of the Republic. Garfield, every man knows, has surrendered to them. The Republican managers have sold themselves to Empire to win this fight, deceive and destroy the liberties of the people. Conkling leads the Imperial hosts to-day; and those who abused him at and before Chicago are cringing slaves at his feet this very moment. It was not till the capitulation of Garfield and his entire command had been complete that they consented to come to Ohio to save Garfield's own State. As the hosts of swindled people are marched to Empire, this trio commands. Garfield and his sentimental gang are whining in the ranks. These are not idle tales. He who runs may read. Garfield in 1880 means Imperialism in 1880 and the Empire in 1884. Are the people prepared for this? If the plan succeeds no child now unborn will hear the songs of a living American Republic in the earliest words of childhood. The Republic will be no more.

A STIRRING ADDRESS

FROM THE DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE—ONCE MORE—UNTO THE BREACH.

The National Democratic Executive Committee have issued the following:

TO THE DEMOCRATIC AND CONSERVATIVE VOTERS OF THE COUNTRY:

The election of President and Vice President is now before you. State and local dissections are eliminated from the issues of the day. The magnitude of a victory or defeat can only be estimated by the forces and means employed in securing it.

By fraud and corruption the people of the country were defeated in their purpose in 1876, and the rightfully elected President was kept from office.

With the combined capacity of the Republican party, aided by repeated assessments upon the army of office holders; with the power of the Federal Government represented by United States marshals at the polls; with intimidations fraud and a resort to every corrupt appliance known to Republican methods, concentrated in two States, our adversaries have succeeded in procuring the return of their local candidates.

Can it be possible that in every State throughout this broad land the same methods can be brought to bear that were used by the Republican managers in Indiana and Ohio? Can the great States of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, California, Colorado, Nevada and New Hampshire be bought, intimidated and defrauded? Even without the vote of Indiana, which we believe will be redeemed in November, with New York and New Jersey and the States that are conceded to us, including Maine, the election of our candidates is assured.

The Republican party have put in nomination for President and Vice President two men who, by the admission of their own party and press, are unworthy of your confidence and your suffrages. It is impossible that fifty millions of intelligent and patriotic people will consent to place themselves upon the humiliating level thus prepared for them by the Republican managers.

Fellow citizens, the first day's repulse at Gettysburg ended on the third with Hancock in the front in a glorious victory. That victory secured us our Union. The question is not now the preservation of the Union, but of constitutional government. Hancock is now, as then, in the front. The repulse is now, as then, the omens of a victory which will secure to coming generations the inestimable blessings of civil liberty.

By order of the National Democratic Committee.

WM. H. BARNES, Chairman.

The Head Light.

BY J. C. LOVELAND.

SATURDAY, OCT. 30, 1880.

—Now for a final whack at the enemy. It is folly to waste time in a discussion of the causes that brought disaster and defeat upon the Democracy lately. The proper course to take now is to go to work and recover the lost ground. It can be done. Republican colonization, fraud, bribery and intimidation—as was the case at the last election—will not chafe into the contest to forcibly next Tuesday. The October struggle was waged upon purely local issues. Those issues have been disposed of. The November contest is purely national in its character. There is no reason why Indiana should not be recovered. There are Democratic votes enough in the State to accomplish the object if brought out. The question of the life or death of the Republic is involved in the approaching election. If the Democracy shall succeed it will be preserved. If it fail the Republic will go down. For the election of Garfield means Emancipation. Will Democrats stand idly by and let the Presidency stolen before the election, without making an effort to recover it? We trust not. Forward, every man to his post, and let him count on a communique to see that his neighbor attends the polls on the morning of election. There remains but a few more days in which to work for a grand outcome. Do not falter at the first repulse, for such is not Democracy or worthy the proud name of Democrat. Be active, be vigilant, and success will yet perch upon our glorious banner.

—Garfield has authorized his henchmen to pronounce the Chinese letter a forgery. But the janus-faced James dare not come out openly and deny that he is not the daddy of it.

—The Presidential fight is waxing warm in the East, with odds in favor of the Democracy. New York and Jersey are as certain to go for Hancock as that the election will take place on next Tuesday.

—The Chinese letter business has cooked Garfield's goose in the Pacific States. California, Nevada and Oregon, will cast their electoral vote for Hancock and English. Good bye, 329 DeCoyler Jim!

—Following are the official figures of the State vote for Governor at the October election in this State, as received by the Secretary of State: Porter, Republican, 230,291; Landers, Democrat, 222,740; Gregg, National, 14,863; plurality for Porter, 7,551.

—Following is the record of James A. Garfield on the Chinese question:

On the bill to restrict Chinese immigration Garfield's record is as follows: On the 29th of January, 1870, the bill passed the House by 166 yeas to 79 nays. General Garfield, dodging the vote. The bill went to the Senate, where it was amended and passed finally by 39 yeas to 27 nays. When the amended bill was returned to the House Mr. White moved to lay the bill and amendments on the table, which would kill the bill if successful, and General Garfield voted for the motion. The motion failed by 95 yeas to 331 nays, and the bill passed finally on the 22d of February. The President vetoed the bill on the 11th of March, and on the question whether the bill should pass over the veto the yeas were 110 and the nays 96, and General Garfield voted against the passage of the bill.

Democratic National Nominations.

FOR PRESIDENT:

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK

Of Pennsylvania.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT:

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH,

Of Indiana.

—General Garfield has a record "in black and white" on the Chinese question, one of the vital questions now before the people. He cannot dodge. As late as the 2d of January of this year he wrote a letter (printed elsewhere in this paper) to H. L. Morey, of the Employers' Union, at Lynn, Massachusetts. Here is what he says:

"Individuals or Companies have the right to buy labor where they can get it the cheapest. We have a treaty with the Chinese Government which should be religiously kept until its provisions are abrogated by the action of the Federal Government, and I am not prepared to say that it should be abrogated until our great manufacturing interests are concerned in the matter of labor."

The working people of this country will be moved by General Garfield's anxiety to have the manufactories of this country well stocked with Chinese labor before the bars are put up. He appears to regard the Coolies as the means of conserving manufacturing interests.

Chat, Here and Elsewhere.

—Beautiful Indian Summer in the "melancholy days" has made its advent, and the season is not the "saddest of the year," despite the assertion of the poet to the contrary notwithstanding.

—The Democracy of DeKalb made a gallant fight on the 12th; and by a little effort the majority can be increased on next Tuesday. With the exception of Sheriff and Commissioner the county ticket was successful. Following are the majorities on State, Congressional, Senatorial and County officers: Shanklin, 127; Colerick, 178; Carpenter, 280; Shutt, 343; Adams, 180; Moody, 116; Baxter, 91; Miller, 141; Boland, 322.

—Dan Chilcoat attacked Oliver Rosenberry with an axe on the 15th and attempted to manufacture bologna sausage out of him. It is well known here that there has existed a long standing feud between the two families, who unfortunately occupy the same building, although the Rosenberrys are considered peaceably disposed people by residents in that neighborhood. Some time during the day above mentioned, Rosenberry and Chilcoat got into a dispute about a clothes-line, which the former was trying to put up in the yard, and to which the latter objected. After a war of words Rosenberry turned to go away when Chilcoat struck him unawares with an axe hitting him on the thigh and inflicting a slight wound. Rosenberry turned upon his assailant, knocked him down and got possession of the axe before he could repeat the blow. Chilcoat was arrested and brought before Esquire Finch charged with assault with intent to kill. An investigation resulted in conviction; and the prisoner was placed under bonds of $500, and in default of bail was jailed. He was afterwards bailed out by a brother-in-law and is now at liberty awaiting trial at the next term of Court. In the testimony before the Court Chilcoat admitted that he intended to kill Rosenberry, and regretted that he had not done so. With these facts in possession of the Court it is a matter of surprise that so light a bond as $500 was demanded, in view of the magnitude of the crime. In the forcible language of a frontier attorney on a certain occasion, it is "a hell of a bond."

Chat, Here and Elsewhere

—Ladies' fine Shoes are now arriving at C. Reynolds the merchant (Garrett).

Our water-works are progressing finely. Garrett like other towns of any consequence quency; suffered the 329 infliction.

The election passed off quietly, although both parties were in earnest and brought out every voter.

—Reyher's Overcoats the admired of all admirers. No custom work surpasses them; no competition approaches them. See the elegant styles.

The B. & O. railroad employees are making all the time possible, and some draw very fat salaries on pay-day.

—A large assortment of the finer grades of and Felt Mats in the late Fall styles, at Rayher Garrett, Indiana.

—The camp-fires are brightly burning throughout our sister State of Ohio, and the grand army of Hancock legions are marshaling for the final struggle. New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, will assuredly cast their electoral vote for the Democracy and possibly the Pacific States. Let Indiana wheel into line.

—Reub. Lantz ran into a flock of turkeys east of Hamler on Tuesday last, and secured one which was killed and thrown up on the engine.

—Men's and Boy's fine Boots and Shoes, a full and varied stock to select from, just being opened by Roger's popular Dry Goods store, Garfield.

T. A. Siles, while returning from burg on election day with a load of lumber and shingles, was thrown from the wagon with several bundles of shingles, and had leg broken.

Our friend W. T. Hopkins has a daughter, born 18th inst., which is better than going to the legislature. John is happy in the same way, while J. W. and George Hammer each rejoice of a new son.

ment. "In thirteen counties of the State where Republican gains are claimed, there are four thousand five hundred and thirty more votes than the counties are entitled to by the census reports. The population of those counties have increased rapidly since the election."

—Ladies, take notice. We have just received the world of Dress Trimmings and Silk Fringes; the most elegant and prices way down.

—In our Cloak Department we have just brought a large and complete line of Ladies' Cloaks and made most elegantly trimmed and dressed.
Also Ladies' Muffs and Children's Kid Boots.
